House Dems Gear Up To Punish G.O.P. On Tax Reform

While residents scurry to finish their taxes before next week's deadline, it will not be the last they hear of the issue this year, as the massive tax changes the Republican-led Legislature approved last year begin to take effect and become a key issue in the fall election.

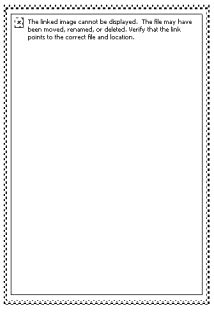
Taxes will now increase for many lower- and middle-income residents who often benefited from the multitude of tax credits and deductions they could claim as they filled out their tax forms.

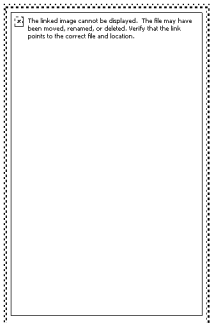
But much of the focus so far has been on the pension tax. Although the decision to apply the income tax exempts anyone born before 1946, there are still many born after that year collecting their pensions who suddenly find themselves paying much more in withholding than in the past, if they even had to withholding anything at all.

Already used heavily as a weapon against the GOP in the successful campaign to recall then-Rep. Paul Scott (R-Grand Blanc), Republicans can be assured to face similar attacks for passing the tax increase throughout the campaign this summer and fall.

In the special election that followed in February, the pension tax was again a major issue in special elections in the 29th District and 51st District. In the 29th, { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=268401&locid=1" } (D-Auburn Hills) ran on repealing the pension tax and won.

And the Republicans' choice to replace Mr. Scott, { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=305301&locid=1" } (R-Linden), is also on board with nixing the tax following his victory.





{ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=155901&locid=1" } will encourage Democrats to run this fall on repealing the pension tax. House Speaker Jase Bolger's spokesperson said Republicans are prepared to defend their votes.

"In all races around the state, you're going to see the tax changes play into the campaign," said { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=155901&locid=1" } (D-East Lansing), the House Democratic campaign chair.

The stakes are big. Republicans control the House 63-47, and the only way for Democrats to derail the tsunami of Republican legislation { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=245801&locid=1" } is signing into law is to win the nine seats to gain control, or at least the eight seats to assure shared power.

While the focus has been on the pension tax, Mr. Meadows said the unfairness is really the elimination of the exemptions.

"There will be a lot more than just senior citizens realizing they have less money," he said.

Next year at this time, residents will be unable to claim the following credits: The $600 child deduction, the $3,700 personal exemption, and a $2,300 exemption for seniors and taxpayers whose unemployment benefits are 50 percent or more of their adjusted gross income.

Also gone are credits for those who pay a city income tax and who donate to public universities, public libraries, museums, public broadcasting stations, community foundations, homeless shelters, food banks and food kitchens.

And gone are credits for adoptions, stillbirths, expenditures on historic preservation, college tuition and fees (non-refundable), vehicle donations to charitable organizations, and an individual or family development account.

A number of subtractions were also eliminated, including for political contributions, bingo, raffle or charity game prizes, income from gas and oil royalty interest and several others.

The changes also drastically scaled back the Homestead Property Tax Credit and decreased the Earned Income Tax Credit.

Republicans say they are ready for the attacks.

Ari Adler, spokesperson for House { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=226901&locid=1" } (R-Marshall), said the key is to look at the reform agenda the Republicans have pushed from the beginning, which has been to make the state a better place to find a job by making it a more attractive place to do business.

"The challenge for voters will be to see through the politics and see the reality that Michigan is doing better now than it was when the Republicans were given control of the House," Mr. Adler said.

Mr. Bolger has always been clear about asking voters to hold Republicans accountable, Mr. Adler said.

Mr. Adler said during this legislative session, the unemployment rate has dropped, a seemingly never ending $1.5 billion budget deficit was eliminated and turned into a surplus, and more than 100,000 private sector jobs have been created.

"We have accomplished a tremendous amount, and we're not done yet," he said.

After the House eliminated so many of the credits that voters enjoyed and cut taxes on businesses, Mr. Adler said this year Republicans will look at what can be done to help individuals.

He said the other side will likely look even at that which would help people as either pandering before the election or as too little too late after first focusing on businesses.

"Anything you say can and will be used against you by a Democrat," Mr. Adler said.

Mr. Adler said members have not heard many people that upset over changes to the credits being eliminated, as most of their attention has been on the pension tax.

"That's because the Democrats have decided to make political hay with that," he said.

Mr. Meadows said it will be an issue because seniors on fixed incomes are now being forced to pay taxes they weren't before, and it is having a real impact.

"You're in a situation where you don't have an opportunity to make that up," Mr. Meadows said.

Mr. Meadows said he would advise all Democratic members and candidates in open seats to run on repealing the pension tax.

A number of freshman Republican members in competitive seats this fall did not return messages seeking comment for this story.

Sixteen Republicans who won what had been Democratic seats in 2010 voted for the tax changes: { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=283301&locid=1" } of Austin, { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=291501&locid=1" } of Pellston, { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=219701&locid=1" } of Onekama, { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=266001&locid=1" } of Plymouth Township, { HYPERLINK

"http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=219601&locid=1" } of White River Township, { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=292401&locid=1" } of Atlantic Mine, { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=276301&locid=1" } of Clayton, { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=292001&locid=1" } of Vulcan, { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=64701&locid=1" } of Brown City, { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=275701&locid=1" } of York Township, { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=273801&locid=1" } of Scio Township, { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=228001&locid=1" } of Presque Isle, { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=277401&locid=1" } of Jackson, { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=86701&locid=1" } of Lake City, { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=277701&locid=1" } of Clarklake and { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=276201&locid=1" } of Ida.

Of that group, probably Ms. Hughes, Mr. Huuki, Ms. Jenkins, Mr. McBroom, Mr. Ouimet and Mr. Zorn will face the fiercest challenges from Democrats in the fall. Mr. Olson's district radically changed in redistricting to a solidly Democratic seat, and he is in serious danger of not winning re-election regardless of how he voted on the tax legislation.

Mr. Poleski, an accountant who found time to do some tax preparation work this year for his clients, said he hasn't heard much angst about the credits disappearing.

"You may hear more about that next year," he said.

That doesn't usually draw people's attention until they get their taxes done and see their return is less than it has been and ask why, he said.

The most vocal opposition to the tax changes he has heard has come from those under 60 who are state and federal retirees who are now paying taxes and had retired with the understanding they wouldn't pay anything.

"That's certainly understandable they would be upset by that," Mr. Poleski said. "For the most part people understand there is an equity that needed to be achieved."

He said he has also heard many others say that they never understood why they didn't pay taxes on that income before and were willing to pay their share.

"Those are not expressed as loudly, but those opinions are also there," he said.

The tax changes also return the state's tax code to the mantra of fair, simple and efficient, he said.

Some business owners under the old system were paying taxes twice, and some people were not paying taxes at all, he said.

"I challenge anyone to tell me how that is equitable," he said.

While he admits some people are paying less and some people are paying more, "on the whole we reduced taxes."

After 46 Years, Michigan Motorcyclists Can Ditch Their Helmets

Motorcyclists finally prevailed Friday in their long quest to repeal Michigan's law requiring them to wear helmets while riding as { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=245801&locid=1" } signed the legislation despite previously saying he wanted the issue to be part of overall insurance reform.

Mr. Snyder's decision on { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011SB29101" } (PA 98) was much anticipated. It was one of the few situations where the Legislature sent a bill to his desk where there was some doubt about what he would do. It elated motorcyclists, but insurers and health care officials voiced deep disappointment.

"While many motorcyclists will continue to wear helmets, those who choose not to deserve the latitude to make their own informed judgments as long as they meet the requirements of this new law," Mr. Snyder said in a statement. "There is no substitute for proper training, education and awareness when it comes to operating any motor vehicle. We must continue working together to keep our roads safe by making sure that everyone who gets behind the wheel of a car or on a motorcycle has the proper skills. Traffic safety is a responsibility shared by all motorists."

repeal drew grumbling from the insurance industry.

Unlike many of his other bill signings, both on high- and low-profile legislation, Mr. Snyder announced his action via a news release, not a signing ceremony. Mr. Snyder signed the bill Thursday afternoon, but it was not filed with the Office of the Great Seal until Friday morning.

Initially, Mr. Snyder studiously avoided saying what he thought about Michigan's 46-year-old mandatory helmet law for motorcyclists, saying only that he would review it if and when it came to his desk.

In June, when Mr. Snyder was asked about his position on the issue, he said helmets "can save lives." He was asked about whether he would want one of his children to ride a motorcycle without a helmet and he quipped that his wife, Sue Snyder, would not even let him ride one.

Later that month, Mr. Snyder said of the issue: "I would not want to take it as an isolated issue. I think it should be part of a broader discussion."

But the broader discussion on setting caps on how much coverage auto insurers have to provide for catastrophic injuries has come to a halt in the House. { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011HB493601" } is well short of the votes needed to pass the full House, so eventually legislators got tired of the helmet bill being in a holding pattern and moved it to Mr. Snyder's desk.

In 1966, the federal government required states to mandate motorcyclists wear helmets or risk losing funding. Michigan passed a helmet requirement that year, repealed it a year later and then reinstated it in 1968. On the day the bill received final passage, it was a nonstory in that day's edition of Gongwer News Service. The big story that day was an address by then-Vice President Hubert Humphrey to a joint session of the Legislature that came shortly after he announced his presidential campaign.

In 1976, the federal government ended its mandate on the states, and that's when motorcyclists in Michigan began urging the repeal of Michigan's law, PA 141 of 1968. Bikers became an annual fixture in the Capitol, lobbying for their cause, but they failed for years. Either one or both houses of the Legislature would refuse to act on the issue.

But in the last 10 years, they succeeded twice in getting bills through the Legislature only to see then-Governor Jennifer Granholm veto them.

"We were pretty confident it was going to happen - although the governor, he's got the best poker face of anyone I've ever seen," said Jim Rhoades, legislative director for American Bikers Aiming Toward Education of Michigan. "They looked at it objectively and said, 'You know what, maybe these clowns are right.'"

Indeed, while Mr. Snyder never stated his position publicly, Senate { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=55701&locid=1" } (R-Monroe) said his conversations with Mr. Snyder indicated to him the governor would sign it.

As Mr. Rhoades drove home from work, he lamented that he had his van, not his motorcycle. But the van had an ABATE sticker on the back and as he drove alongside motorcyclists - riding helmetless - they waved and he honked back.

"That was pretty cool," he said.

One member of ABATE told Mr. Rhoades an Ingham County sheriff pulled him over Friday morning for riding without a helmet. The bill was filed at 9 a.m. with immediate effect, so riders could go helmet-free from that moment.

Mr. Rhoades said he told the sheriff's deputy, "I suppose you haven't heard the news." The officer let him go without a ticket.

If there was jubilation among motorcyclists, there was considerable upset among entities that usually align with Mr. Snyder: insurers.

"It is disappointing that a law that saved lives and reduced injuries in the Great Lake States has been repealed," said Pete Kuhnmuench, executive director of the Insurance Institute of Michigan, said in a statement. "The consequences of a person's decision not to wear a helmet is borne by all of society through higher insurance premiums, lost productivity and increased health care costs."

Mr. Kuhnmuench said motorcyclist deaths rose by 80 percent in Florida after that state repealed its law although Mr. Rhoades said the numbers only rose because the number of registered motorcyclists rose by 110 percent.

To ride without a helmet, the motorcyclist must be 21, carry a $20,000 health insurance rider and have at least two years of riding experience or undergo special safety training.

AAA Michigan also denounced the decision, saying the new law "is poor public policy and will increase motorcycle fatalities and injuries." A statement from the insurer said it makes action on overall insurance reform that much more critical, noting motorcyclists represent 1.9 percent of the assessments paid into the Michigan Catastrophic Claims Association, but account for 5 percent of all money paid out and 7 percent of all claims reported.

Health care advocates also heaped criticism on Mr. Snyder.

"The argument of freedom-of-choice mixed in with the allure of increased tourism dollars has obviously won the day," said Michael Dabbs, president of the Brain Injury Association of Michigan, in a statement. "Because of this newly found 'freedom' for some motorcycle riders, Michigan residents will now bear the cost through increased deaths, injuries and Medicaid expenses. As for the Brain Injury Association of Michigan and the nearly 100,000 residents across the state currently living with disabilities as a result of a traumatic brain injury, we will reluctantly prepare to welcome even more brain injury survivors to an already-growing population over the coming months."

Snyder spokesperson Ken Silfven said both sides had considerable data, but ultimately one major factor was the data from other states that allow motorcyclists to ride without a helmet. The administration, in its statement, noted that "Michigan joins the Great Lakes states of Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Wisconsin, Minnesota and Pennsylvania" that have repealed or amended their helmet laws.

"From what we've seen, looking at the experience of other states, there doesn't seem to be much in the way of difference between states that have choice and those that don't," Mr. Silfven said. "The age, training and insurance requirements are reasonable. When you consider that the majority of states offer various forms of choice for riders, it's not unreasonable for us to allow mature, experienced motorcyclists to have that option."

Asked about what seemed like Mr. Snyder's lack of enthusiasm for the bill, Mr. Silfven said the governor is "laser-focused" on job creation.

"But we respect that other issues will come to the forefront on occasion," he said. "We appreciate the fact that this is a partnership. We have 148 legislative partners."

Supreme Court Keeps Welfare Limits Case At Court Of Appeals

The Supreme Court declined late Friday to bypass the Court of Appeals and directly hear the state's appeal of a ruling putting certain recipients back on its welfare rolls, and it declined to stay that ruling until the Court of Appeals had an opportunity to rule.

The Department of Human Services (Smith v. Department of Human Services Director, SC docket No. 144913) had asked the high court to bypass the Court of Appeals and rule on the Genesee Circuit Court decision prohibiting the state from ending certain cash assistance cases after 60 months.

While the high court rejected the bypass and stay requests, it did order the Court of Appeals to act quickly in its review of the case.

The Court of Appeals (COA docket No. 309447) had, in a brief order issued Tuesday, rejected the state's request to stay the circuit court order pending appeal.

{ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=108701&locid=1" } would have granted the stay, which would have allowed the state to end any welfare cases that hit the time limit. None of the plaintiffs in the case had reached the time limit.

{ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=114801&locid=1" } said the high court should have either taken the case or granted the stay, given the cost of returning cases to the welfare rolls or keeping them on after the 60-month cutoff.

"As a result of the Court's failure to take either of these actions, this case is not afforded the most expeditious and final review possible, and the state will incur significant costs in the interim period," Mr. Markman said. "The need for such expedited review is underscored in this case by the financial implications for the state, as the injunction now in place will cost the state an estimated $7 million per month, in addition to the transitional costs that defendant asserts will be incurred as the result of having to comply with the injunction."

{ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=114701&locid=1" }, concurring with the rest of the court in rejecting the bypass and stay requests, said there was no reason to deny the Court of Appeals its say in the case.

"The grant of a stay, which my colleague also advocates, would not necessarily save the state any costs at all," Ms. Kelly said. "It would only be if the Court of Appeals were to reverse the decision of the trial court that costs might be unnecessarily incurred."

And she indicated she did not think the lower court would overturn the ruling. "And, of course, I have considered how likely that result is when deciding not to grant a stay," she said.

Hoekstra Fundraising Falls In First Quarter

Republican senatorial candidate Peter Hoekstra raised at least $1 million each of the first two quarters since declaring his candidacy, but that number fell in the first quarter of 2012 to $700,000.

Candidates for federal office must file reports on their fundraising and spending activity by 11:59 p.m. Sunday, and some of the most closely watched in the nation will be for Mr. Hoekstra and the incumbent he hopes to challenge, { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=150701&locid=1" } (D-Lansing). In February, Mr. Hoekstra aired a hugely controversial advertisement during the Super Bowl attacking Ms. Stabenow saying her policies helped China to the detriment of the United States that was widely seen as insulting to people of Asian descent.

Both Mr. Hoekstra and Ms. Stabenow sought to raise money for their campaigns off the ad. Ms. Stabenow saw her fundraising rise to $1.5 million the first quarter, which her campaign said was her best quarter ever.

Mr. Hoekstra, in a Friday posting on his Facebook page, did not say what his cash on hand is, but said it increased and that his campaign is "on path to defeating Debbie Stabenow." Mr. Hoekstra's campaign said it had the most individual donors of any of the three quarters since he became a candidate.

One of Mr. Hoekstra's top rivals for the GOP nomination, Clark Durant, previously announced he had raised $500,000. That also was down from the previous quarter. The other notable challenger to Mr. Hoekstra in the Republican primary, Gary Glenn, has not released his fundraising numbers.

Senate Will Turn Focus to Budget Next Week

The budget will be the top priority when the Senate returns to session Tuesday after its two-week spring break. But the introduction of personal property tax reform, as well as the ongoing Michigan Public School Employee Retirement System reform, will also demand the attention of senators, Senate officials said.

{ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=84601&locid=1" } (R-Saginaw Township), chair of the Senate Appropriations Committee, said his goal is to move the 2012-13 fiscal year budget bills from the full Appropriations Committee to the Senate floor by the end of the week with full Senate passage targeted for the following week.

The Appropriations Committee has scheduled meetings for Wednesday, Thursday and Friday to address 15 different budgets.

But Mr. Kahn cautioned the process was just beginning and expects a clearer vision of the budgets will surface after the state's next revenue estimating conference in May.

"As compared to last year, the differences in vision between the House and the Senate and the governor are larger," he said. "So it may be more time consuming in trying to get to an agreed upon version of these budgets. Our goal remains to have them done by the first of June, but the amount of work before us is still a fair amount yet."

Mr. Kahn said he expected some amendments to the budget bills, both in funding and in boilerplate.

The Senate will also be introducing legislation regarding the administration's personal property tax proposal, which looks at cutting $500 million from the tax over an extended phase-out period for larger employers.

Amber McCann, spokeswoman for Senate { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=55701&locid=1" } (R-Monroe) said the basic feeling among Senate Republicans is that the tax is something that "puts us at a competitive disadvantage, especially in the Great Lakes Region," she said.

"We're looking at ways to continue to increase jobs and investments in the state of Michigan and this is a tax that penalizes you for doing that," Ms. McCann said. "We see this as something that could be detrimental to growth."

To recoup most of the anticipated lost funds, { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=151301&locid=1" } has said the state would assign revenues from expiring tax credits to local governments. Local governments have so far been apprehensive about the legislation, acknowledging changes are necessary, but suggesting the Legislature approve a constitutional amendment to guarantee reimbursements to local governments for the $1.2 billion in revenues generated by the tax.

Ms. McCann said the challenge with the tax is creating a business-friendly environment while also being cognizant of the impact the legislation could have on local governments.

In addition to the personal property tax, another hearing on MPSERS reform is scheduled for Wednesday, which follows a seven-hour long hearing held Wednesday by the Senate Appropriations Retirement Subcommittee that solicited predominately negative feedback on { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011SB104001" }

Appeals Court Leaves Gateway Project With M.D.O.T.

The Wayne Circuit Court order giving the Department of Transportation control of the Gateway project on the Ambassador Bridge was not a contempt sanction, but an equitable decision in the case, the Court of Appeals said in rejecting the Detroit International Bridge Company's appeal.

The appellate court, in an order issued Thursday (Department of Transportation v. Detroit International Bridge Company, { HYPERLINK "http://coa.courts.mi.gov/documents/coa/public/orders/2012/309389%2825%29_order.pdf" \t "blank" }), said there was nothing in any of its earlier orders in the case that would have prevented the trial court from passing control of the project from DIBC, which owns the bridge, to MDOT, which controls the expressway to which it is trying to connect.

"In issuing the March 8, 2012, order, the trial court was acting well within its broad discretion in ordering specific performance of DIBC's outstanding obligations under the contract as directed by the trial court's February 1, 2010 order," the appeals court said. "Under the circumstances of this case, as thoroughly explained by the trial court in its March 8, 2012, order, to order was just and equitable."

MDOT issued the contract for the project Thursday, with work expected to be completed in October. The trial court took the project away from the bridge owner for its track record of delays and legal challenges to the contract to complete the expressway connection.

A bridge company spokesperson did not know Friday if the company plans to appeal the order.

Audit Criticizes M.S.F. For Financial Misstatements

The Michigan Strategic Fund needs to improve its accounting department to avoid misstatements and improper recording, according to an audit released Friday by the Office of the Auditor General.

The first financial error { HYPERLINK "http://www.audgen.michigan.gov/comprpt/docs/r271040112.pdf" \t "blank" } identified was improper recording of the advance the strategic fund received from the U.S. Department of Treasury for the State Small Business Tax Credit Initiative agreement.

"MSF recorded the portion of the advance that was used in accordance with the federal agreement during the fiscal year revenue; however, it recorded the unused portion as deferred revenue," the audit stated. "As a result, deferred revenue was overstated and revenue, fund balance, and restricted net assets were understated by $21.6 million."

The second error was found in the improper recording of the net assets and fund balance of the Jobs for Michigan Investment Fund, the Michigan Supplier Diversification Fund program, and the Michigan Business Growth Fund program. Net assets of the Debt Service Fund were also not properly reported, it found.

According to the audit, state law created the Jobs for Michigan Investment Fund and requires that the money in the fund, including the related net income, remain in the fund and not lapse to the general fund and be invested only as authorized.

The agency's response agreed with the recommendation of the auditor general to "improve its internal control over financial reporting," but disagreed that the misstatements of net assets and fund balance classifications either overstated or understated the group's total net assets.

The audit reviewed practices at the strategic fund from October 1, 2009, through September 30, 2011.

Appeals Court Schedules Hearings On Manager Challenges

The Court of Appeals has scheduled oral arguments in the various challenges to the emergency manager law for May 3.

The court has consolidated the three cases involving Detroit, but has also overlapped hearing times between those and the case involving Flint, with all of the hearings (Davis v. City of Detroit Financial Review Team, COA docket Nos. 309218 and 309250; McNeil v. City of Detroit Financial Review Team, COA docket No. 309482; and Muma v. City of Flint Financial Review Team, COA docket No. 309260) scheduled for 11 a.m.

All of the cases are before { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=109201&locid=1" }, Judge Peter O'Connell and { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=109001&locid=1" } and will be conducted in the Hall of Justice, 925 West Ottawa Street, Lansing.

The Ingham Circuit Court had ruled in all three cases that the review teams violated the Open Meetings Act, but the Court of Appeals has so far allowed the decisions made by those panels to stand pending its further review, leaving the emergency manager in Flint and allowing Detroit to enter a consent agreement to avoid an emergency manager.

Charters Fighting Retirement Funding Plans

Charter school supporters are rallying the troops as the Legislature prepares to return in hopes of heading off plans that would have them helping to fund the Michigan Public School Employees Retirement System.

In an email to members, the Michigan Association of Public School Academies urged calls to legislators particularly to urge no changes to { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011SB104001" }, which requires increased contributions from school employees to both their pensions and retirement health benefits.

The bill as drafted would only affect districts and charters that participate in MPSERS, but the email said there are efforts to have all charters contribute toward the system. All traditional public school districts are required to participate, and some community colleges and universities are also part of the system, but charters have the option whether to participate.

The email said proposals include requiring direct contributions and reducing the foundation allowance to shift funds to MPSERS.

"Michigan's charter schools already receive fewer dollars than traditional public schools," the email said. "We can't afford to receive even less."

Campaign Notes

PEDERSEN EARNS ENDORSEMENT IN 17TH DISTRICT: Democrat Jim Pedersen announced he has earned the endorsement of the 15th Congressional District Democratic Party.

"I'm pleased to receive this endorsement from my fellow Democrats, and add it to the list which includes the Monroe-Lenawee Central Labor Council, the United Autoworkers Union, Operating Engineers Local 324, the Building and Construction Trades Council, Michigan Nurses Association and the United Steelworkers Union," Mr. Pedersen wrote.

He is running in the 17th District, which is a new seat created in redistricting that holds much of the turf now held by { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=276201&locid=1" } (R-Ida), whose 56th District is shifting south and west. The seat will be hotly contested between the parties in the fall.

Appointments By The Governor

Editorial: Investing in rail makes sense as demand soars

"A balanced national transportation system requires high-speed rail lines that connect the nation's major cities. With gas prices soaring, people are driving less and looking for less stressful alternatives to congested freeways and airports. The federal government must continue to help metropolitan areas build and maintain transit systems -- including trains -- that reduce congestion, get people to jobs, improve air quality and conserve energy."

Guest commentary: Don't buy the push to privatize Michigan's prisons

"What does it say about us as a society that the largest growing expense of state and local governments today is corrections systems? In the Michigan Legislature the drumbeat for privatization has reached a fevered pitch during the past year. Under the auspices of cost savings, an agenda has been set into motion that does nothing to improve the public good, but works wonders for the profit margins of Republican corporate campaign funders."

Fraud Appears Likely In McCotter Petition Signatures

The petition signatures submitted by { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=4001&locid=1" } for ballot access have a Frankenstein look to them with portions appearing to have been cut and pasted together in an attempt to pass off signatures from a previous campaign for office as new ones.

Lines on several of the petition forms don't match up while dates of the purported signatures appear to have been doctored or pasted on top of the form. In other cases, an original page of signatures was copied and then submitted with the name of a different circulator. Of the 1,833 signatures the campaign submitted, just 244 appear to be valid, said Gisgie Davila Gendreau, Department of State spokesperson. He needed 1,000.

Tuesday saw rapid-fire developments. First, The Detroit News published a column from Mr. McCotter (R-Livonia) revealing his attorneys had confirmed the Department of State's finding that he was short of signatures. As a result, Mr. McCotter said he would ask the Board of State Canvassers to disqualify him from the ballot when it convenes to certify the August primary ballot June 6 and instead run as a write-in.

Potential write-in foe David Trott, a longtime party donor, decided not to run. Then Mr. McCotter appeared on WJR-AM to discuss the mess during which he acknowledged irregularities in his petitions. The Department of State then turned over its initial findings to the Department of Attorney General for investigation.

meid=4001&locid=1" } was under heavy fire Tuesday about his campaign's petition signatures.

"There is a prima facie case that somebody did something that they shouldn't have," Mr. McCotter told WJR-AM's Frank Beckmann. "I do feel like someone I trusted lied to me. And that, in my line of work, is shocking."

Mr. McCotter said he did not know whether someone on his campaign staff panicked and assembled the petitions in the fashion in which they were submitted or consciously was out to commit fraud. He has not named who was responsible, saying only it was handled by the same people who have gathered his signatures in his previous five runs for Congress.

At this point, Mr. McCotter looks like the only write-in candidate to contest teacher Kerry Bentivolio of Milford, a tea party activist who is the lone Republican on the ballot. { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=18801&locid=1" } (R-White Lake Township), who had launched a bid for the seat last fall, but dropped out in January after failing to raise enough money, said he would not run. Former Rep. Rocky Raczkowski said he was considering a bid, but Oakland County Republicans said that ultimately was unlikely.

Mr. McCotter could need somewhere in the vicinity of 40,000 votes to overtake Mr. Bentivolio, who will gain many votes simply by virtue of being the lone Republican on the ballot.

"It's going to be an uphill climb, but it is what it is," Mr. McCotter said on WJR. "Life is full of surprises, some of them pleasant, some of them unpleasant."

THE PETITIONS: Whoever hoped to pass off Mr. McCotter's petitions as legitimate doesn't have much of a future in forgery.

Based on Gongwer News Service's review of the petitions, there were several clear signs of attempting to pass off duplicate signatures. Aside from some petitions having been submitted as copies (the department can only count originals), it appeared obvious that whoever was in charge took old petitions and cut and pasted new dates on top of them. Portions of the form were cut off as well (see graphic below).

Petition number 24 submitted by the McCotter campaign shows several irregularities.

Department of State staff noticed some of the forms appeared to be copies and the same names appeared at least twice during a standard review, Elections Director Chris Thomas said.

"I would kind of characterize this as padding the petition," Mr. Thomas said. "There's some cut and paste job going on."

Several different names show up on the forms as the petition circulator, but that does not mean those individuals necessarily participated in what happened. Whoever made the copies and doctored them could have kept the names and signatures from previous forms. Mr. Thomas said staff did a spot check comparing those signatures to the signature on file for that person in the Qualified Voter File and there was no sign of forged signatures.

The Department of State turned over some initial findings to the Department of Attorney General regarding the copied petitions and cutting and pasting, Ms. Gendreau said.

"We will review information provided by the Secretary of State and determine whether additional action is warranted," Attorney General spokesperson Joy Yearout said.

Mr. McCotter said the responsibility for the situation is his, but also noted he delegated the signature-gathering effort.

"I want to know what happened," he said. "I want to have the appropriate people punished."

But he also refused to name who he had asked to handle his petitions.

"We will not engage in speculation or fuel any speculation regarding individuals and what they may or may not have done during this process," campaign spokesperson Randy Thompson said. "That is for the secretary of state and attorney general's office to find.

Several observers have said Mr. McCotter's wildly unsuccessful presidential campaign served as a distraction from running a good operation to get re-elected to the House. But Mr. McCotter said he ended his presidential campaign in September and didn't begin his petition drive for re-election until February.

"I think those people are idiots," he said. "I would encourage those people to actually know what they were talking about."

Democratic Party Chair Mark Brewer jumped all over the situation and linked it to the controversy in the 76th House District where the Department of State Police is investigating the circumstances under which Matt Mojzak filed as a purported Democrat after { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=205201&locid=1" } left the Democratic Party for the GOP.

"This is no longer an isolated incident," Mr. Brewer said in a statement. "This is a pattern of fraud and illegal activity in the Michigan Republican Party. Why do Republicans think they're above the law? These are serious charges and must be investigated thoroughly. Republicans are showing they are not fit to lead. They know voters will hold them accountable for their disastrous policies over the past two years."

THE ELECTION: There has long been some dissension in Mr. McCotter's district about him, with many activists accusing him of failing to help the party down the ticket and being more enamored of spending time in Washington than appearing at local party functions. In the immediate aftermath of his petition disaster, there was a big push by some Republicans in Oakland County to woo longtime GOP donor and foreclosure attorney David Trott into the race over the weekend.

But as Gongwer reported Tuesday morning, Mr. Trott opted not to run.

"The circumstances surrounding this election are unique and intriguing, but the simple answer is that the timing is not right for me or my family," he said in a statement. "I have always been interested politics and public service and believe that I would do a great job."

Mr. McCotter asserted in his Detroit News column that Mr. Trott was supporting him for re-election. That appeared to be an oversimplification. Asked whether he was supporting Mr. McCotter, Mr. Trott said, "I have supported Thaddeus McCotter in the past and if the choice is between McCotter and Bentivolio I'll be supporting Thad."

At this stage, it appears that will be the match-up on the Republican side.

Mr. Raczkowski is dangling the idea of running, noting that the newly drawn 11th District contains 53.4 percent of the old 9th District, which Mr. Raczkowski narrowly lost in 2010 to { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=7801&locid=1" } (D-Bloomfield Township).

But Mr. Raczkowski also noted his name might not lend itself to an effective write-in campaign.

"It's a long road, and I would have to ask would Rocky suffice on the ballot," he said. "Raczkowski may be hard to spell, but it's easy to vote for (if it's on the ballot)."

To that point, voters need not spell a write-in candidate's name exactly for it to count as a vote, Mr. Thomas said. By that measure, if someone writes in "Thad MacCotter" as opposed to "Thaddeus McCotter," the vote will still count, Mr. Thomas said. The key is for the name to be clearly discernible as an attempt to vote for that candidate.

Write-in candidates must officially register by July 27. And to win, they must get enough votes to total at least the equivalent of 5 percent of the total votes cast for the most voted in Republican race in the 11th District. That will likely be the Republican senatorial primary.

Dennis Pittman, executive director of the Oakland County Republican Party, said for all the problems, Mr. McCotter remains the favorite.

"He's got the name ID," he said. "All he has to do is spend the money and make sure the process is carried out carefully. He's going to have to raise more money. The $190,000 he's got in the bank is not going to be enough."

As for Mr. Bentivolio, he has gone from an afterthought to possible future congressman after one of the more stunning blunders to hit state politics.

He was not available for comment Tuesday because he was performing his regular job as a teacher, campaign manager Bob Dindoffer said.

But Mr. Dindoffer said the situation just furthers Mr. Bentivolio's plans to focus on government accountability.

"Now we have the opportunity to hammer that point home," he said. "We expect that we will win."

But Mr. Dindoffer acknowledged that the situation is a huge surprise. Initially, Mr. Bentivolio ran just to prove a point, not to win, he said.

"Now we're the only guy on the ballot," he said. "I was kind of a quasi-campaign manager when we were running kind of a quasi-campaign (but am now full-time). We're trying to turn it on a dime."

U. Funding Appears Last Hurdle To Finish Budget; June 14 Eyed For Summer Recess

House-Senate negotiators on the higher education budget are at a standstill on how to divvy up an overall 3 percent increase in funding to each of the 15 public universities.

The higher education budget ({ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011SB95501" }{ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_querymanager.cfm&billid=2011SB95501 " }) appears to be the last unfinished item as legislators hustle to complete the 2012-13 fiscal year budget before their self-imposed June 1 deadline. The conference committee for the K-12 budget ({ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011SB96101" }{ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_querymanager.cfm&billid=2011SB96101 " }) scheduled a meeting for noon Wednesday, and several officials said that budget was essentially set to go.

Tuesday otherwise saw the budget rapidly churning forward. House-Senate conference committees approved budgets for community colleges ({ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011SB94901" }{ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_querymanager.cfm&billid=2011SB94901 " }), general government ({ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011SB95401" }{ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_querymanager.cfm&billid=2011SB95401 " }), judiciary ({ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011SB95701" }{ HYPERLINK HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_querymanager.cfm&billid=2011SB96001" }).

"http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_querymanager.cfm&billid=2011SB95701 " }) and the departments of Agriculture and Rural Development ({ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011SB94701" }{ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_querymanager.cfm&billid=2011SB94701 " }), Community Health ({ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011SB95001" }{ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_querymanager.cfm&billid=2011SB95001 " }), Corrections ({ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011SB95101" }{ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_querymanager.cfm&billid=2011SB95101 " }), Education ({ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011SB95201" }{ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_querymanager.cfm&billid=2011SB95201 " }), Human Services ({ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011SB95601" }{ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_querymanager.cfm&billid=2011SB95601 " }), Licensing and Regulatory Affairs ({ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011SB95801" }{ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_querymanager.cfm&billid=2011SB95801 " }), Military and Veterans Affairs ({ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011SB95901" }{ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_querymanager.cfm&billid=2011SB95901 " }), State Police ({ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011SB96201" }{ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_querymanager.cfm&billid=2011SB96201 " }) and Transportation ({ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011SB96301" }{ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_querymanager.cfm&billid=2011SB96301 " }).

"I think we're on schedule to do everything this week," Senate { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=55701&locid=1" } (R-Monroe) said. "We've got a couple of them that are kind of up in the air, still have to be talked about - higher ed we're not done with, K-12 we're not quite done with. But for the most part I think we'll be on schedule."

The possibility exists for a rare Friday legislative session, but Mr. Richardville discounted that scenario.

"I think it's going to be a good product," Mr. Richardville said. "These guys have put a lot of work into this stuff. It's amazing, in my 12-13-14, whatever it is years here, that the budget process now is kind of a non-exciting thing because we don't have the same kinds of delays and problems we've had in the past."

Richardville spokesperson Amber McCann said the K-12 budget would contain an $80 million overall increase to the foundation allowance with an equity payment that sees $120 per pupil awarded to lower-funded districts and higher-funded districts remaining "stable."

With all of the conference reports publicly unveiled except K-12 and higher education, the focus will heavily shift to resolving the higher education budget.

{ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=83401&locid=1" } (R-Lawton), chair of the Senate Appropriations Higher Education Subcommittee, said Tuesday night that she and Rep. Bob Genetski (R-Saugatuck), the House subcommittee chair, hit a standoff on the mechanism for allocating the increase.

{ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=245801&locid=1" } had proposed awarding greater increases to those universities graduating more students in the science, technology, engineering, math and health fields. But both the House and Senate balked.

The Senate called for half of the $36 million overall increase to be distributed 3 percent across the board and the other half based on tuition restraint as well as how they measure against other universities in their Carnegie classification.

The House version required universities to have a limit on tuition increases looking at a two-year basis, report embryonic stem cell research, participate in reverse transfer agreements with at least three community colleges in the state, ensure their dual enrollment policy doesn't consider use of credits toward high school graduation requirements and not compel undergraduate students to carry health insurance. The universities would have to certify by August 31 that they have complied or will comply with all five measures to receive the money.

"I would still say a ways to go yet," Ms. Schuitmaker said. "At this point, I wouldn't schedule a conference committee. But that doesn't mean that there might not be movement tomorrow."

Ms. Schuitmaker sidestepped a question about whether legislative leaders have taken charge of the negotiations or if she and Mr. Genetski are still discussing the bill.

Asked whether the stem cell reporting language and other controversial boilerplate items had been resolved, Ms. Schuitmaker said, "We haven't even gotten past the philosophical differences (on the formula). I think once we get past that, it will go pretty quickly."

The other budgets went as expected after last week's target-setting agreement provided more funding for most departments and major budget areas with many programs seeing increases (see related stories).

In another development, Mr. Richardville said the plan now is for the Legislature to recess for the summer starting June 14 instead of the initially planned June 28.

"The only thing that would change that would be a second coming or something," Mr. Richardville said of the June 14 plan.

House Republican spokesperson Ari Adler said the House also plans to adjourn then if it can finish what it wants to finish by then.

D.C.H. Budget Sees New Funding For Autism, G.M.E., Dental

The Legislature initially hesitated about the many funding increases { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=245801&locid=1" } proposed in the Department of Community Health, but the conference report a House-Senate conference committee adopted Tuesday showed it eventually bought into most of them and even added some new funding not previously suggested.

And Mr. Snyder relented in one area the Legislature resisted his proposal for a cut - Graduate Medical Education.

Under { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011SB95001" }{ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_querymanager.cfm&billid=2011SB95001" }, the Graduate Medical Education program would see an increase of $8.6 million ($2.9 million general fund). { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=245801&locid=1" } had called for a $17.1 million cut ($5.8 million cut general fund). The House had called for about the same level of funding and the Senate was essentially backing the governor's proposal.

Additionally, Medicaid will now cover treatment for autism for children through the age of 18 under the budget. The bill contains $21.3 million ($7.1 million general fund), less than the $34.1 million Mr. Snyder proposed and the House approved, but that reflected a lowering of the estimated cost.

And the budget would allow expanding the Healthy Kids Dental program by $16.7 million ($5.6 million general fund), less than the $25 million ($8.4 million general fund) Mr. Snyder proposed, but more than the House and much more than the Senate, which had essentially provided no funding.

That program serves 349,000 children in 65 counties and Mr. Snyder eventually wants to take it statewide.

"Healthy Kids Dental balances the oral health needs of Michigan's children with the responsible appropriation of taxpayer dollars," said Drew Eason, CEO and executive director of the Michigan Dental Association, in a statement. "A 5-year-old who visits a dentist for the first time at age 1 needs just $262 in dental care over those five years, while a 5-year-old seeing a dentist for the first time requires $546 in care. This is smart public policy."

When the Senate passed its version of the budget, it removed nearly all of Mr. Snyder's proposed increases and replaced them with $100 placeholders. { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=71001&locid=1" } (R-Midland), the Senate Appropriations Community Health Subcommittee chair, said he wanted to see how revenues looked at the May Revenue Estimating Conference.

"I think there was a priority placed on this budget and many positive initiatives aimed at increasing access to health care in Michigan," he said. Tuesday. "We're trying to build our infrastructure to ensure there's access to health care in Michigan."

Mr. Moolenaar highlighted a 20 percent increase in payment rates for Medicaid providers for the cost of Ob/Gyn services at a cost of $11.9 million. That had not been a part of any of the previous proposed budgets from the governor, House or Senate.

{ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=204301&locid=1" } (R-Constantine), chair of the House DCH subcommittee, said Graduate Medical Education was a priority.

"We're glad we were able to keep it pretty much in line with this current year's funding," he said. "All in all, I think we did pretty well considering all the restrictions we have with today's economy." "Once we got going, things fell into place quickly."

Among the other items of difference resolved:

> The conference committee concurred with Mr. Snyder's call for a $3 million increase to the Healthy Michigan Fund.
> $2 million proposed by the House for pregnancy/parenting support was included.
> A $5.95 million increase for rural and "sole community" hospitals. Mr. Snyder called for the elimination of those funds and the House and Senate initially essentially agreed.

An expansion of $11.8 million for the Medicaid Home and Community Based Waiver program to reduce that program's waiting list. The House initially had gone with a smaller increase than Mr. Snyder proposed and the Senate awarded no increase.
$900,000 to restore chiropractic services under Medicaid, something the House and Senate initially had rejected.
One disappointment for many hospitals is likely the rejection of a second pool of funds for those hospitals that serve a disproportionate share of the Medicaid population. The House had passed $10 million for the program, but the conference committee dropped it.
There also is full restoration of the adult vision program at a cost of $4.5 million.

Overall, the budget contains $15.035 billion ($2.817 billion general fund).

Snyder Agenda Slows in '12 After Huge '11

The start of 2011 saw an avalanche of major new laws, from the one enhancing powers for state-appointed emergency managers overseeing troubled local governments and school districts to the most sweeping overhaul of taxes in a generation. New laws making it easier to fire teachers and increasing the number of charter schools, both sought for years by Republicans without success, finally came to fruition.

Now Mr. Snyder is seeing legislative work on his agenda slow with major proposals to raise revenue to fund road repairs and create an exchange where residents can comparison shop for health insurance going nowhere. Still, Snyder is enjoying a strong rate of success with the Legislature.

=bio.cfm&name id=245801 &locid=1" } has seen the Legislature balk at some of the priorities he unveiled in the fall.

"I think he's done remarkably well," said Dennis Cawthorne, a founder of the Kelley Cawthorne lobbying firm in Lansing who has been a fixture in the capital city since serving in the state House from 1967-78, the last four years of which as the Republican leader. "He's had a substantial agenda that he's managed to move with surprising speed. His track record so far in the Legislature I think is very good."

Mr. Snyder of course has the considerable advantage of Republicans holding not only the majority in the House and Senate, but by overwhelming margins at 26-12 in the Senate and 63-47 in the House. Unified control is a rare opportunity in modern times. Since the Senate and governor switched to four-year terms starting with the 1966 elections, it has happened only in the 1967-68 term (Republicans), 1983 and part of 1984 (Democrats), 1995-96 (Republicans) and 1999-2002 (Republicans).

Even with that advantage, Mr. Snyder has rolled up a remarkable number of legislative wins ({ HYPERLINK "http://bridgemi.com/2012/05/tallying-up-the-snyder-administration/" \l ".T8ToolJQT1k" \t "blank" }).

"If you can get two-thirds of your program through even a friendly Legislature, I think that's pretty remarkable," Mr. Cawthorne said. "I think his record is probably as good as John Engler's and that's saying a lot because Engler was a very astute political operative."

Doug Roberts, who worked in the administrations of Democrat James Blanchard and Republicans William Milliken and John Engler, credits Snyder's focus - and the GOP Senate - for much of the administration's legislative success.

"The Senate has 26 Republicans. Even during the Watergate debacle (for Republicans in the 1970s), the Democrats only had 24. So this is a huge number," said Mr. Roberts, who now directs the Institute for Public Policy and Social Research at Michigan State University. "Also, (the governor) didn't say 'Let's wait (on big items).' He said, 'Let's do it now.' There's an enormous amount being accomplished."

Key to the Snyder agenda has been the use of a mechanism afforded to the governor in the Constitution: the ability to submit to the Legislature "special messages" on any given topic that he seeks legislative action. Former Governor William Milliken frequently delivered special messages, but until Mr. Snyder took office in 2011, subsequent governors largely ignored the tool.

Mr. Snyder already has issued six such special messages - on local government, education, health and wellness, infrastructure, talent development and public safety - with a seventh planned for the fall on the environment and energy. They have carried the bulk of the Snyder agenda although some major issues - notably Mr. Snyder's proposed major overhaul of taxes and construction of a new bridge to Canada - were made without the use of a special message.

Republican majorities in the Legislature quickly lined up behind most of the proposals outlined in the first two messages, local government in March 2011 and education in April.

On local government, the Legislature passed and Mr. Snyder signed legislation overhauling allocation of revenue sharing aid to local governments and requiring negotiation of new collective bargaining agreements with public employees when local governments enter into a service sharing agreement, among other significant changes.

Mr. Snyder then mostly cleaned up on his education special message. The Legislature supported tying school funding to meeting a series of best practices such as how much school employees must pay for health care, mandating school districts adopt anti-bullying policies and substantially changing teacher tenure to make it easier to fire bad teachers. Mr. Snyder proposed charter school expansion in certain areas with failing schools, but the Legislature went further and completely removed the cap on the number of charter schools public universities can authorize.

Bill Rustem, a top Snyder aide who has been on the scene in Lansing going back to his days as a staffer for Mr. Milliken, said the climate was perfect for moving on the local government and education reforms.

"These are issues that have been teed up among particular Republicans for a long time," said Mr. Rustem, Mr. Snyder's director of strategy. "There was kind of a pent-up demand for dealing with the issues."

And it was long before the 2012 election began factoring into the Legislature's thinking. The House is up for election in November, and Democrats are mounting a furious effort to win back control from Republicans, who have a 64-46 majority.

The one major setback on these two issues was Mr. Snyder's call to essentially end school district borders so that any student could attend any school regardless of where he or she lives. Opposition swelled quickly in suburban school districts, especially in the Detroit area. By the time legislators pared the idea back to allow school districts to determine whether they had the capacity to allow schools of choice, the idea had become politically toxic.

"A lot of local, parochial politics got in the way," Mr. Rustem said.

The fall saw more setbacks for Mr. Snyder. Besides the Senate dropping his proposal to authorize a new bridge connecting Detroit and Windsor, Ontario, the legislative response to his proposals on health and wellness, transportation and recruiting and retaining talented workers to the state was tepid at best.

The Senate passed Mr. Snyder's proposed online exchange where consumers could comparison shop for health insurance, but the House, where Republicans see the proposal as part of the controversial federal Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act, have said they will not act on it until the Supreme Court rules on the statute in June. Mr. Snyder's proposal to ban smoking on state-owned beaches has gone nowhere. The same is true of Mr. Snyder's proposals to change how the state taxes gasoline sales and hike vehicle registration fees to raise $1.4 billion for roads.

But legislative resistance on those issues is hardly shocking, Mr. Rustem said. Asking for new revenue always is difficult, and the exchange got caught up in the charged political atmosphere surrounding the federal health care law, he said.

"These are not easy things to get done," he said.

And the 2012 election is approaching.

"I've been around enough election years to know you don't get anywhere near as much done in an election year as you do in a non-election year," Rustem said. "It's just the way it is, the way it has always been and the way it will always be."

Mr. Snyder enjoyed a resurgence of legislative action this spring. The Legislature backed most of his proposals on public safety and after a year of work also passed legislation expanding the number of online charter schools. And it passed a mandate on insurers that they cover treatment for autism. Still, Mr. Rustem has heard the criticism that Mr. Snyder's agenda is grinding to a halt in the Legislature.

"It's crap," he said.

The test for a governor is not what he or she accomplishes in the first 100 days, six months or year, but entire time in office, Mr. Rustem said. He recalled how Mr. Milliken proposed placing a deposit on cans and bottles in 1970, was stymied by the Legislature and saw the measure finally take effect in 1978 after a statewide ballot initiative.

"The governor can't control - he can influence - but he can't control what the Legislature does," he said. "He puts out the proposals. They set the timeline. The governor can push, the governor can influence. This is not a dictatorship. We have a separate branch of government. The governor's got to work at what he wants. Sometimes it takes a long, long time to get those ideas implemented."

And while the summer break and House elections in the fall are expected to slow the pace of activity in Lansing, Mr. Roberts says Michiganders shouldn't be surprised to see another burst of activity in early 2013, depending on the election results.

"If the Republicans retain control of the House, look for things to pick up again," Mr. Roberts said. "The first six months of next year will be very important."

Juvenile Justice Facilities Cut But Still Open

The state's juvenile justice facilities would see reduced funding, but they would remain open under Department of Human Services budget adopted by conference committee Tuesday.

The facilities, for housing the state's more dangerous juvenile offenders, would see a $2 million reduction in funding for next fiscal year.

The budget ({ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011SB95601" }{ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_querymanager.cfm&billid=2011SB95601" }) would, however, prohibit the department from increasing capacity in state-operated facilities without allowing private facilities to bid on the capacity.

The House subcommittee had eliminated funding for the facilities, requiring instead that the residents be moved to private facilities, an idea that appeared to have support in both chambers.

"There's always been a question whether money wouldn't be better spent placing these children in a private facility," { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=84601&locid=1" } (R-Saginaw Township) said. "Yet we limp along year after year funding Maxey."

Rep. Dave Agema (R-Grandville), chair of the House subcommittee, said he had assurance from the administration that the facilities would be full in the coming months, but urged that, if they are not, the Legislature consider closing at least one of the facilities for the 2013-14 fiscal year.

The conference committee also approved increases for foster families and private residential facilities. Foster families would see $3 more per day and residential facilities would see 7.5 percent increases.

The budget does not include funds for increased security at local DHS offices. The department had requested the funds after a number of assaults on staff at those offices in the last year.

Among the more substantial cuts, assistance spending is down $101.2 million ($68.07 million general fund) for expected reductions in caseloads and need for economic adjustments.

The budget totals $6.55 billion ($1.011 billion general fund), a $133 million cut gross from the current year.

CORRECTIONS: A conference committee also approved the budget for the Department of Corrections. As Gongwer News Service previously reported, the plan includes converting the Ryan Correctional Facility to a parole violator center, closing the Tuscola Re-entry Facility and reopening the Muskegon Correctional Facility.

The budget ({ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011SB95101" }{ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_querymanager.cfm&billid=2011SB95101" }) totals $2 billion, down from $2.014 billion for the current year.

The facility changes are expected to cost an additional $10.8 million for the year. But the conference included a variety of other savings, including $25.05 million from staffing efficiencies and $12.6 million from reclassifying certain employees (resident unit officers will be come corrections officers, for instance).

As Gongwer first reported last week, the budget does not include the House's plan of closing a prison and then transferring those inmates to a private facility.

The budget also cuts $15 million by not reappropriating funds expected to be lapsed from the current budget.

The conference committee also rejected { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=245801&locid=1" }'s proposal to use money from the Special Equipment Fund (collected from prisoner telephone calls) for capital projects, allowing only the $5.3 million Mr. Snyder had proposed for safety equipment for corrections officers, including TASERs, and cell phone jammers.

The conference report was adopted on a 4-2 party-line vote. Democrats raised concerns that the budget included policy issues that had not been discussed and that, in some cases, could cost the state in the long run.

{ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=39501&locid=1" } (D-Westland) said the plans for Ryan would make it more difficult for inmates' families to visit them and would increase transportation costs for the department because inmates from the Detroit area would have to be transferred to the west side of the state.

House Republicans praised the budget as opening the door to competition within the department's programs.

"My goal on competitive bidding is not just to have a cheaper product but to have a more accountable department," said { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=205901&locid=1" } (R-Holland), chair of the House subcommittee. "I believe when we have a monopoly as we do through public employment, it lowers the bar."

TRANSPORTATION CONFERENCE: The state will divert $100 million in sales taxes assessed on gasoline sales into the state transportation fund as a way of meeting the federal match on highway funds the conference committee for the Department of Transportation budget for 20120-13.

However, to meet the total federal match, the state will also move $23 million from the general fund to the transportation fund.

The total budget for the department, in { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011SB96301" }{ HYPERLINK

"http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_querymanager.cfm&billid=2011SB96301 " }, is $3.466 billion, an increase of $119 million over the current year.

The redirection of sales tax money required first that { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011SB351and01" }{ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_querymanager.cfm&billid=2011SB351and01" } { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011HB452101" }{ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_querymanager.cfm&billid=2011HB452101" } are enacted, and is intended for one year only.

With the additional money, the state's trunkline road and bridge fund will have $941 million, nearly $99 million more than the amount allocated for the current year.

The budget also maintains current language regarding a proposed new bridge between Detroit and Windsor, Ontario, prohibiting any expenditure of funds on the bridge unless the Legislature passes legislation authorizing the bridge.

And the budget does not include a provision the House had that the state sell one of its Beechcraft King Air twin-engine turbo prop planes. The House had directed that proceeds from the sale go the state aeronautics fund.

The conference committee approved the budget unanimously.

GENERAL GOVERNMENT: The budget, reported on a 4-1 vote in { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011SB95401" }{ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_querymanager.cfm&billid=2011SB95401 " }, would total $4.3 billion, with $990 million in general funds.

Among the biggest changes in the budget, compared to the current budget, will be $47 million allocated to the Department of Technology, Management and Budget to begin a technology investment project. { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=245801&locid=1" } had called for $50 million to begin he multi-year project to update operating systems and equipment that in some cases is decades old. The Senate had reduced that to $48 million, the House to about $31.6 million.

The total allocation for DTMB is $1.142 billion, the largest in the entire budget.

In the Department of Treasury, the budget allocates $10 million for eligible students in non-public schools for dual enrollment purposes.

Treasury will also receive $2.3 million to help pay a portion of the debt service on the Facility for Rare Isotope Beams at Michigan State University.

One of the largest single share of the budget is the $1.096 billion for revenue sharing. The budget will boost constitutional revenue sharing by $27 million to $725. It also boosts the Economic Vitality Incentive Program by $15 million to a total of $225 million.

County statutory revenue sharing will come in $104.5 million, and the bill creates a county incentive program at $26.1 million.

The budget also allocates $10 million in the competitive grant assistance program.

The Strategic Fund, which is also allocated through Treasury, would receive $984.4 million, and while workforce training is nicked by $45 million because of federal reductions (the state will have a total of $250.8 million) the budget increases the state's film incentive program by $25 million to a total of $50 million.

Actual operations for Treasury are set at $490.3 million, with another $140.5 million for debt service.

The budget also added $700,000 each to the House and Senate, for a total budget of $110.9 million, but does not include $3.1 million for additional Capitol maintenance that the Senate had called for.

The Executive Office would get $4.9 million, an increase of $288,700 from the current year.

The Department of State would be allocated $220.7 million.

Other allocations include $85 million for the Department of the Attorney General, $14.8 million for the Department of Civil Rights and $18.7 million for the Legislative Auditor General.

D.P.S. Millage Vote Change Hung On E.M. Law Objections

There is support in the House to move the vote on a millage renewal for Detroit Public Schools to August, but the issue is currently hung up over concerns that the change would block a referendum on the state's emergency manager law.

And that objection may have made moving the election more difficult, if not impossible.

{ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=89401&locid=1" } (D-Detroit) said she was willing to sponsor the legislation, but that other members of her caucus were concerned how an amendment to PA 4 ({ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011HB421401" }{ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_querymanager.cfm&billid=2011HB421401" }) might affect efforts to subject the law to referendum.

The law requires any millage votes conducted at the request of an emergency manager be in November, but DPS emergency manager Roy Roberts has urged the change, saying the issue would get lost on the ballot.

Ms. Jackson agreed that ballot fatigue could mean a loss on the proposal if it remains on the November ballot.

"The bottom line for me is DPS is in a position to operate," she said. The district is seeking to renew 17 mills.

But moving the issue to the August ballot would mean changing the emergency manager law. And now it could mean changing election law.

"There's a concern if PA 4 is amended, it could create an issue for all of those signatures that were raised," Ms. Jackson said.

She said she was hoping to have those issues worked out as early as Tuesday evening.

The effort to put PA 4 on the ballot is still working its way through the courts after the Board of State Canvassers deadlocked on certifying the petitions to the ballot.

Ari Adler, spokesperson for House { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=226901&locid=1" } (R-Marshall), said Republicans were willing to back the issue if Democrats are also on board.

Mr. Adler said the change would still leave PA 4 subject to the referendum. "There's nothing in the legislation that would have impacted the ballot initiative," he said.

The message from Democratic leadership, Mr. Adler said, was they were not to touch anything dealing with PA 4. "As far as we're concerned, the Democrats said yes to unions and no to students," he said.

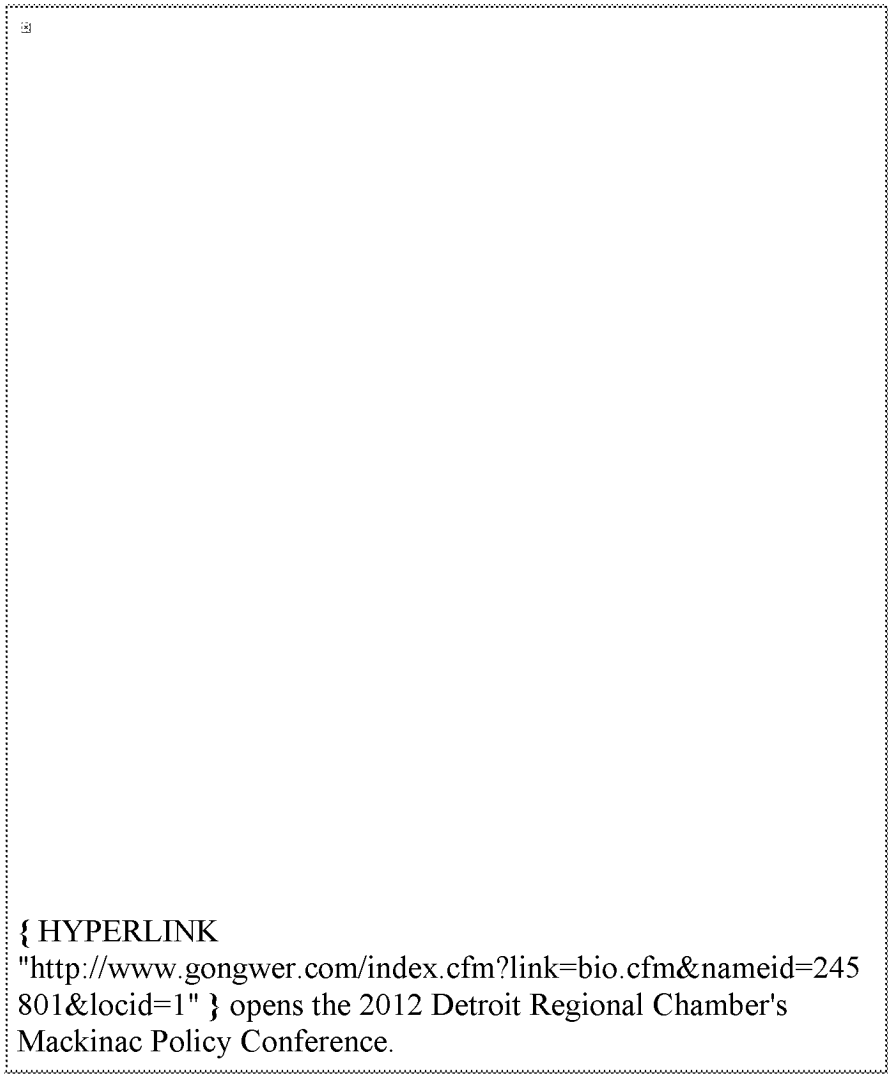
But he also said the task is now larger because putting the issue on the August ballot would require changing not only PA 4, but the election law to move back the deadline for putting items on the ballot.

The deadline for items on the August ballot has passed and the bill would still have to make its way through both chambers.

Snyder Opens Policy Conference With Call For Action

MACKINAC ISLAND - { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=245801&locid=1" } opened the 2012 Mackinac Policy Conference by reminding attendees that this is not an event to do nice things with one another, but is meant to be an accelerator aimed at reinventing the state.

"Do not make this a nice event," Mr. Snyder said. "Make this an event that makes a difference."



{ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=245801&locid=1" } opens the 2012 Detroit Regional Chamber's Mackinac Policy Conference.

One way the business owners in the crowd could make that difference, he said, is to hire veterans.

Mr. Snyder encouraged attendees to attend a session Wednesday focused on veterans entering the workforce.

According to the panel's description, Michigan has the second-highest unemployment rate of Iraq and Afghanistan veterans, at 29 percent.

"That's simply unacceptable," Mr. Snyder said. "The people that can do a lot to solve that problem are us."

He called on people not just to attend, but to discuss what their organizations can do to highlight veterans and also hire them.

Since last year's conference, there is much the state can look back on be proud of, but Mr. Snyder urged the crowd to avoid complacency.

"Now is not the time to be satisfied, I'm not satisfied at all with where we are at," he said

That said, Michigan does have a good story to tell, and needs to make sure it is told, he said.

"Michiganders are too humble," he said. "We don't brag well... We have to speak up more. We are the comeback state in the United States right now."

While state lawmakers won't be on the island this week, there will be plenty going on at the policy conference hosted by the Detroit Regional Chamber,

The conference is scheduled through Thursday and Gongwer News Service will be providing coverage from the island. The conference was moved up a day from its typical Wednesday through Friday configuration to allow the Chamber to help promote the Detroit Grand Prix scheduled for that weekend on Belle Isle.

Community College Budget Uses Traditional Formula For Increase

The multi-layered formula the state has used for several years in determining how to account for performance funding will be maintained for the upcoming fiscal year, the Legislature's conference committee for the community college budget decided Tuesday.

{ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=95101&locid=1" } (R-Evart), Senate chair of the conference committee, said he was pleased with 2012-13 budget coming off a 4.1 percent reduction in funding for the current year, and believes the community colleges share the same sentiment.

The bill ({ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011SB94901" }) was reported from the committee with Republican members of the House and Senate voting in favor, { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=39501&locid=1" } (D-Westland) voting against and { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=275401&locid=1" } (D-Kalamazoo) abstaining from a vote.

The performance funding increase totaling 3 percent overall will be divvied up as follows: 50 percent across-the-board; 10 percent based on student population; 7.5 percent based on administrative costs; 17.5 percent based on a system that gives more importance to certain degrees; and 15 percent based on colleges meeting best practices.

The plan rejects { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=245801&locid=1" }'s proposal to base performance funding solely on the number of certificates awarded in areas such as science, technology, engineering, math, and health professions.

It also does away with the House's recommendation to give an across-the-board 3 percent to all of the state's 28 community colleges.

Mr. Booher said he was the chair of the community colleges committee in 2005 when he and a work group, including the community colleges' presidents, came up with the formula.

"Prior to my getting here was across the board (funding)," he said. "Those that were bigger got more and we didn't always think that was fair."

The bill also provides about $1.7 million from the School Aid Fund to offset the increase in retirement contributions for community colleges in the Michigan Public School Employees Retirement System. That allocation will be assessed across-the-board as the House suggested, rather than basing it upon the MPSERS payroll.

Mr. Booher said it was decidedly so because that funding is such a small portion of the MPSERS payments overall.

"It's a drop in the bucket of their payments," he said of the provision.

The renaissance zone reimbursements totaling $3.5 million that previously came from the community college budget were instead shifted to be accounted for in the general government budget, but will still be there nonetheless, Mr. Booher said.

The total budget is about $294 million with most of that money coming from the School Aid Fund although $96.5 million comes from the general fund. That's a 3.6 percent increase from the current year (9.7 percent general fund).

Snyder Gets State Police Increases He Sought

Lawmakers have agreed to the $15 million extra that { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=245801&locid=1" } sought for the Department of State Police to boost its law enforcement efforts under a budget unanimously agreed to Tuesday by a conference committee.

The House had called for an $11.8 million increase while the Senate approved $10 million more. But the conference committee approved the $15 million Mr. Snyder requested as part of his public safety plan. The money would go toward funding two trooper recruit schools.

"This bill represents a significant investment in public safety in Michigan," said { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=251401&locid=1" } (R-Canton Township), the conference committee chair.

Resolving another disagreement, the conference report agreed to the $4.2 million ($200,000 general fund) to pay for an additional 30 positions to handle tobacco tax enforcement that the Senate passed. The House and Mr. Snyder had proposed just $200,000 to pay for one additional analyst on that issue as well as requisite training.

Otherwise, the House, Senate and Mr. Snyder already had been in step on the department's budget and that was reflected in the conference report for { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011SB96201" }.

There is a $1.9 million (all general fund) increase for laboratory operations to pay for additional scientists, equipment and training to reduce forensic analysis turnaround times to 30 days. And there's a $1.3 million increase to the department's DNA analysis program staff.

In another move that is part of Mr. Snyder's public safety plan, the bill contains a new appropriation of $2.8 million to boost investigative and patrol assistance in Detroit, Flint, Pontiac and Saginaw, specifically helping those cities with the costs of overtime, training, aviation and fleet costs.

There's a new appropriation of $1.1 million to replace 180 outdated mobile radios and create a 10-year lifecycle replacement program as well as replacing 160 mobile data computers with a five-year lifecycle replacement program.

Overall, the budget contains $577.98 million ($317.5 million general fund). That is an 8.3 percent increase from the current year (17.5 percent increase general fund).

VETERANS SERVICE ORGANIZATION GRANTS NICKED: A House-Senate conference committee went along with { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=245801&locid=1" }'s call for a $125,000 cut to Veterans Service Organization grants and the transfer of those funds to the Veterans Affairs Directorate Administration in approving { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011SB95901" }. The House had called for no cut to the service organizations.

Overall, this budget differed little from what Mr. Snyder proposed in February. It contains $172.1 million ($38.2 million general fund). That's a 9.9 percent increase from the current year (12.5 percent increase general fund).

The most significant new spending is $2.4 million general fund for special maintenance at the state's 43 armories and $12 million (federal and restricted funds) to build a new armory in Flint where the existing facility is 87 years old. Another $1.6 million general fund will be spend on special maintenance projects at the Grand Rapids Veterans' Home and $516,000 at the D.J. Jacobetti Veterans' Home.

AGRICULTURE BUDGET INCLUDES MORE FOR DAIRY AND NURSERY STOCK INSPECTIONS: The Senate's push to add staff for milk safety and nursery stock inspections carried the day as a House-Senate conference committee approved a budget for the Department of Agriculture and Rural Development.

The conference adopted the Senate's call for an additional $300,000 general fund to pay for three positions in the Milk Safety and Quality Assurance section. It also approved an extra $70,000 general fund to pay for nursery stock inspections.

The budget also adopted half of the Senate's push for a Rural Development Value-Added Grant Program, allocating $1.95 million general fund.

Overall, the budget contains $76.95 million ($36.1 million general fund). That's a 0.3 percent increase from the current year (20.8 percent increase general fund).

EDUCATION: Libraries and E-libraries will take precedence in the appropriated funding for the Department of Education, a conference committee unanimously decided Tuesday.

The Michigan eLibrary Database, also known as MeL, will receive $800,000 in the upcoming year for the purchase of business research databases for small businesses and entrepreneurs, part of the 84 percent increase to MeL funding.

State aid to libraries will be $762,300, an increase from the House's recommendation by about $291,600, a Senate Fiscal Agency summary noted.

{ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=73001&locid=1" } (R-Traverse City), Senate chair of the conference committee, said he was very pleased with the increases to libraries in this budget ({ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011SB95201" }), noting that they are increasingly more important in communities, especially smaller ones such as his.

The Michigan College Access Network will also see $2 million in the upcoming year in the face of losing $4.3 million from federal funding - a move that { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=155801&locid=1" } (D-Lansing) said she was happy to see.

"This is something that's really making a difference in our state," she said.

The committee slashed $3 million general fund for projected child development care public assistance caseload decreases but increased funding for early childhood programs such as Great Start by about $1.1 million this year, including a $310,000 increase for an early childhood report outlined in the bill.

According to boilerplate, this report will require the department to provide an annual report on the activities of the ECIC, including information about the various grants awarded each year. It also requires 1 percent of the ECIC funding to be withheld for each month or partial month the report is late.

This language was previously included in the budget for the Department of Human Services prior to the transfer of the Office of Great Start to the department.

{ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=84601&locid=1" } (R-Saginaw Township) expressed some concern about the due date of the report - May 15, 2013 - as it may be too late of a date to be used when trying to appropriate funds next year, but no changes were made in committee about the issue.

JUDICIARY: The budget for the judiciary nearly saw unanimous passage from its conference committee on Tuesday, with the only objection coming from { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=217601&locid=1" } regarding the funding that had been appropriated for two Court of Appeals judges { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=245801&locid=1" } initially said he would leave vacant.

While Ms. Tlaib said she was pleased with the rest of the appropriations in the budget, she felt "very principled" on an issue that has frustrated Democrats in both chambers after Mr. Snyder's change of position. Ms. Tlaib's Senate counterpart, { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=161801&locid=1" } (D-Highland Park), was absent from committee.

{ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=102801&locid=1" } (R-St. Joseph), the conference committee chair, said he was most satisfied with an increased $5 million appropriation to fund the Swift-and-Sure Sanctions Fund, which pays for a program that ensures quicker sanctions for some parole violators.

"The Swift and Sure Sanction is one we want to watch carefully," he said prior to voting on reporting the bill ({ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011SB95701" }). "The early anecdotal comments are that it's showing significant success in the four counties that have been able to participate. I think this is a step in the right direction of funding."

The conference decided to include boilerplate that requires a court be part of a unified system or have a drug court, but not necessarily both, to apply to the program. That would broaden the number of counties that would qualify.

The State Court Administrative Office also has the ability to give preference to courts that have previously participated and courts in areas from which higher numbers of residents or former residents are under supervision of the Department of Corrections.

In total, the bill contains $273.8 million ($170.75 million in general fund) in funding for the 2012-13 fiscal year.

"I feel very good about this budget that we put forward," said { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=288901&locid=1" } (R-Mount Pleasant), House chair of the committee. Mr. Cotter said he was excited for the increased investment to Swift and Sure as well and said he anticipates seeing some very positive return on that investment.

The budget for the judiciary will also follow Mr. Snyder's proposition to fill a $2.2 million shortfall in the Court Fee Fund for judicial compensation using funding from the general fund.

Mr. Proos said the judiciary had always expressed concern this portion of its budget was underfunded because of its reliance upon a restricted revenue source, and he was glad to see that concern had been met this upcoming year.

L.A.R.A.: Abortion clinic inspections and autism coverage stood as two of the most significant inclusions of the Department of Licensing and Regulatory Affairs budget unanimously reported from conference committee on Tuesday.

As previously reported, $15 million general fund has been appropriated for the reimbursing insurance carriers for the diagnosis and treatment of autism. { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=84601&locid=1" } (R-Saginaw Township) said time will tell on whether or not that money increases from year to year, but that he expects the issue "will mature" and therefore funding may end up being "much, much higher."

But members of the panel for { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011SB95801" } pressed on and all agreed upon the budget, with the exception of { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=161801&locid=1" } (D-Detroit), who was absent from the meeting.

Additional general fund monies to the amount of $585,000 were appropriated for fees paid by hospitals and schools for inspections and plan review revenue, which was not previously included in conference.

No funding was included for home heating assistance, but a similar program will be in the budget for the Department of Human Services.

Finally, $2 million was appropriated for IT upgrades for the Liquor Control Commission, a drop from the $5 million the House had intended to provide.

The budget totals $791.4 million ($50.57 million general fund).

Entrepreneurship Can, Will Turn State Around, Panelists Say

MACKINAC ISLAND - The mindset of the state is changing and more people are looking to stay in Michigan and start their own business, and because of that, so too is the perception people around the world have of Detroit and the state as a whole.

During a panel discussion titled, "Innovation: Entrepreneurship as the Catalyst for Economic Recovery in Michigan," four successful entrepreneurs said they are seeing more interest and excitement than ever before.

Josh Linkner, CEO and managing partner of Detroit Venture Partners said several years ago there were no venture capital firms in Detroit and now there are more than a dozen. And he said his phones are ringing off the hook.

Angel Gambino, senior vice president for digital innovations at Westfield Shoppingtowns and co-founder of nonopoly, said when she travels around the world and tells people she is from Detroit, the first reaction now isn't always one about bad news or hearing an apology.

"What I'm finding now is that there's intrigue," she said.

After making millions in technology companies, Ms. Gambino said she made the decision to bring investment and jobs back to Detroit.

For the whole state to be vibrant and vital, Detroit has to be a thriving urban center again, and even bigger than it was during its automotive heyday, she said.

"I am a cheerleader for Detroit," she said.

She said she will soon be bringing four convoys of people to the state, each containing several dozen millionaires, billionaires, property developers and artists to tour and see what Michigan has to offer.

Rick DeVos is known for starting Art Prize, but he is also CEO of Start Garden, which invests $5,000 in two ideas each week, to help those wanting to start a business to be able to get off the ground.

He said the biggest hindrance to entrepreneurship is culture of business relating to startups, but it is changing.

"We were the Silicon Valley of mobility 100 years ago," he said. "That built incredible industry."

But that industry also moved the state away from focusing on startups and new ideas.

Ms. Gambino said if she were governor for a day, she would create more incentives for investment into businesses, and new startups that stay in Michigan or maintain a presence here.

She also said she would propose disincentives for people that own big buildings and are just keeping them up to code, or are not keeping them up to code because it benefits them to do so.

"There are some property owners that are just sitting on them, making our city look like crap," she said.

Those property owners are contributing to blight and perpetuating the idea that Detroit is a scary place.

Medical Malpractice Bills Debate Continues In Committee

No vote was made on Tuesday by the Senate Insurance Committee on bills that would reform tort law involving medical malpractice lawsuits in the state as testimony continued and panel members heard from a room full of people largely in opposition to the bills.

Attorneys, including more from the Michigan Association of Justice, continued to say the bills ({ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011SB111501" }, { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011SB111601" }, { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011SB111701" }, { HYPERLINK

"http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011SB111801" }
and { HYPERLINK
"http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011SB111901" }
) would essentially grant physicians immunity from being sued for malpractice.

But perhaps the most protested bill was SB 1116, which contains a provision that would determine whether a suit had legal standing for a trial by jury based on a physician's state of mind when deciding to go through with procedure "A" instead of procedure "B."

That, attorneys say, is impossible to prove.

"Proving or disproving a state of mind is difficult and that's effectively what SB 1116 does is proving a state of conduct against a state of mind," said Barry Conybeare, a personal injury lawyer.

Currently, he said, jurors determine whether a physician is guilty or not guilty of the negligence they are accused of based on a state of conduct, which is more easily proven or disproven through expert testimony on both sides.

"We cannot convert malpractice litigation to malpractice beliefs," he said.

James Bodary from the Michigan Defense Trial Counsel, which argues on behalf of doctors and lawyers and not victims, said his organization supports some of the legislation, but opposes some as well, including opposition to SB 1116.

"We have serious concerns of what would be a professional judgment defense," he said, noting that he believes in the ability to use a civil jury to decide such cases rather than leaving it up to judges alone first.

Mr. Bodary also said his organization had some concerns about a provision in one of the bills that deems "household and other service" as noneconomic damage, which has a cap on the amount of money victims can receive.

"In fairness to the other side, calling an apple an orange doesn't make it an orange," he said, referring to the instances in which the victim of malpractice is the largest or most significant breadwinner for the family. "Let's be truthful about the legislation we pass."

Other somewhat surprising comments were intended to come a physician in opposition to the bill, as most physicians have so far been in support of the bill.

Elliot Grysen is a licensed physician in the state of Michigan, but also serves as a medical malpractice attorney. Though time ran short and he was unable to testify, he supplied a statement noting his strong opposition to the package.

"Patient safety requires that hospitals and providers be accountable for the decisions and actions they take that determine whether Michigan residents will receive quality care," he said in a statement. "All of Michigan families deserve the safest and highest quality medical care that can be provided. This package of bills will do the opposite."

His statement also notes that a "best estimate is that 200,000 Americans die each year from medical malpractice." Rather than reducing the amount and tragedy of negligent care, he said, these bills grant effective immunity, "holding no corporation or professional legally responsible for deaths and injuries, even when clearly negligent care is provided."

It is unclear when the bills will be voted on, but two packed committee meetings on the topic so far indicate that much more testimony and possibly even changes may still be ahead.

Detroit Regional Chamber Opposes '25 By 25' Campaign

As the 2012 Mackinac Policy Conference opened Tuesday, the conference host, the Detroit Regional Chamber announced its formal opposition to the renewable energy ballot proposal and urged residents not to sign the petitions.

The proposed constitutional amendment would mandate that the state's utilities generate 25 percent of their power from renewable resources by 2025.

Current law requires the utilities to generate 10 percent of their power from renewable resources by 2015.

"The Detroit Regional Chamber strongly opposes the proposed 25 percent renewable energy mandate that would use the state constitution as a means to set a new state energy policy," said Sandy Baruah, Detroit Regional Chamber president and CEO said in a statement. "Michigan is already on an intelligent and affordable clean energy path because of the 2008 energy law, which passed the Legislature with overwhelming bipartisan support. We strongly urge all Michigan families and businesses to oppose this mandate to ensure Michigan can continue to provide its residents and businesses with reliable and affordable electric service."

The 10 percent renewable portfolio standard was put in place in 2008, and was supported by the chamber, saying it was crafted with bipartisan support and input from energy providers. The state's major utilities oppose the 25 by 25 plan.

In its statement, the chamber said it believes the state's constitution should not be used to make energy policy.

Senate Committee Moves Low-Income Energy Bills

Legislation establishing a new low-income energy assistance program in the state was sent to the full Senate on unanimous votes by the Senate Energy and Technology Committee.

{ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=57701&locid=1" } (R-Battle Creek), the committee chair, said he hoped that at least for the first year of the program, though, no utility customer would have to contribute to the system through their utility bills. He hoped the state would appropriate $60 million for the fund.

Already the two largest utilities in Michigan, DTE Energy and Consumers Energy, collect funds from customers to assist low-income individuals, and the state has restrictions on cutting off utility service during the winter.

But { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011SB113401" } and { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011SB113501" } create a fund in the state treasury for low-income energy assistance program that can total $60 million a year in either appropriated funds or collected funds from utility payments.

The bills also establish which individuals would be eligible for assistance, those with household income of 150 percent of the federal poverty guidelines or less, and a crisis period, from November 1 to May 31, in the Lower Peninsula in which funds can be requested. No specific crisis period for the Upper Peninsula was set, and the package dictates that no more than 30 percent of the fund can be spent outside of the crisis area.

Several individuals speaking to the committee opposed the legislation, saying it amounted to a new tax on individuals to pay for the low-income, but Mr. Nofs said for many people in the state the fee - once set by the utilities - will not be new.

The state is trying to create a more efficient method of dealing with a way of helping low-income individuals, Mr. Nofs said.

Jackson Falls Short On Signatures In 13th Congressional

The field for the 13th U.S. House District continues to thin as a result of insufficient petition signatures.

First it was attorney Godfrey Dillard to get the boot. Now it's { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=89401&locid=1" } (D-Detroit), who claimed to have submitted 1,625 petition signatures - more than the 1,000 required.

But Jina Sawani, spokesperson for the Wayne County Clerk's Office, said Ms. Jackson fell short and would be disqualified. She said the exact shortage was still being finalized.

Snyder Declares Emergency, Prohibits Burning As Fire Spreads

With the Duck Lake fire having burned more than 22,000 acres and at least 97 structures, { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=245801&locid=1" } over the weekend declared a state of emergency in the counties affected by the fire and banned open burning in the rest of the region and the northern half of the Lower Peninsula.

Late Friday evening, Mr. Snyder issued a burning ban for 49 counties because of dry conditions in an effort to prevent further wildfires. The state, as well as federal and local agencies and Minnesota, have 214 personnel already committed to fighting the Duck Lake fire. The fire, as of Monday evening, was more than half contained.

The emergency declaration not only allowed for some funds to flow to the firefighting effort, but also allowed the Department of State Police to bring in and coordinate communications equipment.

Under { HYPERLINK "http://www.michigan.gov/documents/snyder/EO_2012-8_387184_7.pdf" \t "blank" }, also issued Friday, the National Guard is also assisting in the effort.

Officials had not released value estimates, but they have confirmed the fire had destroyed 34 homes or cabins, a store and a hotel in the region, as well as some garages and outbuildings.

Though it has been evacuated, the fire has not yet reached Tahquamenon Falls State Park. The park has been closed because of smoke concerns, but will reopen Wednesday.

The area has seen some rain that has helped to control the fire, but also some heavy winds.

"The rainfall will help reduce the risk of wildfires in the short-term for those areas receiving precipitation," said Bill O'Neill, acting chief of the DNR's Forest Resources Division. "However, it's important for the public to understand that the high risk of wildfire is expected to increase again in these areas. With our firefighting resources stretched to the limit, the DNR strongly encourages all residents and visitors in all parts of the state to avoid open burning and use of any fireworks to minimize the possibility of more wildfires."

The fire in the nearby Seney National Wildlife Refuge is nearly contained, having burned about 3,400 acres, federal officials said.

D.E.Q, D.N.R. Budgets Pass Senate

The first two finalized budget bills cleared the Senate on Tuesday as funding for the Department of Environmental Quality and the Department of Natural Resources won approval on 25-10 votes with three senators excused from session.

{ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=25101&locid=1" } (R-Mayville), chair of the Appropriations subcommittees for both departments, spoke to both bills, noting perhaps the most significant appropriation in the DNR budget ({ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011SB96001" }☒)

as the $3 million that will go toward funding a summer program for youth in Detroit, Flint, Pontiac and Saginaw to work in DNR facilities.

Initially, Mr. Snyder had proposed $5 million as part of his special message on public safety aimed at those four cities on the FBI's top ten list for violent crimes.

The conference committee also rejected fee increases for off-road vehicles and use of state shooting ranges, as well as a fee to replace lost recreation certificates.

But four Democrats - { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=39501&locid=1" } of Westland, { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=53401&locid=1" } of Flushing, { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=41301&locid=1" } of Taylor and Senate { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=60101&locid=1" } of East Lansing -voted in favor of the bill.

The budget for the DNR totals $337.88 million, a 1.8 percent cut from the current year and 0.8 percent less than the governor's recommendation. The $19.74 million in general fund, though, is a 7.7 percent increase from current year and $100,000 more than the governor's recommendation.

As for the DEQ budget ({ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011SB95301" }), it totals $431.43 million, a 0.5 percent increase from the current year.

"The House and the Senate were pretty close even before we split budgets," Mr. Green said of the bill. The one difference, he said, came in funding a water withdrawal assessment program to replace part of the revenue expected to be generated by a fee expansion the conference committee rejected.

Senate { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=35001&locid=1" } (D-Detroit), { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=161801&locid=1" } (D-Highland Park) and { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=101501&locid=1" } (R-Hart) were excused from session.

RETIREMENT BOARD: The Senate passed a bill on Tuesday that will allow the retirement portfolio of public employee retirement systems to be more greatly diversified and expand their funds globally.

The bill cleared the Senate on a 30-5 vote, with three senators absent from session. { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=124401&locid=1" } (R-Gaines Township), sponsor of the bill (See { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=news.cfm&article_id=51091" }), added an amendment that would permit a pension board member to be removed from a pension system with an established method of doing so if it is less restrictive than what { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011SB79701" } calls for.

House Passes Senior Protection Bills

The House passed Tuesday the first part of a package of bills designed to protect seniors and other vulnerable adults.

The bills would enact { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=245801&locid=1" }'s proposal for enhancing protections for seniors that moved quickly through the Senate but have taken a more deliberate path through the House.

All of the bills moved from the House Tuesday did so with 110-0 votes.

Among the bills ({ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011SB45401" }, { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011SB45501" }, { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011SB45701" }, { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011SB45901" }, { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011SB46101" }, { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011SB46201" }, { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011SB46401" }, { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011SB46501" }, { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011SB46601" } and { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011SB46801" }) was the creation of senior medical alert program that would require law enforcement agencies to take reports on missing seniors and vulnerable adults and to forward those to neighboring agencies.

County coroners also would be able to create senior death review teams to conduct initial investigations in cases of suspicious deaths.

Parts of the package also enhance penalties for defrauding seniors and allow seniors to testify remotely rather than in court.

Committee Approves Home Visiting Bill

A bill that would allocate home visiting funding to only promising and evidence-based programs was unanimously approved by a House committee Tuesday.

A substitute adopted by the Families, Children and Seniors House Committee made various technical changes to { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011HB557201" } along with adding a timeline provision for programs to move from promising to evidence-based. Timeline plans will be worked out on a program-by-program basis with the state departments of Community Health, Human Services and Education.

The vote was 8-0 on both the substitute and the bill with Rep. Margaret O'Brien (R-Portage) absent. Ms. O'Brien was skeptical of the bill at the May 22 testimony hearing.

"We are grateful that members of the House recognize the importance of funding proven home visiting models," said Amy Zaagman, director of the Michigan Council for Maternal and Child Health, in a statement. "Home visiting models are an effective way to protect children, educate parents and strengthen parenting skills and create safer communities. It is important to embrace proven models in order to receive the maximum benefit from home visiting programs."

Voluntary home visiting programs service at-risk new and expecting families with children up to the age of 5.

In addition to only providing state funding to proven programs, the bill will require a communication system between the three departments involved in the process.

COMMITTEE HEARS TESTIMONY ON NURSING HOME BILL: All testimony was supportive of a bill that would help government and nursing homes save money, use resources more efficiently and communicate more effectively.

{ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=218701&locid=1" } (R-Coldwater), the committee chair, said he intends to follow through with this bill that would streamline the yearly survey and follow-up process for nursing homes throughout the state.

{ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011SB88401" } passed the full Senate with a unanimous vote of 37-0.

Committee Hears Testimony On Social Networking Bill

A bill that would prevent employers and educational institutions from requesting passwords to personal social media accounts received mixed reviews in a House committee Tuesday.

The National Federation for Independent Business Michigan chapter spoke in support of the legislation along with the American Civil Liberties Union. Michigan State University also spoke at the hearing but with a neutral stance. The Michigan Chamber of Commerce opposed the bill, but did not speak.

The NFIB has about 10,000 members in the state; in a survey by the federation 68 percent of its members said they would support legislation that would prohibit employers from requesting user names and passwords to social media.

"With the way people are so sloppy with their privacy settings on Facebook, if you want to find out anything about an employee typically you don't need their permission," said Charlie Owens, state director for the National Federation of Independent Business, in a statement.

The representative from Michigan State University worried about student email accounts, which are issued by the university. He asked that these accounts be treated as employee accounts that the university would continue to have access to when investigating academic integrity or other issues.

The ACLU was in support of the bill..

"We believe that employer policies that request or require employees or applicants to disclose user names or passwords to their private internet and web-based accounts ... constitutes a frightening and illegal invasion of privacy," said Shelli Weisberg, of the American Civil Liberties Union of Michigan.

{ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=179301&locid=1" } (R-Frankenmuth), who is supporting the bill, said the House Energy and Technology Committee would meet for more testimony on { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011HB552301" } and then vote next week.

Sellek To Head Romney Mich. Campaign

John Sellek, a longtime Republican staffer in the legislative and executive branches, will head up Mitt Romney's presidential campaign in Michigan.

Mr. Sellek, most recently press secretary to { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=77201&locid=1" }, is taking an unpaid leave of absence from that job through the November election. Joy Yearout will serve as acting press secretary for Mr. Schuette.

Mr. Sellek's principal job will be to oversee Mr. Romney's Michigan staff. He is in the process of finding a headquarters for the operation, which will be in Lansing.

"I took the job because I'm a Michigan lifer," Mr. Sellek said. "My family is here and my friends are here. I want to do anything I can do to see Michigan come back. And to play even a small role in that is a thrill personally for me. But I think there's no doubt that Mitt is the guy to make that happen, so I want to work to see that through."

Mr. Schuette is a top Romney surrogate in Michigan, serving as one of his campaign co-chairs here.

Mr. Sellek said the Michigan operation would be fully staffed and said the campaign considers Michigan a "target state."

Prior to serving as press secretary for Mr. Schuette and former Attorney General Mike Cox, Mr. Sellek held several roles. He served in the House Republican staff for many years, rising to deputy chief of staff under former Speaker Craig DeRoche. He also worked on the 1994 and 1998 gubernatorial campaigns of former Governor John Engler and then the 2002 gubernatorial bid of then-Lt. Governor Dick Posthumus.

In 2000, he worked on the Michigan and Ohio campaigns for George W. Bush.

Durant Unveils New Ad

Republican senatorial candidate Clark Durant plays up his "rebel with a cause" campaign theme in a new advertisement he unveiled Tuesday.

However, the ad is not up on television yet. Campaign spokesperson Joe Koss said the details of when the ad will air and how big a buy it will be are still getting finalized.

But Mr. Koss said, "It's going to be something that we definitely put some oomph behind in terms of money and stations and points."

The ad opens with Mr. Durant holding a leather jacket and approaching a motorcycle.

"I don't wear a leather jacket or ride a Harley But challenging the status quo? ... You bet I'm a rebel," he says in the ad. "Washington is broken and isn't accountable. Career politicians won't change things. But, this Michigan rebel will."

Mr. Durant goes on to tout his work at founding the Cornerstone charter schools organization in Detroit.

Study: Individual Insurance Policies Don't Meet Basic Requirements

A study comparing individual to group health insurance policies in Michigan and several other states found that the average individual policy did not meet basic coverage requirements the 2010 Affordable Care Act will mandate of policies sold through statewide exchanges.

The study, conducted by the University of Chicago and the firm of Towers Watson, looked at health insurance policies in Michigan, California, Utah, Pennsylvania and Florida. The study looked at the aggregate of all the policies in all the states, and did not break down the different policies in each state.

According to the study, most of the individual plans did not provide enough actuarial coverage to be even be marketed by state exchanges beginning in 2014, as the Affordable Care Act requires.

The federal health care law says to be marketed on the exchange the plans have to provide a minimum of coverage.

Individual plans studied in the review averaged no more than 60 percent coverage of health care costs. The federal act requires at least 60 percent coverage to be marketed on an exchange.

In contrast, coverage of group plans was 83 percent, the study said.

The exchanges are mandated by the federal act, and if a state does not create one, the federal government will do so.

{ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=245801&locid=1" } has called for the Legislature to approve legislation allowing for the exchange, but lawmakers have balked so far. They are waiting to see what the U.S. Supreme Court will say about the act in a decision expected by the end of June.

Island Notes

SWAG BAG GOODIES: This year's swag bag for attendees of the 2012 Mackinac Policy Conference contains the usual party invites, event promotions and of course, Mackinac Island fudge.

But there is also hand sanitizer from the Detroit Regional Chamber and stain remover from Blue Cross Blue Shield, which both come in containers that could be confused with an epi pen. There's a wrist band from Henry Ford Health System, a keychain from Bank of America and Merrill Lynch and a nightlight from Michigan Nightlight, which is said to be illuminating solutions for children.

The highlight though, would have to be the Polisticks from Brogan & Partners, which contains a packet of stickers and features a mock Rick Snyder action figure on the cover, with the warning, "tie not included."

Inside are stickers containing a picture of former Governor Jennifer Granholm in a hoodie with the words "Jenny from the hoodie" above her. A helmetless motorcycle rider next to the phrase "Organ donor on wheels" and one with { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=105001&locid=1" } labeled as a "State treasure."

STORYBOARDS: New this year is the addition of storyboards to the conference. Julie Stewart, of Duluth, Georgia, will create a graphical representations of the issues discussed throughout each day's sessions.

Ms. Stewart owns Making Ideas Visible. Her illustrations will be posted near lobby at the end of each day and on the chamber's website

INTERACTIVE VOTING: During Wednesday night's discussion on the 2012 presidential election, with Democrat strategist Donna Brazile, and former special assistant to President George W. Bush, Tucker Eskew, the audience will have the ability to vote live with the results displayed on the screen as they happen.

"Democracy has come to Mackinac Island, even though cars have not." Sandy Baruah, president and CEO of the Detroit Regional Chamber, said.

Volume #51, Report #116 -- Wednesday, June 13, 2012

House G.O.P. Passes One Abortion Bill, Shelves Another

A controversial abortion bill won House approval after an extraordinarily heated debate Wednesday to criminalize coercing a woman into having an abortion and require some physicians providing abortions to carry insurance, but House Republicans unexpectedly did not act on the most significant bill that would ban abortions after 20 weeks of gestation.

What was approved was { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011HB571101" } that combines a number of abortion coercion bills that had been working their way through the Legislature. It passed 70-39.

The floor substitute to the bill also changed from a felony to a civil infraction for failing to dispose of aborted fetal remains and changed which doctors would be required to carry $1 million of professional liability insurance.

But the day will likely be remembered for what was some of the more memorable floor speeches in memory. It also quickly made its way into social media circles and nabbed the attention of liberal MSNBC host Rachel Maddow.

{ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=217601&locid=1" } (D-Detroit) took to the floor and decried the fact that Republicans were launching a war on women, but not a war on poverty. She proposed an alternate way to stop unwanted pregnancies and the resulting abortions.

"Stop having sex with us, gentleman. Find somebody else to do it with," Ms. Tlaib said to a smattering of applause. "I ask women across Michigan to boycott men until these bills stop moving out of the House."

It was one of numerous passionate floor speeches on the issue from both sides.

"This bill is not about protecting women's health," said { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=230301&locid=1" } (D-Battle Creek).

Others were more blunt with their objection to the bill they felt was too intrusive into a woman's health issue.

"I'm flattered that you are all so interested in my vagina, but no means no," { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=171401&locid=1" } (D-West Bloomfield) said.

Rep. Margaret O'Brien (R-Portage) said she rejected the notion these bills are a "war on women."

She said it's an umbrella of protection for women to make sure they are not coerced into having an abortion and that institutions that provide abortions meet certain standards.

"I'm very committed to protecting the rights of women and the unborn," said { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=86701&locid=1" } (R-Lake City), the sponsor of the main bill.

{ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=279101&locid=1" } (R-Charlotte), sponsor of the 20-week abortion ban contained in { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011HB571301" }, said her responsibility to women and to society was to make sure the places where "the horrific procedure of abortion takes place are licensed and inspected.

"I would rather there be no abortions performed anywhere, tragically that is not the case," she said.

So emotional was the debate that it overshadowed a major development with the decision of majority Republicans to hold off on { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011HB571201" } and HB 5713, the latter of which contained the most controversial item in the package, banning abortions after 20 weeks with no exception for rape or incest, only one to save the life of the mother.

Ari Adler, spokesperson for House { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=226901&locid=1" } (R-Marshall), said the House would not be voting on those bills this week.

He said Mr. Bolger wants to review the language in the bills to make sure they adhere to the Constitution. Abortion rights advocates say the 20-week law would violate the Roe vs. Wade decision that legalized abortion.

"We want to address some concerns that were brought to our attention," Mr. Adler said. "We're not done with that issue. We need to look at it further."

Ms. Shaughnessy said she believes the House should act deliberately and not rush the bill.

"I certainly don't have a problem with that," she said.

She said she believes the caucus does support her bill, but said concerns have been raised about constitutionality and with the 20-week time frame.

David Maluchnik, spokesperson for the Michigan Catholic Conference, said in an email that it sounded like Mr. Bolger was taking a prudent approach to the bill.

Before the debate began, the House dispensed with all of the Democratic amendments, several of which attempted to turn the tables and require some of same restrictions placed on abortion providers on facilities that do vasectomies.

{ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=151201&locid=1" } (D-Onondaga), the sponsor of one of those amendments began shouting, saying she wanted to speak to it, but was not allowed.

As she walked away, she shouted "vasectomy!" Her amendment would have required a physician to determine that a man seeking a vasectomy needed the procedure because his life was in danger or a medical emergency existed.

One amendment by Rep. Stacey Erwin Oakes (D-Saginaw) stated that before a physician could prescribe medication for erectile dysfunction, a physician has to perform a digital rectal exam and cardiac stress test.

Planned Parenthood, though, is planning another protest day at the Capitol on Thursday morning, encouraging members on Facebook and Twitter to meet at the Capitol.

On Tuesday, about 200 Planned Parenthood supporters in pink shirts stood outside the Capitol before session, chanting and holding signs and then shouted in the lobby and tried disrupting session on several occasions. It was the largest and most vocal protest against anti-abortion legislation in years.

But on Wednesday, the gallery was relatively empty. Ms. Brown had several boxes containing 10,000 cards from constituents from around the state indicating opposition to the bills, but those were removed from the floor by a House sergeant.

Mr. Adler said such displays or presentations are a violation of House rules.

Prior to the vote, the Michigan Catholic Conference released a video message from policy advocate Rebecca Mastee, saying the package contains common sense measures.

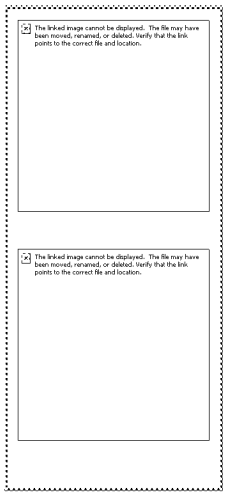
"Considering that only 4 of the 32 abortion clinics in Michigan are licensed, which abortion advocates recognize, don't women in Michigan deserve better?" she said. "Others have erroneously stated that this legislation is a politically motivated attack on women. However, legislators were informed of egregious abortion industry practices back in March. Should they simply sit idle while verifiable reports of dirty and unlicensed facilities circulate? No, because women deserve better."

M.P.S.E.R.S. Deal Tentatively In Place As Leaders Seek Votes

Top Republican legislative leaders have a tentative agreement in place for overhauling the Michigan Public School Employees Retirement System, and it would retain the hybrid pension plan for new hires.

Some Republican senators continue to push for ending the hybrid plan for new hires and instead placing them all into a 401(k)-style defined contribution plan, but House { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=226901&locid=1" } (R-Marshall) and Senate { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=55701&locid=1" } (R-Monroe) are rounding up the votes to pass the legislation Thursday before the Legislature adjourns for the summer.

Mr. Richardville told reporters Wednesday evening after the Senate adjourned that an agreement is in place.



Senate { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=55701&locid=1" } (top) and House { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=226901&locid=1" } are working on getting the votes for the deal.

"I think in general they (the caucus) want to make sure we do the health care thing, but we'll make sure we get another vote on it down the road so they'll have a chance to speak up and maybe the numbers will even show that they were right all along," he said. "I'm supportive of the defined contribution though, I think that's the way to go but we'll see what the study says."

Mr. Richardville said the study would cost $100,000.

Sources familiar with the bill who spoke on condition of anonymity said the new H-3 substitute for { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011SB104001" } would see other changes from the H-2 version now pending on the House floor.

The major change would be an attempt to address stranded costs that result from school districts privatizing services like food, transportation and janitorial. With those workers no longer school employees, there are fewer workers paying into MPSERS, putting considerable pressure on the system.

To address that factor, the bill would require school districts to contribute to MPSERS based on 11.9 percent of their expenditures starting in the 2013-14 school year instead of payroll. That way, the funds districts spend on contracts for privatized services would be counted toward MPSERS. This change would not affect other participants in MPSERS like public universities and community colleges, which would continue to pay based on 24.46 percent of their payroll.

And the changes to the bill also would mean no longer requiring all retirees to pay 20 percent of the cost of their health insurance premium. Current retirees 65 and older would continue to pay 10 percent under the revised plan.

As is the case in the H-2 substitute, the bill would require those in the basic pension plan to contribute 4 percent of their salary to the system and those in the Member Investment Program to contribute 7 percent. Currently, those in the basic plan pay nothing, and those in the MIP plan, the bulk of those in the pension system, pay 3.9 percent.

{ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=93801&locid=1" } (R-St. Clair) said he was disappointed in the agreement.

"If we're really going to be serious about protecting not only the retirees but also the taxpayers of the state of Michigan, we've got to shutter that system," he said of the hybrid plan that provides new hires with some pension benefit and some defined contribution. "There's been a 50-year experience on public employee pensions - that doesn't work."

A significant unknown headed into Thursday is how the approach to dealing with stranded costs by having school districts pay into MPSERS based on their expenditures will play with rank-and-file lawmakers. Sources said there is some reticence among legislative Republicans toward this proposal because they see it as penalizing those districts that have put services up for competitive bidding in an effort to save money.

Mr. Pavlov is one of those lawmakers critical of this piece of the legislation.

"We're penalizing good behavior," he said, noting that the best practices language in the K-12 budget has rewarded districts for contracting out such services.

The expectation Thursday is that House Republicans will caucus on the proposal and then vote shortly after session convenes at 10 a.m. Sources said there were 14 of the 64 members of the House Republican caucus that at one point were cool to the plan, but it appeared Mr. Bolger was having success in bringing some of those members aboard to get the 56 votes he needs.

If it passes the House, then the question is whether Mr. Richardville can find 20 votes in his caucus to pass the plan, a task that could prove a little tricky considering 20 Republican senators voted to end the hybrid plan and shift to defined contribution when the bill first passed the Senate.

Mr. Pavlov said he did not know whether enough votes existed to stop the bill in the Senate.

"We had 20 votes to convert to defined contribution in the Senate, and that's the only record we've got to look at," he said.

Battle Over Collective Bargaining Is On

Less than an hour after unions submitted more than double the signatures necessary for a proposal that would enshrine collective bargaining rights in the Constitution and nullify a series of laws passed in the last 18 months, business organizations announced an unprecedented coalition to oppose that proposal and several others that could appear on the November ballot.

Department of State officials have until September to analyze the signatures through a random sample to determine whether the Protect Our Jobs organization met the minimum number needed of 322,609.

"It far exceeded anyone's expectations," Protect Our Jobs spokesperson Dan Lijana said. "That's why we submitted them now. We had more than double what's required by the state."

The proposal is expected to be the biggest fight on the ballot this year. Already there is worry among House Democrats that union money that usually would go toward helping their campaigns will be focused on the collective bargaining measure.

The union effort has been shrouded in near total secrecy. Leaders of the proposal have refused to say what laws the proposal would void, other than a possible right-to-work law. Since the news conference to announce the proposal, the leader of Protect Our Jobs, Ken Brock, has declined all interview requests. The organization didn't even announce its plan in advance to submit its 684,286 signatures Tuesday.

Mr. Lijana said he did not know when the organization would begin television advertising and direct mail, saying its efforts had solely been focused to this point on collecting petition signatures.

Unions launched the collective bargaining proposal after seeing an avalanche of new laws passed by the Republican-led Legislature and signed by { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=245801&locid=1" } eliminating or curbing union rights.

Among the new laws unions found abhorrent:

*Enabling state-appointed emergency manager to void the contracts of local government and school district workers;
*Prohibiting university graduate student research assistants from unionizing;
*Barring several subjects from collective bargaining between teachers and school districts, such as performance evaluation systems and district policy for firing or disciplining employees subject to the tenure law; and
*Setting limits on how much public entities will contribute toward their employees' health benefits with the workers required to pay the rest.

The move also is a pre-emptive strike to prevent the Legislature and Mr. Snyder from enacting a right-to-work law that would bar mandatory union membership for employees of entities that have collective bargaining agreements with their workers. Some Republicans have called for pushing such legislation, but Mr. Snyder has resisted it and the movement toward a bill has faded in deference to fighting the ballot proposal.

Protect Our Jobs said in a statement that more than 85 percent of its signatures were collected by 41,000 volunteers.

Signatures for ballot proposals are due to the Department of State by July 9. There are at least 10 other proposals having petitions circulated, six of which have a realistic chance of getting the signatures needed to qualify for the ballot.

One advantage the collective bargaining proposal could have is that it would be at worst the second proposal listed on the ballot as opposed to being the last one voters have to sift through. If the referendum to repeal the Local Government and School District Fiscal Accountability Act, also known as PA 4 of 2011, fails to make the ballot because of legal battle over the point-size used on its petition heading, then the collective bargaining proposal would be the first one on that portion of the ballot.

Almost immediately after unions submitted the signatures, a huge coalition of business groups announced it had formed a unified committee, Citizens Protecting Michigan's Constitution, to oppose many of the proposed ballot measures. Gongwer News Service first reported business groups' plan to organize against the ballot proposals in this unusual fashion.

The members of the committee include the Associated Builders and Contractors of Michigan, Business Leaders for Michigan, the Detroit Regional Chamber, the Grand Rapids Area Chamber of Commerce, the Michigan Chamber of Commerce, the Michigan Manufacturers Association, the Michigan Association of Realtors, the Small Business Association of Michigan, and the West Michigan Policy Forum.

"Job creators and taxpayers are opposed to special interest attempts to manipulate the Michigan Constitution," said Rich Studley, president and CEO of the Michigan Chamber of Commerce. "This coalition is committed to educating Michigan voters on the perils of these proposed initiatives and the risks involved if they pass."

At this point, the coalition is opposing the proposal requiring utilities to generate 25 percent of their energy from renewable sources by 2025, the collective bargaining proposal, and the proposed constitutional amendment ensuring the state's home help workers can unionize, said Jim Holcomb, general counsel for the Michigan Chamber of Commerce.

So far, the coalition has not formally decided to support retaining PA 4 although all members of the coalition want to see the law kept in place. The coalition is taking a wait-and-see posture on the other proposals to see if they make the ballot, such as those that would restrict the ability of the Legislature to raise taxes, prevent new international border crossings without a public vote and expand the number of casinos in the state.

The strategy in general was to emphasize to voters to simply vote no on all proposals to avoid cluttering the Constitution. That would allow for a consolidated messaging and fundraising effort instead of trying to fight the proposals one by one.

"It's a natural extension," Mr. Holcomb said. "A lot of people have looked at these and thought how damaging these will be for the state of Michigan. It just makes sense to come together in a coalition format and fight them and to really take the message across the state of Michigan."

The Mackinac Center for Public Policy also denounced the collective bargaining proposal.

"This ballot measure is a radical constitutional amendment that makes government-sector unions more powerful than the Legislature," said Joseph G. Lehman, president of the Mackinac Center for Public Policy, which condemned the union proposal although it is not part of the coalition against multiple proposals. "If it passes, unions will set public policy in secret negotiations with their government employers. Lawmakers won't be able to override anything they decide."

Detroit Counsel's Lawsuit Over Consent Agreement Dismissed

MASON - Moving quickly Wednesday, Ingham Circuit Judge William Collette dismissed a lawsuit brought by Detroit's corporation counsel against the consent agreement the city had reached with the state, saying that only the mayor and city council could direct the counsel to bring the lawsuit.

"I've been a city attorney," Mr. Collette told lawyers as he listened, almost impatiently, to the arguments raised by Detroit deputy counsel James Noseda before ruling from the bench in the Ingham County Courthouse. "This lawsuit is not valid. It is dismissed."

The city has a consent agreement with the state, Mr. Collette said, and "people need to learn to live with this and move forward."

In a statement, { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=105001&locid=1" } said with the decision, the state could continue to "work collaboratively" with the city on implementing its financial turnaround plan.

Detroit Mayor Dave Bing appeared relieved at the judge's quick decision.

Detroit Mayor Dave Bing told reporters the decision means the city can now return to the business of implementing major changes.

"This legal challenge has been an unfortunate distraction, but now it's time for the city to move forward," he said. "The city is still in a crisis, and we can't have all these distractions and think we're going to bring the city back."

Not said directly by Mr. Dillon was that the dismissal should also clear the way for up to $80 million in revenue sharing to go to the city. The Department of Treasury had said it would withhold those funds if the lawsuit continued.

Mike Hodge, the attorney hired by Mr. Bing to argue for dismissing the lawsuit, said that if the lawsuit was not dismissed, the city could see payless paydays and essentially no money to operate as early as Friday.

Speaking to reporters after the hearing that resulted in the case being dismissed, Mr. Noseda said he did not know if Corporation Counsel Krystal Crittendon would appeal the action.

Ms. Crittendon brought the lawsuit without either the Detroit City Council or Mr. Bing formally asking for it to be brought (although it later emerged that members of the council and Mr. Bing tacitly blessed the move in a closed meeting). And Mr. Noseda said to the court there was a question of law that should be heard if Ms. Crittendon could bring that action. He said it was disappointing that Mr. Collette had not heard arguments on that issue or ruled on that basis.

But Mr. Hodge said if Ms. Crittendon had a reasonable concern over her ability to bring the action, Mr. Collette decided that question for her. "If the corporation counsel is truly concerned about her ethical duties, this judge has decided it for her," Mr. Hodge said.

The case marked the latest incident in which Mr. Collette has made a major ruling regarding the state's emergency manager law or the process of instituting financial repair programs for communities.

He remarked on this, saying, "I don't know why I keep getting these."

His earlier rulings, related to the emergency manager appointed for Highland Park schools and for the financial review team for Detroit, had to do with whether the financial review team had to meet in public under provisions of the 1976 Open Meetings Act. He held they did, but was overturned by the Court of Appeals.

This situation was unique, and Mr. Collette said he had never had such a hearing.

From the moment he walked into the courtroom, it was clear that however he ruled, it would be with dispatch. Within the first minute, he granted a motion to allow Mr. Bing's attorney to intervene in the case.

Ms. Crittendon had argued in her lawsuit that the consent agreement was void because the state owed the city millions in revenue sharing monies, as well as funds for a variety of issues including parking tickets. Mr. Noseda said the city cannot have a contract with a creditor.

But Michelle Brya, representing the state, said many of the issues raised in the lawsuit were being handled administratively.

She also argued that the corporation counsel could not bring the action in the first place.

And it was on the ability of the counsel to bring the lawsuit without the authorization of either Mr. Bing or the council that Mr. Collette focused in his questioning of Mr. Noseda.

Under the city's charter, the Law Department is an independent agency and the counsel has the right to act "to remedy a charter violation," Mr. Noseda said.

In effect, he said, it was no different than the city pursuing people who did not pay their taxes. The mayor and council do not rule on those matters either.

But Mr. Collette said that position effectively gives the corporation counsel veto power over contracts.

A corporation counsel cannot have the ability the make decisions on suing, Mr. Collette said. That has to be the function of the mayor and council.

Most of the people watching the hearing were reporters, but a small busload of city residents was present and clearly unhappy with the ruling. As reporters spoke to the attorneys afterwards, one woman shouted out that Mr. Collette had "ruled against the people."

In his press conference, Mr. Bing said the city would make the $34 million bond payment as required Friday under a complex financing deal with the state that prevented the city from running out of cash in April and the Financial Advisory Board would hold its first meeting that same day at Cobo Center. The Detroit City Council has yet to appoint its two members to the board, but Councilmember Ken Cockrel Jr. said via his Twitter account he expected that to happen shortly. Mr. Bing said even if the council has not appointed its members, the board would still meet.

Mr. Bing said he held no personal animus toward Ms. Crittendon, saying she did what she thought was right.

"I am hopeful that all of us from a leadership standpoint here in this city can put this behind us and start concentrating and focusing on the work that needs to be done to bring our city back," he said.

House Panel Blocks Bridge Spending; Bridge Co. Attacks Pending N.I.T.C. Deal

A negative supplemental appropriation approved Wednesday morning by the House Appropriations Committee would now also block state spending on the expected interlocal agreement to build the New International Trade Crossing bridge.

The agreement is expected to include the Michigan Strategic Fund as a partner in the bridge, and the amendment adopted to { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011SB87101" } would prevent any spending from the Strategic Fund on the bridge construction.

{ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=175101&locid=1" } offered language to stop spending on New International Trade Crossing.

The amendment blocks spending of "state appropriations" on the bridge, which { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=175101&locid=1" } (R-Grandville), sponsor of the amendment, said would block any spending except potentially the tribal casino revenues in the Strategic Fund.

The money from the casinos is "a different animal," Mr. Agema said, and it would likely fall to the attorney general to decide if the amendment covers it.

The Strategic Fund would also be blocked, under the amendment, from entering into a contract regarding the bridge. Mr. Agema said it would again be up to the attorney general to determine if an interlocal agreement would be considered a contract under the language.

But he said his goal was not to block the bridge. "My goal is to stop spending money we didn't authorize," he said.

As to whether the language could block the agreement expected to be announced Friday, he said, "If it derails it, then it shouldn't have been entered into in the first place."

Sara Wurfel, press secretary for { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=245801&locid=1" }, said the new language was no different from past appropriations language on the bridge project.

"We've been clear all along that Michigan taxpayers would not pay for this bridge." Ms. Wurfel said. "There has been no additional money added to or appropriated for the bridge in the new budget. And no MSF funds would be used either. Period."

The bill moves a variety of funds, but overall cuts $259.66 million gross, $168.85 million general fund from the current year budget.

The largest change is $208.6 million ($105.33 million GF) cut from the Department of Community Health. Another $85.45 million ($75.73 million GF) is cut from the Department of Human Services.

The cuts reflect recent Revenue Estimating Conference projections of cash assistance and Medicaid caseloads.

The bill also replaces $4.2 million, all general fund, that was expected as savings from privatizing residential care aides at the Grand Rapids Veterans Home. The move is currently being challenged in court.

The panel dropped plans, approved by the Senate, to use $15 million general fund through the Strategic Fund to cover origination fees under the Agriculture Disaster Loan Program.

The committee also dropped $2.15 million ($1.85 million GF) to restore payments in lieu of taxes through the Department of Treasury.

The House included $50,000 to cover the potential costs of an appeal of the state's redistricting, but, under an amendment offered by { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=31101&locid=1" } (D-Detroit) that divided the Republican caucus, the money would have to be returned to the general fund if the appeal is not filed (as Mr. Durhal expected it would not be) rather than being left in the department to be put to other use.

The bill was reported 22-0 with four members abstaining.

Meanwhile, owners of the Ambassador Bridge are showing no signs of doubt about their effort to amend the Constitution barring new international border crossings from being constructed without a statewide public vote even as an expected announcement Friday on a new bridge connecting Detroit and Windsor, Ontario, looms.

In a post on the website of The People Should Decide, the committee supporting the ballot proposal, backers of the effort said they would keep fighting and that any announcement Friday is meaningless.

"The governor said he plans to announce a 'deal' with Prime Minister Harper of Canada," the statement says. "Please note how hard he is trying to show by this announcement that his new Bridge deal is 'finalized,' and that the 'construction of the government bridge is underway.' Nothing could be further from the truth! You may ask ...what does this mean for our petition drive? The answer is simple... NOTHING - as a vote of the people trumps the intentions of a single bureaucrat."

Manuel "Matty" Moroun, the owner of the Ambassador, will need to collect more than 322,000 petition signatures before July 9 to get his proposal on the ballot. He is funding an unusual television advertising campaign urging voters to sign petitions. Those ads also serve the dual purpose of continuing to turn public opinion against the proposed new bridge.

"Remember the announcement by Gov. Snyder is nothing more than a political move of desperation," the website posting says. "His objective is to prevent the petitions from being completed because they will force Gov. Snyder to listen to the people of Michigan!"

Ms. Wurfel said she had no information to offer on the status of the bridge.

As Gongwer News Service reported Tuesday, Mr. Snyder and Canadian Prime Minister Stephen Harper are expected to formally sign an interlocal agreement to set up an authority that would oversee the construction of the new bridge.

Senate Slows Pace on Detroit Lighting Authority Bills

Although it was slated to be voted on Wednesday, the Senate opted to wait on two bills that would establish a lighting authority for various municipalities, most notably Detroit, as well as a funding mechanism for that authority.

"We've got some people asking questions about it, what the board make-up is (for example)," Senate { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=55701&locid=1" } (R-Monroe) told reporters after session adjourned. "If they're all appointed by the mayor of Detroit, is that okay or is that not okay? Should the Legislature and/or governor have some input into this too since we're approving it? Some of the monies in that city (Detroit) have disappeared or are not being treated with the kind of respect that I think we treat it with up here, so maybe we should just have somebody there."

Though the bills are not necessarily Detroit-centric, the city would greatly benefit from them given that their utilities pay a tax, and part of that revenue - about $12.5 million - would have to go toward funding Lighting Board activities such as replacing or installing new lighting throughout the city.

Currently the legislation ({ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011HB568801" }) calls for a five-member board to be appointed by the city's mayor and to be include professionals such as an engineer, lawyer and accountant.

"One suggestion was maybe you go from five members to eight members (on the board) with the governor, the speaker, and the majority leader appointing someone so that the Legislature and the administration has a look at it, maybe only in certain-size cities or something like that," Mr. Richardville said of discussions within the caucus.

But another Republican senator, speaking on the condition of anonymity, said that the caucus also has some concerns that it doesn't have as much support from Senate Democrats as the GOP expects. Consequently, the bills - which also include { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011HB570501" } - would stand less of a chance of passing if they could not garner support from senators within those communities.

Mr. Richardville said he is hopeful that the Senate can take another crack at the legislation on its last day before summer recess tomorrow. If not, he again emphasized the next day the Senate is supposed to meet on July 18 as one that will be consumed with high-priority items such as these bills.

DETROIT INCOME TAX: The Senate also did not vote on { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011SB97001" }, a bill that would freeze the city's income tax rate at 2.5 percent for residents and 1.25 percent for non-residents (subscribers please note: a story in some editions of the Tuesday Michigan Report inaccurately described the impact of the bill on the city's income tax rate).

Unemployment Rate Rises For First Time In A Year

{ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=245801&locid=1" } and legislative Republicans have touted the steady decline in Michigan's unemployment rate for the past year as evidence their policies are working, but the state announced Wednesday the first uptick in unemployment since May 2011.

The state's unemployment rate edged up to 8.5 percent in May from 8.3 percent in April.

"Michigan's labor market in May and throughout early 2012 has been stable," said Rick Waclawek, director of the Bureau of Labor Market Information and Strategic Initiatives, in a statement. "The minor upturn in the state's jobless rate in May was partially due to individuals entering or re-entering the workforce looking for jobs."

Employment fell from April by 2,000 although it is still up 94,000 for the year. Unemployment rose by 6,000, but is still down 98,000 for the year.

In previous months, as the rate plummeted, Mr. Snyder would announce the new rate on his social media accounts prior to the release from DTMB. That was not the case this time. Democrats jumped all over the governor and legislative Republicans on the issue.

"We're seeing unemployment rise for the first time in a year, and the only place Lansing Republicans can look is in the mirror," said Zack Pohl, executive director of Progress Michigan. "A massive tax cut for big corporations was passed under the veil of job creation, but instead of creating more and better jobs, greedy CEOs are pocketing the profits."

Senate Democratic spokesperson Bob McCann said in a Twitter account post, "I assume @onetoughnerd will be taking responsibility for the rise in unemployment after doing same for recent small dips in it."

Job cuts were recorded in manufacturing (-4,000) and professional and business services (-3,000) while job gains were posted in financial activities (3,000), and trade, transportation, and utilities (3,000).

The state's largest region, the Detroit-Warren-Livonia metropolitan statistical area, saw its unemployment rate rise from 9.2 percent to 9.6 percent.

Despite the decline, the labor statistics bureau noted that the statewide job count for May was the same as the average for the first five months of the year.

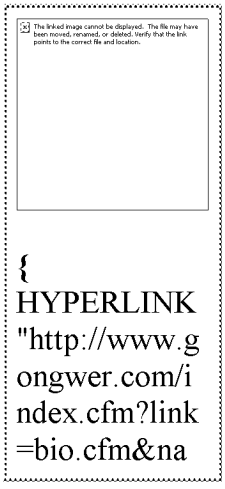
Snyder press secretary Sara Wurfel disputed the contention from Democrats that the numbers show signs of trouble in the state's economic recovery.

"There are so many other signs that show that Michigan is in fact headed in the right direction," she said. "As an example right today we have a national economic gardening conference today right in Michigan and the excitement and enthusiasm for Michigan today was apparent."

Senate Clears Election Reform Package

The Senate passed several bills that will modify campaign finance laws and protect the integrity of elections, { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=52301&locid=1" } said on Wednesday.

"I think it's really important because we want to encourage as many people as we can to register and to vote," she said, speaking with reporters during the session. "But we also need to protect the integrity in the system and that's why we call it our safe package for secure and fair elections."



meid=52301&locid=1" } spoke in support of the election reform package that cleared the Senate on Wednesday.

One of the bills, { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011HB505801" }, which would prohibit a candidate committee from spending campaign funds on personal legal battles, passed unanimously. Another bill, { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011HB505901" } modifies ballot questions and political party committee filing requirements. { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=251401&locid=1" } (R-Canton Township) was the only senator to vote against the bill earning a 36-1 vote.

A bill requiring photo identification to obtain an absentee ballot ({ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011HB506101" }), in addition to other provisions, cleared the Senate on a 26-11 party line vote.

"Recently the auditor general said we had 1,500 people, of the small number that they checked, that were either dead or in prison that had voted," Ms. Johnson continued on the package. "I think they're clerical errors, but again, it shows vulnerability in the system. We've also had the Department of Justice tell us they have far too many people registered to vote in 20 counties because not that many people live there. So we know we have vulnerabilities, and we know that if we have a good, Qualified Voter File, we're going to have good elections."

Some opponents have alleged the legislation amounts to "voter suppression," but Ms. Johnson dismissed the allegations as partisan politics.

"To tell you the truth, it's either partisan theatrics, drama, or they don't understand the bills," she said of the allegations. "Everything in there is to encourage people to vote. Everything that we're doing makes it convenient to vote."

Ms. Johnson said 99.5 percent of eligible voters in the state have some form of identification and that the 0.5 percent that may not were considered in the provision in HB 5061 that permits a voter to sign an affidavit assuring his or her identity.

The Senate also passed { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011HB506201" } on a 36-1 vote, with { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=161201&locid=1" } (D-Detroit) voting against the bill that calls for those who solicit people to register to vote to go through a training program first.

"This is widely supported by local clerks, both Democrats and Republicans," Ms. Johnson said. "What it is, is a 15-20 minute educational process for one person from the organization who will go back and spread the word."

Similar legislation in the Senate that would make multiple changes to election law did not fare as well, however.

The Senate concurred in House changes to { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011SB75101" }, { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011SB75401" }, { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011SB80301" }, { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011SB82301" }, { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011SB82401" } and { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011SB82501" } on a 26-11 party-line vote with those bills now headed to { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=245801&locid=1" }. But { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011HB529701" }, { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011SB75201" } and { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011SB75301" }, also part of the package, received unanimous support 37-0. Senate { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=60101&locid=1" } (D-East Lansing) was absent from the afternoon session in which the Senate voted on these bills.

Senate Finance Moves Income Tax Reduction, Exemption Bills

House bills that would speed up an income tax rate reduction and increase the personal exemption from $3,700 to $3,950 were reported Wednesday from the Senate Finance Committee.

But the bills ({ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011HB569901" } and { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011HB570001" }) drew criticism from { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=155301&locid=1" } (D-Ann Arbor). The bill would provide a 0.1 percent cut on an individual's income taxes on October 1, rather than on the currently scheduled January 1.

Ms. Warren questioned the estimated $28 that an individual would end up receiving a year, saying that a single person could "blow through" that kind of money and that perhaps it would be better spent invested in programs that could fund schools, police and fire departments.

"If you want to say that we should take this money and invest it into programs rather than entrusting the taxpayers to invest it as they see fit ... I'm going to strongly disagree with you," shot back { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=292001&locid=1" } (R-Vulcan), the bill sponsor..

The legislation was reported on a 6-1 vote, with Ms. Warren the only senator in objection to it and its counterpart, HB 5700.

That bill would increase the personal exemption from $3,700 per person to $3,950 on October 1. It would then increase by $50 effective January 1, 2014, and rise to $4,100 effective January 1, 2017.

Howard Ryan, the Department of Treasury's legislative liaison, spoke in support of both the bills.

"We are very much in support of the bill," he said. "We think it's a very fair and efficient way to deal with the tax structure."

Land Purchase Cap Headed To Snyder

A bill limiting the amount of land the state can own is on its way to { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=245801&locid=1" } after the House rejected a change from committee that altered a line in the state making a good portion of the bill deal only with the Upper Peninsula.

In the House Natural Resources, Tourism and Outdoor Recreation Committee, an amendment from { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=206201&locid=1" } (R-Traverse City) moved the line from north of the Mason-Arenac line to apply just to the UP, without altering the amount of land in that portion of the cap.

The House restored the language dealing with the line on Wednesday and the Senate concurred with the changes to { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011SB24801" }. It restricts the state to owning no more than 3.91 million acres of land in that portion.

It passed the House on a 58-52 vote and cleared the Senate 24-12.

Also as part of the bill, the Department of Natural Resources is tasked with developing a land acquisition plan for each region of the state by October 1, 2014. It must then be approved by both the House and Senate. If that is accomplished, the bill states the intent is for the cap to then be removed, but if not, the cap stays in place.

Sara Wurfel, Mr. Snyder's press secretary, said the administration had been working hard with legislators to finalize an agreement.

"The governor thinks it's very important that we have to be good fiscal stewards of our land," she said.

MARRIAGE BILLS: The House unanimously passed a three-bill package that will allow local judges and magistrates to perform marriage ceremonies outside their home county.

The Senate unanimously passed the bills ({ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011SB69801" }, { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011SB69901" } and { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011SB70001" }) in January.

The practice is allowed now, but only if the official seeks approval from the State Court Administrative Office.

Liquor License At Big House, 911 Fee Get Senate Stamp Of Approval

When it was not caucusing or recessing for committee meetings, the Senate approved numerous pieces of legislation on Wednesday, including granting the University of Michigan the ability to sell liquor at the Winter Classic hockey game it will host next year at Michigan Stadium.

{ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011HB561101" } cleared the Senate unanimously 37-0, with { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=161801&locid=1" } (D-Highland Park) absent at the time of voting.

The Senate also approved a bill that will force users of prepaid wireless phones to pay a 911 fee when purchasing their phones and any future minutes for it.

Previously the cost was charged at the wholesale level and customers then paid sales tax at the retail level, but now both will be paid at the retail level, { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=282201&locid=1" } (R-Lawton), the bill's sponsor, has said (See { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=news.cfm&article_id=51085" }).

(R-Hamburg), { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=54001&locid=1" } (R-Grand Blanc) and { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=79201&locid=1" } (R-Sterling Heights) voted against the legislation that passed 29-7.

BRIDGE CARD REQUIREMENTS: Two pieces of legislation that tack on additional Bridge Card regulations cleared the Senate on Wednesday as well.

{ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011HB472401" } , which would make people pay to replace a Bridge Card if lost a second time, moved 27-10 along party lines, with { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=43601&locid=1" } of Warren the only Democrat that voted for the bill.

"The whole issue of lost or stolen Bridge Cards is already in effect," said { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=209301&locid=1" } (D-Southfield). "The Department of Human Services deemed that they had the authority to implement this program some time ago, so it is already in effect. What this bill would do is it would put it into statute. My opposition to this is that if it is in statute, just as the department put it into effect, if they say this is not working or there is a better way of doing this, then now you can't do that. You must come back to the Legislature and have us vote to take it back out of statute again."

The Senate also ordered enrolled { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011SB10901" } , which would prohibit the use of Bridge Cards in casino ATMs.

"Cash assistance should be temporary and only for basic needs - not blackjack and booze," { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=82701&locid=1" } (R-Grand Ledge), sponsor of the bill, said in a statement. "My measure is one of many that have been passed by the Legislature that will ensure assistance goes only to those who truly need it, not those who want to gamble away taxpayers' hard earned money."

HOME VISITATION: The Senate also passed { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011HB557201" } , a bill that would require home visiting service providers to use evidence-based or promising program models to continue receiving state funding.

"We are thrilled that the House and Senate have approved this measure that will make such a positive impact on the lives of many Michigan children and families," Amy Zaagman, director of the Michigan Council for Maternal and Child Health, said in a statement. "We look forward to Governor Snyder signing the legislation soon."

The bill was passed unanimously, 37-0, with { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=161801&locid=1" } (D-Highland Park) absent at the time of voting.

{ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=284201&locid=1" } (R-Alto) sponsored the legislation and also issued a statement upon final passage of the bill.

"By improving the lives of Michigan's most high-risk families, home visiting models benefit children, parents and the community as a whole," she said.

The legislation returns to the House for concurrence before going to { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=245801&locid=1" }.

Capital Outlay Supplemental On Its Way To The Governor

A bill that would provide $613.1 million for 18 infrastructure projects at nine public universities and nine community colleges passed in the Senate on Wednesday after a near unanimous vote.

The projects were not included in the current year budget but had already been given initial approval by the Legislature (See { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=news.cfm&article_id=51111" }).The state's share of the bill will be $304.5 million while universities and community colleges will chip in $308.7 million.

The bill ({ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011HB554101" }) ultimately cleared on a 36-1 vote, as Senate { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=60101&locid=1" } (D-East Lansing) was absent from the afternoon session in which voting took place and { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=52901&locid=1" } (R-Hamburg) voted no.

The bill is identical to the recommendations by { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=245801&locid=1" }, but it does not include boilerplate language relating to reform of the capital outlay process as he had requested.

Natural Resources Trust Fund Debate Lingers

The conference committee on { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011HB536401" } , which will discuss a supplemental to the current year budget, left some scratching their heads when they noticed a meeting for Wednesday night and moved it instead to tomorrow morning.

{ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=95101&locid=1" } (R-Evart) could only say that he had heard through second-hand sources that an agreement on the supplemental (HB 5364) had been reached but as the day went on the deal was less certain.

The Senate did not fund four projects that the House had passed. Those projects would have enabled the Department of Natural Resources to purchase privately owned land otherwise surrounded by current DNR property.

Poll Finds Mixed Feelings On E.M.s In 4 Cities

A survey commissioned by Business Leaders for Michigan shows that voters in the four cities run by emergency managers disapprove of how those managers are running their community, but also think the managers have done a better job than previous elected city leadership.

The survey, conducted by Glengariff Group, asked 200 registered voters each in Benton Harbor, Ecorse, Flint and Pontiac. When assessing the results of all 800 respondents combined, the poll showed 31.4 percent approve of the job performance of their emergency manager while 47.8 percent disapprove.

Respondents also said services had not improved in the past year in their city. Just 13.6 percent said they had improved while 39 percent said they had worsened and another 43 percent said they stayed the same.

But there was some optimism among voters in these four troubled cities.

Some 41.5 percent said they expected conditions in their city to improve in the next year compared to 19.4 percent who said conditions would degrade and 30.5 percent who said they would stay the same.

And when asked who had done a better job managing the city budget, 42 percent said the emergency manager while 19.3 percent said the city council. Some 17.1 percent said neither and another 18.4 percent said they did not know.

In looking at the city-by-city results, it appears emergency managers in Benton Harbor and Ecorse are getting better reviews than those in Flint and Pontiac.

In Benton Harbor, the emergency manager has a 37.5 percent job approval rating compared to 40 percent negative. In Ecorse, 41.5 percent approve of the emergency manager's job performance compared to 38 percent disapprove.

But managers have gotten hostile receptions in Flint and Pontiac. In Flint, just 24 percent approve of the manager's job performance compared to 58 percent who disapprove. And in Pontiac, 22.5 percent approve of the manager while 56 percent disapprove.

However, even in Flint and Pontiac, the manager was given better ratings than the council on handling the budget although those numbers were within the margin of error in Pontiac.

"While the residents of the four cities with emergency managers may not like having an EM, the majority of residents in every case are optimistic about their city's future," said Doug Rothwell, president and CEO of Business Leaders for Michigan, in a statement. "In fact, residents in these communities overwhelmingly believe that their city budget is better managed under the EM than by their city council."

The overall survey has a margin of error of plus or minus 3.5 percentage points. The survey results for each individual city have a margin of error of plus or minus 6.8 percentage points.

Senate Committee Discusses Labor Strike Penalty Bills

Public employees would be fined one day's salary for participating in an illegal strike under legislation considered Wednesday by a Senate committee.

{ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011SB116201" } would require that a public employee would be fined one day's pay for an illegal strike, and his or her bargaining representative would be fined $5,000 per day. A public employer would be fined $5,000 each full or partial day of a prohibited lockout.

{ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011SB70401" } would mandate that a person who violated the prohibitions against preventing lawful work by mass picketing or obstructing the entrance to a place of employment, among others actions, be subject to a civil fine of $1,000 per day. A civil fine of $10,000 would be subject to a union or organization that sponsored or assisted in the prohibited activity.

Under { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011SB116101" } potential employees taking the place of striking workers would not be notified with the fact they are replacing people who are on strike.

The Senate Reforms, Restructuring, and Reinventing Committee heard testimony on the legislation.

{ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=102801&locid=1" } (R-St. Joseph), sponsor of SB 1161, said for 50 years the notice of strike legislation hasn't changed and has become antiquated.

Wendy Block, director of Health Policy and Human Resources at the Michigan Chamber of Commerce, supports the bills. "The bills have a common thread: to make Michigan's labor laws more competitive and protect job providers and employees alike in our labor environment," she said.

She said a state's labor environment is an important factor that companies considered when they open a branch or relocate their companies.

She also said the bills are important because they would empower employers to seek legal remedies and relief, as well as provide a stronger deterrent to the laws that already make various strikes illegal.

{ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=155301&locid=1" } (D-Ann Arbor) said prospective employees have the right to know whether they are replacing striking workers. For example, she said if workers are striking because their employer is not covering a particular benefit, the new workers should know.

Ms. Block said the requirement of a strike notice is unique to Michigan and could have a "chilling impact" on people who might apply for an open position. She said it would not impact future employees because "the employer has made the difficult decision to move forward and start a clean slate."

Charlie Owens, state director for the National Federation of Independent Business, said the bills are necessary, because" it's difficult, expensive, and time consuming to penalize illegally striking employees as the current law is now constructed."

Due to time constraints, opponents to the bills did not get the chance to testify, but people from American Civil Liberties Union of Michigan and United Auto Workers Local 6000 wanted to oppose the bills, and their testimony might be continued next week.

Ray Holman of UAW Local 6000 said in a post from his Twitter account that fining workers $1,000 a day for striking is wrong.

Stallworth Pushes Standards For Consent Agreements

Consent agreements to resolve financial emergencies for local governments would have to include set performance measures and an explicit end date under legislation introduced Wednesday by { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=97101&locid=1" }.

Mr. Stallworth (D-Detroit) said the accountability being required of local governments is not being applied to communities operating under consent agreements.

Rep. Thomas Stallworth has introduced legislation to guide future consent agreements with financially struggling local governments.

"The issues with the consent agreement in Detroit have been appalling," Mr. Stallworth said. "We can't expect Detroit to survive and thrive without some credible process for permanence."

The goal is to create agreements that will improve the operations of communities in distress, said House { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=230301&locid=1 " } (D-Battle Creek).

"Our communities have to emerge from a consent agreement better off than they were," Ms. Segal said.

While the legislation would allow the agreement to be amended, Mr. Stallworth said it was essential that it have an end date, a point at which the community's fiscal emergency is expected to be resolved.

The agreement also would have to include milestones for the manager to meet to show the plans in the agreement are working, Mr. Stallworth said.

And, as long as the agreement is in effect, residents should also know what are considered core services and what will be done to guarantee they are delivered, he said. The agreement would have to define those core services

If the milestones and goals are not being met, there also needs to be consequences for the manager, Ms. Segal said.

Mr. Stallworth said the current plan for Detroit has none of those elements. "What we've experienced going forward is an uncertain, unclear and undefined plan that many feel was coerced," he said.

The plan would not require the Detroit agreement be rewritten, but he said he hoped the leadership there would follow the accountability requirements in the bill anyway.

Mr. Stallworth said he currently has full support of the Detroit Caucus and many other members of the Democratic Caucus, but said he had not yet attracted any support from Republicans for the proposal.

Audit Calls For Improvements In 401(k) Controls

Financial controls over Michigan's 401(k) program need substantial improvements to prevent misstating values in the fund, a financial audit of the program released on Wednesday said.

The { HYPERLINK "http://www.audgen.michigan.gov/finalpdfs/11_12/r071015612.pdf" \t "blank" } found that the lack of controls caused the fund to understate the value of its mutual fund investments in the 2010-11 fiscal year by $184.5 million and to overstate the value of common trust funds by the same $184.5 million.

The audit said these mistakes and others were brought to the attention of the fund, and substantial corrections were made.

The audit, which looked at the fund for the 2009-10 and 2010-11 fiscal years, recommended improvements be made to prevent similar mistakes in the future.

The Department of Technology, Management and Budget, which oversees the plan, agreed with the finding, though it said there had been substantial improvements in the statement preparation procedure and process.

The 401(k) plan for the state was established in the mid-1980s. However, beginning in 1997 all newly hired state workers had to participate in the plan instead of being part of the state's pension system.

The total investments for the fund has been widely varied over the last several years, as the stock markets have gone through wide swings, and as the state has changed some retirement rules.

At the end of the 2010 fiscal year, the fund was up by $314.6 million to a total of nearly $3.1 billion. But with the market turmoil that occurred in August and September 2011 following the fight over raising the U.S. debt ceiling, and the fact that the state created an early retirement program for state workers, the fund was down by some $68 million to $2.996 billion at the end of the 2011 fiscal year.

D.N.R. Cited For Land Acquisition, Disposal Practices

The Department of Natural Resources is not always purchasing and selling land in ways that enhances its mission, and is not adequately melding former correctional facilities back into its recreation programs, a report released Wednesday by Auditor General Thomas McTavish said.

The { HYPERLINK "http://www.audgen.michigan.gov/finalpdfs/11_12/r751015511.pdf" \t "blank" } of the DNR's real estate acquisition, disposition and land holding program, for the period October 2008 through August 2011, found that, as of the end that period, the DNR still held 55.3 percent of the acreage it had determined was non-essential in its review process that began in March 2005.

And, while the DNR had argued it was less costly to hold some of the parcels than sell them, auditors said the department had not conducted a cost-benefit analysis to support that assertion.

Auditors said 2,413 acres of the 9,390 acres would have been appropriate to send to the Land Bank Fast Track Authority.

The department is also still holding six former correctional facilities, including Camp Baraga that was abandoned in 1991, where it has not demolished buildings to meld the lands back into neighboring recreation areas.

"We visited the vacated Camp Waterloo and Camp Brighton correctional facilities and noted significant deterioration, vandalism, fire damage, open entry points in the fence surrounding the correctional facilities, and paperwork strewn about unsecured outbuildings," the report said. "Without appropriate restoration, the State-owned lands that these correctional facilities reside on do not align with DNR's mission and initiatives for natural resources conservation or outdoor recreation opportunities."

Noting that there were formal agreements with the Department of Corrections on some of the facilities requiring that it be responsible for maintaining or demolishing the buildings, auditors recommended that DNR work with Corrections, the Department of Technology, Management and Budget and the Executive Office to have the buildings removed.

But the auditors said the DNR's overall administration of land purchases and sales was effective.

Schuette: Law Allows Local Fireworks Sales Regulation

As long as a local ordinance does not prohibit sales of fireworks, local governments can regulate those sellers, { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=77201&locid=1" } said in an opinion released Wednesday.

{ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=82701&locid=1" } (R-Grand Ledge) asked the question on behalf of a township that has an ordinance requiring temporary vendors using sales tents to register, for a fee, with the township and allow fire department inspections of the facility. He wondered whether the ordinance conflicted with the statute.

Mr. Schuette said ({ HYPERLINK "http://www.ag.state.mi.us/opinion/datafiles/2010s/op10345.htm" \t "blank" }) the township can enforce the ordinance, and the fee, because they are not targeted specifically at fireworks and would not serve to prohibit sales.

"Its requirements regarding a permit, inspection, and payment of a fee before vendors may sell out of a temporary facility do not run afoul of the Act," he said. "Further, these local requirements are in addition to the requirements found in the Act since the ordinance requires that the vendor be 'in compliance with all applicable laws.' Thus, the terms of the ordinance and the Act may each be fully implemented."

D.N.R. Selling Fire-Damaged Timber

With the Duck Lake fire now completely contained, Department of Natural Resources officials announced Wednesday that they would sell some of the timber damaged in the blaze.

The sale will not only clear some trees felled during the fire, but will also help to prevent insect infestations and other damage to remaining trees, officials said.

Companies interested in purchasing the timber will have one week to review the fire zone and make a bid. Currently, most of the timber is red pine and jack pine, but further assessments could change that makeup.

The sale is scheduled for June 22 at 10 a.m. at the Newberry Field Office, 5100 State Highway M-123, Newberry.

Committee Roundup

PETITION BILL: The Senate Local Government and Elections Committee heard testimony Wednesday on requiring a ballot question petition to indicate whether an individual was being compensated to circulate it.

Specifically, if an individual were receiving compensation for circulating a petition to amend the Constitution, initiate legislation, or initiate a referendum, the petition would have to indicate the fact and the name of the person or organization that provides the compensation.

{ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=79201&locid=1" } (R-Sterling Heights), the sponsor of the bill ({ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011SB8801" }), said that petition would provide name of individual or organization on the front of the petition in 10-point boldfaced type, and petitions that comply with the requirement would be valid.

Mr. Rocca also said since it is the first draft of the bill, it could see changes.

{ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=54001&locid=1" } (R-Grand Blanc), the chairman of the committee, said he likes the bill because it provides more transparency.

{ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=161201&locid=1" } (D-Detroit) questioned whether the bill would affect this year's petitions. Mr. Rocca said nothing would affect petitions distributed this year.

Mike Batterbee, deputy director in the Department of State's Office of Government Affairs, said the department is neutral on this bill although he stated some concerns. He said it's unclear how the bill would work and circulators have no way of knowing petitioners were being paid or not.

Chris Thomas, director of the Bureau of Elections at the Department of State, expressed similar concerns and said there would be no additional public cost, in response to Mr. Young's question on whether there's significant cost for that.

Capital Notebook

STOCK SCAM: Hiep The Trinh of Fullerton California was charged Wednesday with 15 different counts related to an alleged scheme to sell shares of a non-existent company.

{ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=77201&locid=1" }, whose department filed the charges, alleged Mr. Trinh used his ties to the Vietnamese community in the state to convince people to buy shares in a technology company called NRG. But the charges allege he merely kept the money.

Mr. Trinh faces a variety of felony fraud charges carrying penalties up to $10,000 and 10 years in prison as well as racketeering, which carries penalties of $100,000 and 20 years.

KRESNAK RETIRES FROM MICHIGAN'S CHILDREN CEO POST: Jack Kresnak, the CEO of Michigan's Children for the past four years, is retiring from that position. The longtime former Detroit Free Press writer, honored many times for his enterprising coverage of problems in the state's handling of child protection, plans to begin writing again. Taking over as interim CEO of Michigan's Children is William Long, a Lansing attorney and long-time consultant to the organization.

TRUSCOTT ROSSMAN ANNOUNCES PROMOTIONS: The Truscott Rossman public relations firm announced Tuesday that it has promoted Josh Hovey, senior account executive, to vice president and Lauren Zdeba from associate account executive to account executive.

Appointments By The Governor

TALENT INVESTMENT BOARD: Tony Day of Union City is appointed to represent individuals with expertise relating to Native American programs. He is not replacing anyone on the board. His term expires at the pleasure of the governor and is not subject to the advice and consent of the Senate.

TAX TRIBUNAL: Victoria Enyart of Jackson is reappointed for a term expiring June 30, 2016. The appointment is subject to the advice and consent of the Senate.

Snyder Seeking Replacement Law For PA 4

The administration of Governor Rick Snyder is urging the Legislature to adopt a new emergency manager law that would replace and upgrade the Local Government and School District Fiscal Accountability Act once it is suspended upon certification of the referendum against it to the November ballot.

Treasurer Andy Dillon, meeting with reporters minutes ago, said the Legislature could act on a replacement law as soon as its next session August 15. It was not immediately clear whether the Snyder administration is specifically calling for action on that date.

In the past, Mr. Snyder has said such a replacement statute would only be in place pending the outcome of the referendum on 2011 PA 4.

Mr. Dillon also said upon certification of the referendum, which means the suspension of PA 4 pending the November election, the old 1990 PA 72 will return, and Mr. Snyder will appoint emergency managers now serving in three of the four cities with them to the post of emergency financial manager. In the fourth city, Flint, Mr. Snyder will have to name a replacement for Michael Brown because he is ineligible to serve as an emergency financial manager under PA 72.

Meanwhile, Superintendent of Public Instruction Mike Flanagan said he would nominate the three people serving as emergency managers for school districts to be named as emergency financial managers.

Mr. Dillon said all decisions made by emergency managers, or other actions taken under PA 4 prior to its suspension, remain in force despite the suspension of the law.

Emergency Financial Managers appointed under PA 72

Appointments will ensure continuity in financially troubled communities, schools

LANSING, Mich. – Emergency financial managers (EFMs) were appointed today in the four cities and three school districts under a financial emergency. Appointments to the cities were made by the Local Emergency Financial Assistance Loan Board and appointments to the school districts were made by the governor.

The actions were taken following the Board of State Canvassers certification of petitions for the referendum of Public Act 4 of 2011, the Local Government and School District Fiscal Accountability Act. The Canvassers certification placed the repeal of PA 4 on the November ballot and immediately suspended the act and reinstated its predecessor, PA 72 of 1990.

Attorney General Bill Schuette issued a formal opinion Monday, Aug. 6, stating that, upon suspension of PA 4, "1990 PA 72 is revived until certification of the November 2012 general election results."

"My administration is deeply committed to addressing the needs of struggling communities and schools," said Gov. Rick Snyder. "This is not just about finances but the quality of life for citizens and ensuring public safety, health and welfare."

The Local Emergency Financial Assistance Loan Board appointed EFMs Joyce Parker in Ecorse, Joe Harris in Benton Harbor, Louis Schimmel in Pontiac and Ed Kurtz in Flint. Parker, Harris and Schimmel all were serving as emergency managers under PA 4 and Kurtz replaces Mike Brown in Flint, who was ineligible to serve under PA 72 because he previously served as interim mayor.

"The action taken today was necessary to ensure continuity in these communities experiencing financial emergencies," said Deputy Treasurer Roger Fraser. "The three EFMs who were re-appointed have been making positive changes to return their respective cities to prosperity. Mr. Kurtz has proved his ability to assist struggling cities in the past and will be a steadying hand through this period of transition in Flint."

Snyder appointed Roy Roberts in Detroit Public Schools, Donald Weatherspoon in Muskegon Heights Schools and Joyce Parker in Highland Park Schools as EFMs to continue oversight for the struggling school districts. In compliance with PA 72, State Superintendent of Public Instruction Mike Flanagan made recommendations to the governor for EFMs at Detroit Public Schools, Highland Park Schools and Muskegon Heights Public Schools. Under the law, the superintendent submits to the governor the names of not more than three nominees for the governor's consideration.

In addition to the names of those who have been serving as emergency managers in those districts, Flanagan submitted the names of two education experts from the Michigan Department of Education for the EFMs at Detroit Public Schools and Highland Park Schools.

"Our utmost priority is providing the students of these three school districts with the quality education they need and deserve," Flanagan said. "For that to happen, the schools must be financially sound. MDE is committed to supporting and assisting the work of every emergency financial manager to help the students in those districts achieve and succeed."

The suspension of PA 4 is prospective only. Actions taken by an EM under PA 4, or Consent Agreements reached prior to the suspension of PA 4, remain in effect.

The Local Emergency Financial Assistance Loan Board consists of Treasurer Andy Dillon, state Budget Director John Nixon, and Licensing and Regulatory Affairs Director Steven Hilfinger. The board was assigned by Snyder the responsibility to manage the financial emergencies per PA 72 of 1990.

Republicans Delay Right to Work Vote as Workers Crowd Capitol to Voice Outrage

Lansing – Republican Senators delayed a potential vote on so-called "Right to Work" legislation today as hundreds of workers crowded the State Capitol and rallied against this latest and most egregious anti-worker effort being pushed through the Legislature. Senate Democratic Leader Gretchen Whitmer applauded the workers for standing up and speaking out against the Republican agenda and encouraged them to maintain their efforts as the legislation could be brought up for a vote as early as tomorrow."

M.E.D.C. On R.T.W. Ad: 'Business Marketing' Is Not New

As reactions poured in over the Michigan Economic Development Corporation's decision to attach the Pure Michigan logo to an advertisement touting the recently passed right-to-work law, MEDC CEO Michael Finney reiterated one thing Thursday: This is not something new.

"We really are continuing the business marketing that we've been doing," Mr. Finney said in a phone interview. "As policies change in our state that are favorable to businesses, we would look to promote those. We think it's a very effective brand."

But legislative Democrats and liberal organizations such as Progress Michigan have continued to express outrage over the use of what many saw as a divisive issue - right-to-work - and linking it to one with mostly bipartisan support, the tourism-oriented campaign associated with Pure Michigan.

meid=60101&locid=1" } and other top Democrats.

Senate { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=60101&locid=1" } (D-East Lansing) called on { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=245801&locid=1" } to come clean about why the campaign "is being improperly used to advance his own political agenda," a statement from her office said.

The governor's office directed all calls to the MEDC on Thursday.

"Pure Michigan has always been about uniting our state around what makes us great: our natural resources, our communities and our people. It's simply offensive that Governor Snyder would corrupt that message and use it to advance his own political agenda," Ms. Whitmer said. "I'm calling on the Governor today to answer to the people of Michigan who have overwhelmingly expressed their disapproval with what he's done to the Pure Michigan campaign."

Mr. Finney said the full-page ad in Tuesday's Wall Street Journal cost $144,000 but that the MEDC did not use state-appropriated dollars for it but instead "MEDC corporate dollars." The ad, which Mr. Finney said ran as "part of the overall business marketing campaign," highlights Michigan becoming the newest right-to-work state and also points to other policies the state has adopted such as the redoing of incentives and regulatory processes, as well the elimination of industrial personal property tax and the move to a flat 6 percent Corporate Income Tax.

He also said the Pure Michigan brand has seen "an incredible reception" both from businesses and tourism, and that the continued "business marketing" of Pure Michigan in ways similar to the controversial Wall Street Journal ad would be favorable.

"A lot of really favorable business things have happened in our state and we've been communicating all of those in the Pure Michigan business plan," he said. "It really is a total marketing effort, not just strictly an advertising campaign we have going."

The MEDC does in fact use Pure Michigan logo as part of its business efforts, such as in Pure Michigan Business Connect, considered the hub for all business activity the MEDC oversees.

Ms. Whitmer, however, was joined in her concern by Robert Kolt, a former top aide to ex-Governor James Blanchard and a 20-year instructor in advertising and public relations at the College of Communication Arts and Sciences at Michigan State University. He is also the president and CEO of Kolt Communications in Okemos.

"Linking Pure Michigan's paid advertising to an issue as politically sensitive as right-to-work is actually insulting to many people and simply an error in judgment," Mr. Kolt said in a statement. "This new ad focus is a dramatic change in promotional strategy for Michigan that could seriously backfire, resulting in damage to the positive brand image and value of our state's business climate, especially our successful tourism industry."

House { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=268401&locid=1" } (D-Auburn Hills) also released a statement alongside { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=280501&locid=1" } (D-Grand Rapids) expressing their discontent with the advertisement, with Mr. Dillon calling it a "pure perversion" of what Michigan residents want to see from their leaders.

"The 'Pure Michigan' campaign is an award-winning, successful effort to showcase the best of what our state has to offer. It used to be something all Michiganders could be proud of," Mr. Dillon said. "Now it's being used to push a divisive issue and as another front for the special interests that have taken hold in Lansing."

Mr. Finney said he has received mostly anonymous calls from individuals both in favor of and in opposition to the advertisement. He said it was too soon to tell what kind of effect the advertisement has had or will have, but that regardless of whether the calls are good or bad, he merely continues to explain what the state can offer to businesses.

"We spent time communicating what our strategy was. This is a campaign that's been under way for more than two years," he said, saying right-to-work is just one of the most recent changes it now includes in its marketing to businesses. He said the MEDC communicates "a variety of policies and laws" as they pertain to the company or individual, including the talent base and the quality of living.

H.F.A., Nixon More Optimistic On Fiscal Future

Michigan's economy should continue to grow, the House Fiscal Agency projected Thursday, as the U.S. economy continues to slowly pull itself forward, auto sales continue to rise, inflation stays relatively low, job growth continues, and state revenues, therefore, continue to increase.

The forecast came one day before the Revenue Estimating Conference, and a week after the Senate Fiscal Agency cast some warnings about the economy.

Budget Director John Nixon, in a newspaper interview, also voiced more optimism than did the SFA, saying the administration's projected numbers were higher than the SFA's.

Mr. Nixon will not formally be part of the review and deliberation held by Treasurer Andy Dillon, SFA Director Ellen Jeffries and HFA Director Mary Ann Cleary when the estimating conference kicks off at 9 a.m. Friday. The three fiscal directors will decide on the revenue totals { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=245801&locid=1" } must use when making his 2013-14 budget presentation to the Legislature either later this month or in February.

Conference-watchers know that typically the SFA is the most conservative of the three agencies in making predictions, while the HFA is the most optimistic with Treasury in the middle but tending mostly to the House side. As it never does before the meeting, Treasury did not again this week release its forecast.

Nor did Mr. Nixon, in an interview with the Detroit Free Press, release any of the numbers the department forecasts.

The SFA forecast, issued last week, caught many people by surprise by the depth of its pessimism. The agency said the state is growing more slowly than forecast back in May, when the last conference was held. The SFA's latest forecast predicts a sharper drop in general fund revenues for the current 2012-13 fiscal year from a year ago and much slower growth for the School Aid Fund.

Going forward, the SFA expected the schools fund to actually be in deficit in the 2013-14 fiscal year.

But the HFA did not have the same negative forecast.

The HFA did forecast a drop in general fund revenues for the current year, as the state absorbs the full effect of the 2011 business and personal income tax changes enacted. But it did not see as sharp a drop in those revenues as its Senate counterpart.

And it forecast stronger growth for the School Aid Fund.

The forecast expected 2012-13 General Fund revenue to total $8.8 billion, a drop of 4.7 percent from the 2011-12 revenues of $9.3 billion. The SFA had forecast a drop of 6.5 percent in general fund revenues.

But the HFA projected that a 2.6 percent increase in school revenues, to $11.16 billion, close to what the SFA had projected. The General Fund and School Aid Fund together should total slightly more than $20 billion for the year.

Looking ahead to 2013-14 - the budget year Mr. Snyder will provide a plan for to lawmakers - the HFA forecast a total of $20.86 billion.

The General Fund should increase by 5.6 percent that year to $9.3 billion, while the SAF should be up by 3.2 percent to $11.5 billion.

And projecting to the 2014-15 fiscal year, the agency anticipated total revenue, for the two funds, of nearly $21.8 billion.

That year, the General Fund should total almost $9.9 billion, an increase of 5.5 percent, while the School Aid Fund should bring in $11.9 billion, up 3.2 percent.

While the forecast does not project dramatic growth for the state, and does not suggest the state will recoup all the jobs it lost in the decade of the 2000-2010, it does say the state will continue to grow.

That is suggested by several figures. In terms of state unemployment, the forecast says the state should see it fall from a monthly average of 8.9 percent in 2012 to 8.6 percent this year and falling further to 7.9 percent in 2014 and then 7.2 percent in 2015.

Income growth will slow slightly from the 3.4 percent growth in 2012 to 2.8 percent in 2013. But then it should see stronger growth of 4.5 percent in 2014 and then 4.8 percent in 2015.

Inflation will increase, but should still be moderate, the forecast said.

And of particular importance to Michigan residents, car sales are expected to continue to show growth. Totaling an estimated 14.4 million in 2012, the forecast said they should grow to 15.3 million in 2013, then to 15.7 million in 2014 and finally to 16.3 million in 2015. And, the market share of domestic producers should go up slightly.

The HFA numbers follow somewhat Mr. Nixon's pronouncement in the interview that the "economy is doing well." It is fragile, he said, but showing growth.

He also said the state should not have to make any budget cuts during the upcoming year, but be able to invest in various programs.

Wolf Hunting Likely To Be Localized

Even with a new law designating wolves as game animals in the state, a wolf hunt is not guaranteed in 2013. And if it does happen, it will likely be limited to areas with the most reports of wolves attacking livestock, officials told the Natural Resources Committee on Thursday.

Commission members warned that the department needs to be sure it can resolve those conflicts in other ways if the commission recommends against a wolf hunt.

Adam Bump, furbearer expert for the department, presented a process that would have recommendations for structuring a hunt by June. He said that would allow sufficient time to conduct a hunt before the end of the year if the commission does approve one.

Legislation approved during the lame duck session ({ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011SB135001" }, PA 520) would authorize the hunt and set license fees. But it leaves it to the commission to set the rest of the regulations for a wolf hunt.

Wildlife Division Chief Russ Mason said the department would not go out of its way to recommend a hunt.

"We have a wolf management plan that we intend to follow very closely," Mr. Mason said.

Commission members committed to working on a possible hunt.

"It's going to be a process and we're going to go through it," said Commissioner J.R. Richardson (R-Ontonagon), chair of the commission. "I realize there's going to be a lot of emotion on this."

Commissioner John Madigan (R-Munising), chair of the Policy Committee on Wildlife and Fisheries that heard the presentation, said it was incumbent on the department to find some way to satisfy residents that it was working to resolve conflicts between people and wolves.

"If there are these conflicts out there and we don't deal with them effectively ... it might be worse for the wolf," he said.

Mr. Bump said a hunt to resolve conflicts was most likely, as that was where the department's Wolf Forum was able to reach consensus.

The forum, which helped to develop the current wolf management plan, could not reach consensus on how to structure a recreational hunt, he said.

But the key factor in allowing a hunt, under the forum's consensus, was a showing that current methods for resolving human/wolf conflicts are not working. That, he said, requires a look at local, rather than statewide, wolf populations.

"So it pushed us to look at management on small scale, not large scale," he said.

For instance, there have been continuing issues in Gogebic County that current efforts, lethal and nonlethal, have not resolved. Mr. Bump said there are some similar problems in other isolated areas around the Upper Peninsula.

Mr. Bump said predation on livestock would also likely be the key driver in deciding whether a hunt was needed to reduce local wolf populations. He said livestock predation complaints can be directly tied to wolf populations in an area.

Dog predation, however, appears to be more random, he said.

While the goal of a hunt would be to reduce the wolf population in an area, the fact of a hunt could also change wolf behavior and potentially make them more cautious of humans and their livestock, he said.

Under the current schedule, the department would begin its population survey, planned before the new law, yet this month. But it will now also begin discussions with tribal governments over the possibility of a wolf hunt.

General public forums around the state, which would include both an information session and public comment, would begin in March, he said.

"We know this is a very passionate issue and we want to make sure everyone has a chance to have their voice," Mr. Bump said. "I'm sure not everyone may like the answers, but I want people to see that we used the information."

But one group praised at least the process. "We commend the DNR for acting swiftly to outline a transparent and scientific process for moving forward with a wolf season," said Erin McDonough, executive director of Michigan United Conservation Clubs.

There are also at least two Wolf Forum meetings before May, Mr. Bump said. That group would be a primary source for developing the structure of a wolf season.

The law gives the NRC final say in regulating quotas and methods of take, so the commission would have to approve any proposal before a hunt would happen.

In their inaugural wolf hunts in 2012, Wisconsin saw 117 wolves taken, one more than the quota, from a population of at least 762 wolves as of April, and Minnesota saw 413 taken from a population of about 3,000.

Michigan's population of about 600 wolves is three times the federal recovery goal, Mr. Bump said.

REFERENDUM: At the same time, the Humane Society of the United States, a key national anti-hunting group, announced a new coalition, Keep Michigan Wolves Protected, would launch a referendum drive on the legislation.

"Wolves have been on the protected list in Michigan for nearly 50 years. There are fewer than 700 wolves in Michigan and their numbers are only now starting to recover," HSUS President Wayne Pacelle said in an email announcing the ballot drive. "Yet, shockingly, the Michigan Legislature has passed reckless legislation that would allow trophy hunters to slaughter hundreds of wolves in Michigan for their trophy collections, using painful methods such as steel-jawed leghold traps."

The other group involved in the coalition is the Doris Day Animal League, though that group's { HYPERLINK "http://www.ddal.org/" \t "blank" } indicates it is largely a front for HSUS activities.

The ballot campaign, according to its { HYPERLINK "https://secure.humanesociety.org/site/Advocacy?cmd=display&page=UserAction&id=5829&autologin=true&em_ha011013&JServSessionIdr004=228n7rqd24.app306b" \t "blank" }, is currently in the process of recruiting petition circulators.

HSUS is the same group that was successful in 2006 in repealing the state's dove hunt through referendum.

FISH NETTING: The netting season will begin a little earlier this year, now that the DNR is charged with regulating the activity, officials said. The department is proposing an order that would essentially adopt the regulations that had before been in statute, but it would combine the hand netting and dip netting regulations into one order and, at the request of a key community for dip netting, would move the start date to March 20 from April 1 that had been in statute.

PURE MICHIGAN HUNT: The public will meet the winners of the 2013 Pure Michigan Hunt at the February commission meeting, but Mr. Mason called the three winners recently to congratulate them. He found, though, that some Michigan hunters are a bit cautious.

One of the winners is a law enforcement officer who, after Mr. Mason's call, contacted his buddy in DNR law enforcement.

Mr. Mason said shortly after his round of calls, he got a visit from the DNR deputy law enforcement chief to report a call he got from a friend.

"Some guy saying he was Russ Mason called to say I had won the Pure Michigan Hunt," the deputy told Mr. Mason. "You've got some malfeasance going on there," the deputy was told.

Mr. Mason said the deputy chief assured his friend, "Sometimes good things happen to good people."

Schauer Giving Gov. Run 'A Lot Of Thought'

Former U.S. Rep. Mark Schauer, one of the potential Democratic candidates for governor, said Thursday he is considering the race.

Mr. Schauer, who served in the Legislature from 1997-2008 and then in the U.S. House from 2009-10, said Thursday of the 2014 gubernatorial race that he is "giving it a lot of thought."

A month ago, after getting pepper sprayed while participating in a protest of the right-to-work legislation at the Capitol, Mr. Schauer said only about the possibility of running that the direction in which { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=245801&locid=1" } and the Republican legislative majority had taken the state upset him and that he planned to work in some fashion to reverse the policy.

"I am very unhappy with what the Legislature and what the governor did particularly in the last month or so. We need an economic policy that will grow our economy," he told "Michigan's Big Show," a syndicated talk radio program hosted by Michael Patrick Shiels, on Thursday. "I don't feel we're on the right track in Michigan so it has given me some pause to think on it, but I haven't started a campaign now, let me say that."

Mr. Schauer is one of several Democrats under watch as a possible gubernatorial candidate. Also on the list of possibilities are Board of Education President John Austin of Ann Arbor, Macomb County Executive Mark Hackel, { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=7801&locid=1" } of Bloomfield Township, Senate { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=60101&locid=1" } of East Lansing and Lansing Mayor Virg Bernero, who lost to Mr. Snyder in the 2010 election.

Mr. Schauer, of Battle Creek, lost his re-election bid in the 2010 Republican wave to { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=87801&locid=1" } (R-Tipton), whom Mr. Schauer ousted in a Democratic wave in 2008. Since then, he has worked with a variety of labor organizations, such as the BlueGreen Alliance.

Mr. Schauer said he is not giving himself a timetable to make a decision. Signatures are not due until May 2014.

"What is important is that people coalesce in this state and they take stock of what Republicans in Lansing are doing, the course that they have charted for our state," he said. "We need to focus on that. It's way too early for campaigns."

In a separate interview, asked about his comments, Mr. Schauer said many people have been talking to him about the race.

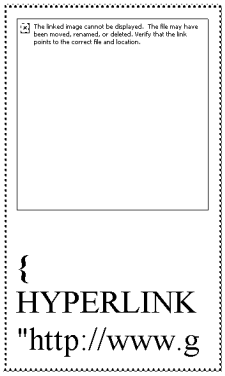
"I definitely haven't closed the door, and I'm giving it a lot of thought," he said. "What I think is important is that there be a broad movement dedicated to reminding the public what the Republican Legislature and Governor Snyder have done over the last two years, particularly to the middle class, particularly during the lame-duck session. I think that's what's important."

Horse Racing, Landlord-Tenant Bills Fall To Pocket Veto

{ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=245801&locid=1" } will pocket veto a bill that would allow customers at horse race tracks to play a new style of gaming where they make bets on historical races and sit and watch the outcome at a video terminal.

Supporters said { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011HB554601" } would aid the state's ailing horse racing industry, but Snyder spokesperson Caleb Buhs said Mr. Snyder views it as unconstitutional without an affirmative vote by statewide voters as well as those in the jurisdiction of tracks using the new feature.

The bill technically will not be pocket vetoed until Friday because that is when the 14-day period Mr. Snyder has to sign or veto it expires. By not signing it, the bill is pocket vetoed.



ongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=245801&locid=1" } has now made decisions on all bills from the 2011-12 term.

Mr. Buhs said he was not sure why Mr. Snyder had chosen a pocket veto instead of vetoing the legislation outright with a message to the Legislature. But the Snyder administration was upfront about its issues with the bill, he said.

"The administration had major concerns on that one and they had outlined those to the Legislature," he said.

{ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=210101&locid=1" } (R-Lum), the sponsor of the bill, could not immediately be reached for comment.

Mr. Snyder has now wrapped up work on all bills sent to him by the 96th Legislature. Thursday saw the official pocket veto of the other bill in the Blue Cross Blue Shield of Michigan package, something the administration previously said it would do. Mr. Snyder also allowed the pocket veto today of a bill addressing landlord-tenant issues ({ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011HB426301" }).

That bill was designed to allow landlords to clear out a deceased tenant's belongings if family members or friends do not wish to take ownership.

Rep. Margaret O'Brien (R-Portage), who sponsored the bill, said there were some concerns about it from the governor's office, but the bill had already passed the Legislature before she could address them.

Mr. Buhs said the bill would not accomplish its purpose. The bill did not allow enough time for estranged family members to get a death notice and get to the home to take ownership of the deceased's belongings, he said.

Ms. O'Brien said the bill would have saved landlords thousands of dollars by being able to dispose of a deceased tenant's property without having to go to probate court.

"You could have someone who has nothing of significant financial value and no one wants it," she said. "It would not be an often used procedure because in most situations family members or friends want to come take care of the belongings."

Ms. O'Brien said she was told a few days ago the bill most likely would not be signed. She said she will be working on a new bill this year that addresses the concerns.

"I think it's a great situation when someone says 'I can't support your bill as is, but I want to work with you,'" she said. "I have great respect for the governor, and I look forward to working with him."

Snyder Signals No Decision Imminent On E.F.M. For Detroit

Talk once again was building that { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=245801&locid=1" } was getting ready to name an emergency financial manager for Detroit, but Mr. Snyder sought to quiet that chatter Thursday.

Mr. Snyder said in a statement that he wanted the review team examining Detroit's finances to take into account the actions this week by the Detroit City Council to undertake several moves the state had asserted were key milestones for the city to achieve.

"I commend the collaboration and the difficult, but necessary, actions taken by Mayor Bing and the Detroit City Council earlier this week," he said. "While these were noteworthy steps in helping Detroit move forward, I am asking the Detroit Review Team underway to analyze whether the actions taken Tuesday were sufficient to actually address the city's short-term cash crisis."

Mr. Snyder also said he is asking the review team to "consider the depth and breadth of (Detroit's) long-term liabilities, and potential options for addressing them. A strong and successful Detroit is essential to a strong and successful Michigan."

Detroit Mayor Dave Bing welcomed Mr. Snyder's comments.

"I have continually stated that my focus is on implementing my restructuring plan for the City of Detroit," he said in a statement. "I have also recently acknowledged a renewed collaboration with City Council. I welcome the Governor's decision today to ask the Review Team to acknowledge the progress being made by the City."

'The Daily Show' Strikes Moroun, Bridge Debate

Manuel "Matty" Moroun got the treatment Wednesday night from Comedy Central's "The Daily Show," which delivered a takedown of his failed attempt to force a statewide and local vote on international border crossings in a bid to stop the proposed New International Trade Crossing and preserve traffic to his Ambassador Bridge.

Among those featured in the piece are Roy Norton, the Canadian consulate in Detroit, and Malik Shabazz, a longtime militant activist in Detroit who sided with the Morouns in trying to pass { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/programming/politics_ballotissuedetail.cfm?&year=2012&ballotid=4201" }. "The Daily Show" said officials from the Detroit International Bridge Company, owned by the Moroun family, declined to participate.

Race For Vacant Senate Seat Interests Both Flint Reps

{ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=224601&locid=1" } is set to make his announcement Saturday that he will run for the 27th Senate District special election, vying for the position against fellow Flint Democrat { HYPERLINK

"http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=106601&locid=1" }, who has already announced he will run.

{ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=245801&locid=1" } on Wednesday called for a special election to be held for the seat on May 7, with a primary on March 12.

Mr. Stanley hinted at the news on his Twitter account on Thursday, tweeting: "Yesterday I got my floor seat number 110, I like that it struck me as symbolic, look forward to making my announcement on Sat."

He was unable to be reached for further comment Thursday, though his staff had essentially confirmed that the news on Saturday would be about his decision to run for the seat left vacant by { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=53401&locid=1" } (D-Flushing). Mr. Gleason became the Genesee County clerk/register of deeds after the New Year.

Mr. Gleason is slamming Mr. Snyder about the special election schedule, saying the governor should have set the special primary for August and special election for November when there are local elections already taking place in the city. With no elections in March and May on local ballots, communities will have to pay to run the elections.

"What a dink. I told the folks in the guv's office that Flint was broke financially," Mr. Gleason wrote in a Facebook post Wednesday night. "I asked several times that he schedule my special election for the 27th senate seat in conjunction with other Flint elections. Like August and November. When we normally have elections. So like he is (wont) to do, he has selected my replacement's election for March 12 primary and May 7 general election. WHAT!? March and May? Hey guv-you gave Flint an emergency manager because they are broke. So now Flint needs ballots and poll workers. Items not scheduled or budgeted. Hmm?? Fiscal conservative? He is driving Flint into more financial strife. He's a liar and irresponsible."

In his statement announcing the special election schedule Wednesday, Mr. Snyder said it was important to ensure representation for the district.

"This special election ensures that area residents will have full representation as soon as possible while helping keep costs for local communities to a minimum," he said.

Meanwhile, fellow Flint contender { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=106601&locid=1" } on Thursday announced that the Michigan Regional Council of Carpenters had endorsed him for the special election.

"I'd like to thank the Carpenters for their support and confidence in me," Mr. Ananich said in a statement. "They know I've got a strong record of bringing people together to solve problems and protecting the middle-class."

The Genesee/Shiawassee/Lapeer Building Trades have also previously announced their support for Mr. Ananich to take the position.

While both men live in Flint and have deep roots in the city, Mr. Stanley's district is wholly contained within the city. Mr. Ananich's district also reaches into some suburbs.

Gongwer Unveils New Blog

Gongwer News Service debuted a new blog Thursday on its website that will feature quick takes on Capitol happenings by Gongwer's staff.

The blog, available at { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/programming/blogindex.cfm" }, also is available for elected officials and others in the Capitol community to submit posts, published at Gongwer's discretion.

The blog is available to all visitors to the website and will not require a username and password for access.

Gongwer anticipates updating the blog at least daily.

N.R.C. Planning Calendar Of Issues

Beginning next month, the Natural Resources Commission will be setting aside a portion of its meeting to deal with some key issues it and the department face, with those issues set out in advance.

The commission will be looking at the department's land strategy and the program goals for the various divisions at the February meeting, but it is also planning to set dates for consideration of a laundry list of other topics at future meetings.

"It'll help us get focused rather than the flavor of the month," commission Chair J.R. Richardson (R-Ontonagon) said. "What we're trying to do is when we take time ... the priorities are what the commission wants to look at and what the director would direct us toward."

Mr. Richardson said the commission would consider a special meeting segment the day before its regular meeting next month to pare down the list of 15 likely topics presented by DNR officials Thursday to between six and 12 and schedule those for coming meetings.

Among those topics is trails, coordinating planning between programs, economic development, long-term funding, scorecards, and the perennial recruitment and retention of hunters and anglers.

Commissioners also opened it to the public to suggest additional topics to be considered.

"Just because we pick them doesn't mean these are the things that ought to be on the list," Mr. Richardson said.

But he indicated that some topics, like program goals, might wind their way through any or all of the other topics.

"We're going to look at the major program goals because that's what's going to roll out of our conversations," he said.

Federal Court Reverses Decision Denying Deaf Man Lifeguard Position

The U.S. 6th Circuit Court of Appeals has sent a case that affirmed Oakland County's decision to deny a deaf man a lifeguard position back to a lower court to determine if an accommodation could be possible for him in the position.

The court, in Keith v. Oakland ({ HYPERLINK "http://www.ca6.uscourts.gov/opinions.pdf/13a0011p-06.pdf" \t "blank" }), said the U.S. District Court was wrong in ruling that Nicholas Keith had to show what a reasonable accommodation might be for him to obtain the position.

The Americans with Disabilities Act requires that Mr. Keith simply point out that an accommodation could be possible, not what the accommodation needed to be, Judge Jeffrey Sutton, Judge Richard Griffin and Judge Helene White decided.

Mr. Keith had been deaf since birth, and had undergone training to be a lifeguard. County officials were willing to hire him for the post, provided he passed a physical. At his physical, though, the physician raised questions if Mr. Keith's deafness would pose liability issues to the county.

While a number of proposed solutions to provide Mr. Keith with assistance in various settings were made, ultimately the county refused to hire him as a lifeguard. Mr. Keith then sued, alleging discrimination under the ADA.

The trial court granted summary disposition, but the circuit panel ordered the case back to determine if actual accommodations were possible to allow Mr. Keith to work as a lifeguard.

RICHARDVILLE NAMES DEPUTY CHIEF OF STAFF: Senate { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=55701&locid=1" } (R-Monroe) on Thursday named Jordan Hankwitz deputy chief of staff.

"Jordan has been an integral part of my office for the past two years. This new position and title more accurately reflect the level of work and commitment Jordan has shown since first joining my team," Mr. Richardville said in a statement. "Jordan is exceptional. He is a consummate professional. He is strong leader; efficient and loyal. I just can't say too many good things about Jordan."

Mr. Hankwitz is not replacing anyone as there is currently no one named to this position for the majority leader. He previously worked for former Sen. Gerald Van Woerkom from 2008-10 and recently took leave from the Senate to work on Mitt Romney's 2012 campaign. Mr. Hankwitz is a graduate of Michigan State University and originally from Ludington.

MUSKEGON ABORTION CLINIC CLOSED: An abortion clinic in Muskegon has been closed due to multiple health violations.

The clinic allegedly had a leaking roof; several containers of hazardous materials not stored in cabinets; storage in mechanical and electrical room blocking electrical panels and furnace; used hypodermic needles in unsecured containers; and "uncovered buckets containing unknown fluids," among other things, a statement by { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=82701&locid=1" } (R-Grand Ledge) noted Thursday.

"These violations are proof that the legislation passed late last year was completely necessary," Mr. Jones said in a statement, referring to { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=legislation_billdetail.cfm&billid=2011HB571101" } (PA 499 of 2012). "Reports of blood on the floor and walls and uncovered buckets containing unknown liquids is what I would expect on the set of a horror movie, not a medical facility."

SIERRA CLUB SCORECARD: The Sierra Club Michigan Chapter failed both legislative chambers on their voting records for the environment in releasing its scorecard on Thursday.

The Senate voted only 40 percent of the time to protect the environment under the club's { HYPERLINK "http://michigan.sierraclub.org/politics/articles/2012Scorecard.html" \t "blank" }. The House did slightly better at 46 percent.

"2011-2012 was by far the most anti-environmental Legislature we've had in Michigan for decades. It's extremely frustrating that the environment has become a partisan political issue," Mike Berkowitz, the Michigan legislative director for the group, said in a statement announcing the release. "Environmental protections are a no-brainer for all Michigan residents. Our members find it hard to believe that so many of our lawmakers are voting against Clean Air, Clean Water, and Public Health. We hope that incoming lawmakers will see our scorecard and be motivated to get rid of this anti-environment attitude in the 2013-2014 legislative session."

As expected, Democrats did better on the scorecard, averaging 96.1 percent in the Senate and 83 percent in the House. Republicans averaged 23.7 percent in both chambers.

In the House, former Rep. Shanelle Jackson (D-Detroit) was the sole perfect record, while in the Senate, that was shared by { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=161801&locid=1" } (D-Highland Park), { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=36301&locid=1" } (D-Detroit), Senate { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=35001&locid=1" } (D-Detroit), { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=39501&locid=1" } (D-Westland), { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=41301&locid=1" } (D-Taylor), { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=43601&locid=1" } (D-Warren), { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=155301&locid=1" } (D-Ann Arbor) and Senate { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=60101&locid=1" } (D-East Lansing). { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=25101&locid=1" } (R-Mayville) took bottom honors in the Senate at 9 percent, a score bested by { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=266801&locid=1" } (R-Harrison Township) at 8 percent.

DETROIT SCHOOL BOARD: A ruling could come soon on { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=77201&locid=1" }'s challenge to the members of the Detroit Public Schools board elected by district. Wayne Circuit Court Judge John Gillis heard testimony on motions to dispose of the case (to dismiss the case by the school district and to oust the board members by the Department of Attorney General) and has taken the case under advisement.

Mr. Schuette filed the case arguing that Detroit was no longer a first-class district due to population loss when the most recent board elections were conducted, so it had no authority to elect board members except at-large as other districts do. The district has argued it is still the largest in the state by far and so should have some special provisions.

Appointments By The Governor

BOARD OF SPEECH LANGUAGE PATHOLOGY: Jeffrey Weingarten of Grosse Pointe Woods replaces Vasu Divi, who resigned, to represent physicians for a term expiring December 31, 2013. Patrisha Mervenne of Bloomfield Hills replaces Lizbeth Stevens to represent professionals, Melissa Pynnonen of Ann Arbor replaces Jeanette Meyer to represent physicians and Lynee Wells of Grand Rapids replaces Thomas Koepe to represent the general public, all for terms expiring December 31, 2016. The appointments are subject to Senate consent.

Steady Revenues Should Reduce Budget Drama

Revenues tracking with expectations - a modest decrease in the current fiscal year followed by more moderate growth in the upcoming one - should allow the state to avoid any major budget reductions and even increase spending in some areas, Budget Director John Nixon said Friday after the Revenue Estimating Conference.

Mr. Nixon, House Fiscal Agency Director Mary Ann Cleary and Senate Fiscal Agency Director Ellen Jeffries agreed on revenues for the current 2012-13 and upcoming 2013-14 and 2014-15 fiscal years that essentially split the difference between the HFA's more optimistic and the SFA's more pessimistic forecast. The consensus forecast was close to what the Department of Treasury projected.

"Really where we are today is there's no big surprise. The good news is the economy is up a little bit, and we are actually adding more money than we had anticipated in both '13 and '14," Mr. Nixon said after the conference. "Not a huge change from what we were expecting and anticipating,"

{ INCLUDEPICTURE \d "http://www.gongwer.com/members/johnnixon.jpg" \y * MERGEFORMATINET }

Budget Director John Nixon was pleased with the revenue numbers.

Mr. Nixon filled in for Treasurer Andy Dillon, who had a scheduling conflict, as chair of the conference.

Between the state soon closing its books with $200 million more than expected in revenue as well as $90 million lapses from unspent money by departments, { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=245801&locid=1" } and the Legislature have $290 million in extra money to build the 2013-14 budget, Mr. Nixon said.

For the 2012-13 fiscal year, the conference forecast net general fund revenues to fall 5.1 percent from the previous year to $8.792 billion. That is down $177.7 million from the May revenue conference. For the same year, net School Aid Fund revenue will rise 2.3 percent to $11.128 billion. That is down $41.7 million from the May estimate. The downward revision resulted almost entirely from tax policy changes passed after the May conference, such as the speeding up of an income tax rate cut and increase in the personal exemption.

For the upcoming 2013-14 fiscal year, general fund revenues will rise 5.4 percent to $9.264 billion. That is up $5.4 million from the May conference. For the same year, the School Aid Fund will rise 2.7 percent to $11.433 billion. That is down $38.9 million from the May conference.

Mr. Snyder will unveil his budget recommendation for the 2013-14 fiscal year to a joint session of the House and Senate Appropriations committees on February 7.

One of the concerns raised by the SFA's estimate was the possibility of needing to cut aid to schools because it projected a more than $200 million shortfall for 2013-14 in the School Aid Fund.

Mr. Nixon downplayed any possibility of K-12 cuts.

"We're in structural balance," he said of the School Aid Fund. "We're steady at this point, and we have a little extra money."

One question foremost on the mind of legislators and organizations following the budget is the fate of the so-called one-time spending in the current year budget. Mr. Snyder has developed a budget where certain expenditures are labeled one-time to signal the view from the administration and Legislature that there should be no expectation of that funding continuing the following fiscal year.

Mr. Nixon said those one-time expenditures would be taken out of the budget for 2013-14 and then evaluated for possible continuation in the governor's recommendation.

"There is some revenue available to make those strategic investments," he said.

{ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=84601&locid=1" } (R-Saginaw Township), chair of the Senate Appropriations Committee, said the reduction in revenues in the current year will be "masked a bit" by the additional money from the 2011-12 fiscal year.

If revenues fall as expected in the 2012-13 fiscal year, that will show up as more of a concern for 2013-14, Mr. Kahn said.

A big concern, several said, is how the federal government handles the coming debate on raising the debt limit, the so-called sequester of major budget cuts and potential disallowments of aid to states in certain circumstances.

"I believe one of our biggest risks is the federal government," Mr. Nixon said.

{ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=205901&locid=1" } (R-Holland), chair of the House Appropriations Committee, said the numbers announced Friday are encouraging.

"We have continued growth," he said. "2013 looks like a steady budget year, we just have to be careful not to increase spending. 2014 and 2015 look like we're coming out of it. I'm very happy with what I heard today. I prefer steady growth to valleys."

{ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=217601&locid=1" } (D-Detroit), whom Democrats have asked House { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=226901&locid=1" } (R-Marshall) to name as minority vice chair on the Appropriations Committee, said the falling revenues in the general fund for the current fiscal year reflect bad tax policy from Mr. Snyder and majority Republicans.

"When Michigan families and seniors file for state returns this year, they will feel the pain from the Republican tax policy changes, including the college tuition, child tax credits and tax on pensions," she said. "These tax changes are slowing down Michigan's economic recovery by taking money out of the pocketbooks of Michigan families and handing it over to corporations in the form of tax cuts."

The conference projects declining numbers of pupils in traditional K-12 public schools as a result of the trend in the school-age population as well as more parents opting not to send their children to traditional public schools.

Local school districts will see their population fall by 25,060 in the current fiscal year, 23,100 in the 2013-14 fiscal year and 23,000 in the 2014-15 fiscal year. Those are declines of about 1.6 percent each year.

But charter schools, under new laws allowing considerable growth in their number, will see significant increases - 8.7 percent in the current year to 130,300, 13.6 percent in 2013-14 to 148,000 and 11.5 percent in 2014-15 to 165,000.

Again, the state expects to remain well below the revenue limit set by the Headlee Amendment - $6.9 billion below it in 2012-13, $7.223 billion in 2013-14 and $7.253 billion in 2014-15.

Snyder Seems Leaning Towards Registration Tax Increase For Roads

{ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=245801&locid=1" } appears to be leaning towards calling for an increase in Michigan's vehicle registration tax in his State of the State address on Wednesday as a way of boosting funds for the state's roads.

How much Mr. Snyder will call for as an increase, sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, did not know. There have been reports that a proposed increase would be as much as $125 per vehicle.

But supporters of more funding for the state's roads are also beginning to lay the political groundwork for justifying an increase, saying it would be more progressive than an increase in the state's fuel tax because it would be based on the value of a vehicle, that it would assure all vehicle owners pay an increased tax (since owners of electric vehicles would be unaffected by an increase in fuel taxes), and that it could have a major payoff to the state in terms of an expanded economy.

INCLUDEPICTURE \d "http://www.gongwer.com/members/RickSnyder.jpg" \y * MERGEFORMATINET }

{ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=245801&locid=1" }'s new transportation funding proposal is much anticipated.

A spokesperson for Mr. Snyder said the administration is not going to discuss topics of the address before the State of the State.

Sources interviewed said it was still not certain that Mr. Snyder would in fact propose an increase in the registration tax. In 2011, he at first floated the idea of an average vehicle registration fee hike of $120 a vehicle, and then got behind an alternative plan for an average increase of $60 with more revenue raised from a revised gasoline tax.

But Mr. Snyder himself has said he will make a transportation proposal of some sort next week at his third State of the State address.

And sources said it seemed more likely a registration tax increase would be proposed over a fuel tax increase.

Such an increase would raise more than $1 billion for Michigan's roads, highways, bridges and other transportation services. One source said the increase was critical just to continue to maintain the state's system, though it would not allow for building new roads or expanding roads to ease traffic congestion.

In recent years, state funds for roads and transportation have fallen off due to the economy with fewer people driving, and those who are driving going fewer miles, and because of more fuel efficient vehicles.

Michigan last raised fuel taxes in 1997, and no serious effort has been made to increase revenues since, despite repeated calls from business groups and studies that urged additional revenues.

In 2011, Mr. Snyder issued a special message on transportation which outlined a series of proposals to increase revenues. Nothing has happened on those proposals.

One source said Mr. Snyder was trying to be respectful of the Legislature and allowing legislators to start the action to boost revenues.

The Legislature did not apparently get the hint, the source said.

That special message did call for increases to both fuel taxes and the registration tax.

But it is now a good time to take action, the source said. The state has taken steps towards seeing a new bridge built between Detroit and Canada and on getting a regional transportation authority set up for the Detroit area, the source said. With those two major transportation goals on the way, the time is now to look at revenues, the source said.

Plus, 2013 is a good year to tackle the issue since it is not an election year, the source said.

Presuming a proposal is made, it will likely begin in the Senate, sources said. { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=84601&locid=1" } (R-Saginaw Township) held a series of task force meetings on transportation and has said the issue will likely be a major topic for the year.

Even though 2013 is not an election year, supporters were confident the argument for increasing a tax could be made, especially by focusing on much more progressive such a tax is over increasing the gas tax.

And sources said there will be a big push on how much the increase could drive economic development, especially in the construction industry.

No Bids On Boot Camp Facility

The Department of Corrections' boot camp-style facility in Chelsea will remain state-run after a legislatively inspired effort to put the program up for bid drew no bids from private companies.

Russ Marlan, department spokesperson, said Director Dan Heyns visited the Special Alternative Incarceration Facility on Thursday to personally inform the camp's personnel.

Mr. Marlan said he did not know exactly why no companies responded to the request for proposals, but suspected it has to do with the intricate nature of the program.

"If I had to guess, it's a very small, it's like a 480-bed camp, and it's probably one of the most diverse," he said. "It's got males, it's got females. It's got prisoners. It's got probationers. It's a complicated and small program. I don't know if folks looked at that like the juice wasn't worth the squeeze on that one. Typically, when private providers are looking to bid on something, they like bigger institutions because you look at per diem costs or per prisoner costs and when you have more prisoners, you can divide the operating costs across more bodies."

Republican lawmakers had raised concerns about the high per prisoner per day cost at the facility, but Mr. Marlan said what has to be kept in mind is that prisoners completing the program can be released within 90 days. Those are prisoners who otherwise would be incarcerated for up to three years, so there is a significant savings, he said.

Legislators have said each prisoner at the facility costs $62,500 per year, about double the cost at a regular facility. Corrections officials have said the facility saves the state between $30 million to $50 million a year because inmates who successfully complete it receive automatic parole under statute and graduates of the program have a recidivism rate that is 6 percent better than the general population.

Mel Grieshaber, executive director of the Michigan Corrections Organization, the union for corrections officers, said the facility's staff was thrilled with the news. Mr. Grieshaber said he did not know of any private companies that could replicate what the Special Alternative Incarceration Facility does.

"We're very pleased there were no bids," he said.

The department is still going through the bidding process on prison food service and prison health care. Mr. Marlan said it has received bids for those services, and he expects that process to conclude by the end of February at the latest.

Legislative Dems See Similar Treatment On PAs To Past Terms Of One-Party Rule

Of the 948 bills signed into law in the 2011-12 legislative term, Republican sponsors had their names tied to about 92 percent over the two years, leaving Democrats with a slim 8 percent margin of victory, according to a Gongwer News Service analysis of the public acts from the term.

That dominance of Republican bill sponsors dominating the public acts is in line with the two most recent examples of when one party controlled the Legislature and the governor's office - 1999-2000 and 2001-02. Republicans had total control in both those terms.

In fact, the 1999-2000 term was worse than 2011-12 by a couple measures, with just 6.7 percent of the 782 public acts coming from a Democratic sponsor, according to a Gongwer analysis. Like 2011-12, that was a highly charged term that saw a ton of controversial legislation.

{ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=83401&locid=1" } had more public acts than any other legislator in the 2011-12 term.

Meanwhile, for the most recent term, { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=83401&locid=1" } (R-Lawton) was able to get the most bills signed by the governor - a total of 38 bills, 27 of which came in 2012. { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=82701&locid=1" } (R-Grand Ledge) was second, getting 34 bills signed, 28 in 2012 alone. { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=84601&locid=1" } (R-Saginaw Township) was third at 27 bills becoming public acts. { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=74701&locid=1" } (R-Escanaba) barely missed a tie, getting a total of 26 bills signed over the 2011-12 term (he had one vetoed bill in 2012).

The House had more bills signed over the course of 2011-12, 483 to the Senate's 465.

In the House, former Rep. Jud Gilbert (R-Algonac) earned the most signatures by the governor at 23. { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=206701&locid=1" } (R-Livonia), { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=281601&locid=1" } (R-Stevensville) and Rep. Matt Huuki (R-Atlantic Mine) picked up 18 bill signatures each over the full term.

In 2012 alone, 33 legislators - more than 85 percent of whom were Democrats - did not have any public acts signed.

Democrats have blasted the 2011-12 term as the most partisan in state history. And certainly in the scope and substance of the legislation passed, the term is the most significant since immediately following the adoption of the 1963 Constitution when the Legislature and then-Governor George Romney built what is now the modern structure of state government.

But in terms of participation by Democrats in getting bills passed and signed, 1999-2000 was worse.

So bad was the 1999-2000 term for Democrats that it was not until April 22, 1999, when the House passed the first bill to have a Democratic sponsor, prompting Democratic members to blow noisemakers on the House floor in sarcastic celebration. That term, each Democratic legislator averaged 0.78 public acts. In 2011-12, Democratic legislators averaged 1.29 public acts.

In 2011-12, the first Democratic bill passed the House on February 10, 2011.

In 2001-02, according to a Gongwer News Service analysis of the public acts from that term, 16 percent of the 1,027 public acts were sponsored by a Democrat. Minority Democrats averaged 2.6 public acts each during the term.

That seems much better in terms of public acts for Democrats compared to 2011-12. But it's a bit misleading because that term saw huge packages of relatively mundane bills altering bonding laws that were divvied up to include many Democrats. So that inflated their total.

Still, anyone around the Capitol during the 1999-2000 and 2001-02 terms would say unequivocally that the 2001-02 term saw more bipartisan work on major legislation than 1999-2000. In the House, the relationship between then-House Speaker Chuck Perricone and then-Minority Leader Michael Hanley was toxic. In 2001, then-House Speaker Rick Johnson and then-Minority Leader Kwame Kilpatrick got along well, and Mr. Kilpatrick's goal was more to get Democratic bills passed than to fight partisan battles.

Buzz Thomas became the minority leader in 2002 after Mr. Kilpatrick took office as Detroit mayor, and while he and Mr. Johnson lacked the rapport Mr. Johnson and Mr. Kilpatrick had, it was not rancorous.

From 2003-06, power was split between Democratic Governor Jennifer Granholm and the Republican-led Legislature. So comparing 2011-12 to those years to examine treatment of minority caucuses is flawed. Ms. Granholm could make deals for Republicans to take up Democratic bills. And then from 2007-10, when Ms. Granholm was still in office, the House was led by Democrats and the Senate by Republicans, so minority House Republicans and minority Senate Democrats could count on their brethren in the other chamber helping out with their bills.

Newsmaker Friday: Freshmen Seeking Bipartisanship

Freshmen { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=312601&locid=1" } and { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=323601&locid=1" } are ready to set aside any partisanship that may still linger from the end of last term and get to work.

The pair, Mr. Kosowski (D-Westland) and Mr. Pagel (R-Berrien Springs), are among the 26 House members serving their first term who were sworn in Wednesday. Unlike the 84 other members who have previously served, these freshmen lack the same battle scars from fierce fights over legislation.

"There are a lot of good people working here. I would like to see less of that partisanship," Mr. Pagel said. "I will walk across the aisle and try to get too know people. I will also try to develop relationships in the committees I am on."

Mr. Kosowski said bipartisanship is what he looks forward to most during his first term.

Two of the 26 new members to the House, { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=312601&locid=1" } and { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=323601&locid=1" }.

"We are going to have to work together to get a lot of things passed for our great residents," he said.

Mr. Kosowski also said he didn't anticipate partisanship to be as big an issue this term and that the workings of the House will become a lot more transparent.

"It is my anticipation that our numbers are close so we became a little more relevant," he said in reference to the new 59-51 Republican majority, a tighter margin than the 64-46 one from the previous term. "Obviously they can pass anything they want without our help. But a lot that is on our agenda they are in on it too. I think that by working together we can come up with feasible budgets to get things passed."

Mr. Pagel said many people asked him, during his campaign, why he was getting into state politics. He said many believed the political realm in Lansing was "ugly and nasty."

"My first impression of most of the people in Lansing is very positive," he said. "A lot of good people were elected and trying to do the right thing for their constituents. I think it will be a good experience. Hopefully we can shine a better light on politicians."

Mr. Pagel said the first day was mostly ceremonial.

"The whole swearing in process and getting to meet all of the other legislators was exciting," he said. "It is always a thrill to go on the House floor. It is a beautiful, beautiful building. I have a lot of anticipation for this term."

Mr. Kosowski said it is an exciting time to be sworn in to the Michigan Legislature.

"A lot of it was ceremonial. I thought it was very well organized," he said. "Obviously it is a day that I will never forget. Just to start my career in Michigan government made it a great day."

Mr. Kosowski comes from a background heavy in municipal government as the former parks and recreation director in Westland. The issues most important to him are education, transportation and public safety, he said.

He said the biggest issue with transportation and education is being able to reallocate the money to pay for it.

"We're going to have to really dig deep into how we are going to improve the roads," he said.

In terms of public safety, collaboration can often be the answer, he said. Merging departments in neighboring communities is one way to get things done, he said.

"It saves both communities a lot of money," he said. "I think that is one way to do it. Look at services and how we can better serve our residents."

Mr. Pagel began his career in agriculture, he said. He owns his own business where he stores, grows and ships apples. Now that he is a legislator, his son helps with the business so he can come to Lansing, he said.

When his daughter was in kindergarten he became president of the school board, and remained in that role for 14 years. He then ran for the Berrien County Board of Commissioners, where he served for four years, all of them as chair.

Mr. Pagel said he has a reputation of being fair and a good listener and he plans to bring those qualities to Lansing.

"With my backgrounds I will be able to bring a lot of common sense to the committees I serve on," he said. "I have a lot of context and I will be able to draw on expertise from a lot of different areas."

Although Mr. Pagel said his areas of expertise would be agriculture or education, he is willing to work wherever he is needed.

"I am trying to broaden my horizons and serve where I can be best," he said. "I have a lot of life experience."

Kahn Suggests User Fees For Additional Revenue

After listening to the presentations at Friday's Revenue Estimating Conference, { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=84601&locid=1" }, chair of the Senate Appropriations Committee, said the state will have a few choices in front of it as it tries to create the 2013-14 fiscal year budget, but in those choices should be another look at how the state uses user fees.

Through the current fiscal year budget, the state will have enough money to pay for its activities but what's left, agency reports indicate, becomes slimmer and slimmer beginning in the 2013-14 fiscal year budget forecast and worse yet in the 2014-15 forecast.

Like any forecast, the numbers are subject to change depending on several factors both at the state and federal level. Even so, Mr. Kahn said, the state will have a few choices, which include "belt-tightening," decreases in spending and generating additional revenue - the last of which Mr. Kahn expects will be the hot topic in budget discussions this year.

One route the state will inevitably have to consider is generating additional sources of revenues, and for that he said the state could also look at fees in the way that former Governor John Engler did, he said.

"Historically speaking, the Engler administration believed in user fees. That is the people who use something ought to pay the cost of the regulations and inspections attended to that," he said. "We've gotten away from user fees in the last couple years and we ought to re-look at that idea. I think it's absolutely appropriate and fair to have user fees looked at."

Otherwise, the typical options exist to generate more revenue. He said the uncertainty at the federal level is certainly no help, but the state should be busy enough trying to both decrease spending in some areas - the departments of Corrections, Human Services and Community Health being the usual suspects - and working to fill holes, such as with the shortfall in the Health Insurance Claims Assessment tax.

In the last term, Mr. Kahn introduced a bill that would revisit the health insurance claims tax, but found little support. In late November, Mr. Kahn said the bill would need re-drafting, vowing to bring it back for this term (See { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=news.cfm&article_id=512360103" }) when it was ready.

He again revisited that point on Friday, noting the state either needed to come up with the then-estimated $130 million shortfall or else find a way to reduce Medicaid expenditures. He added that the fix was particularly important since federal match dollars are attached to the state's ability to fund its share of the costs.

Dems: Forecast Shows Republican Policies Not Increasing Jobs

Democrats seized on economic data unveiled at Friday's Revenue Estimating Conference as evidence that { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=245801&locid=1" }'s economic policies are failing to produce significant job growth.

The consensus forecast showed employment would increase 0.9 percent in 2013, down from projected growth of 1.3 percent in 2012. And growth in 2014 would be 1.2 percent, the forecast said.

{ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=39501&locid=1" } (D-Westland), the minority vice chair on the Senate Appropriations Committee, said the numbers at the conference were about what he had expected when Mr. Snyder and the Republican-led Legislature approved "massive tax cuts and elimination of the (Michigan Business Tax) without having any strings attached to it." He pointed to the lack of major uptick in job gains in the state in 2012.

"I think that's directly attributable to the fact that folks that got those tax cuts put the money in their pockets or spent them on something else rather than reinvesting them into jobs," he said, adding that was probably the biggest take-away from the conference. "Hopefully some people will learn some lessons from it."

Mr. Anderson said the forecasts show Mr. Snyder's policies are not working the way they were supposed to work. Without strings tied to those tax cuts, he said, businesses have no reason to hire more people, which means fewer people will have money to spend on the goods and services being produced by businesses.

"We have to get people back to work otherwise they're not going to be able to buy the products," he said. "And then we're also seeing too that the revenue increases that have taken place already, most of that has been from the taxing of pensions. So those are things we expected would be the case but I think proves it from what we heard today."

{ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=217601&locid=1" } (D-Detroit), whom Democrats have asked House { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=226901&locid=1" } (R-Marshall) to name as minority vice chair, said the policies passed by the governor reduce confidence in middle class families to spend money.

"A lot of the policy changes have made more working families very uneasy," she said. "What I hear in my district is people think these policies are very pro-corporate and anti-working families."

"People take pot-shots at you before the ink is dry when you sign your name," Mr. Kahn said of the criticism. "If you're going to do anything, it takes time for it to have an effect. But to be specific here, changes we have done in the state of Michigan that are going to result in more jobs and more income for the people of Michigan will take a while to have an effect."

He said his best answer for how long that could be would only be years, but as to how many years, he could not say with certainty.

"But I think it's unreasonable to expect businesses to make decisions within a one-year or two-year point of view," he said. "Furthermore, us guys in Lansing, as important as we think we are, we're dwarfed by the federal government. The federal uncertainties add just a tremendous amount to the uncertainty that business has on whether or not they want to expand. So until the federal government has clear policies, our policies - which are a plus for job growth and business growth - are less effective."

Nationally, the conference agreed that the unemployment rate would be 7.8 percent for 2013, 7.5 percent for 2014 and 7.1 percent for 2015. While job growth will be slow, that growth will be driven by the housing and auto sectors.

The conference projected light vehicle sales to rise 4 percent in 2013 to 15 million vehicles and then 2.7 percent in 2014 to 15.4 million and 2.6 percent to 15.8 million in 2015.

The Detroit Three share of those sales will be about 45 percent in each of those years.

George Fulton, director and research professor with the University of Michigan's Research Seminar in Quantitative Economics, said pent-up demand is finally causing a spike in vehicle sales.

"We see a sustained moderately paced recovery through 2015," he said.

Nigel Gault, chief U.S. economist for IHS Global Insight, said the major drag on the U.S. economy is slow personal income growth.

Mr. Fulton also analyzed Michigan's job growth compared to the rest of the states in 2010-11 when factoring out what economic sectors happened to be doing well as a way to assess the state's economic performance compared to other states.

Michigan was second only to North Dakota for those years, Mr. Fulton said.

E.A.A. Seeks Financial Assistance

The Education Achievement Authority has asked the state for help making up a shortfall left by delayed private contributions.

The authority, which currently oversees 15 of the lowest-performing schools in Detroit, operates in part on state school aid funds and in part on private donations, the latter covering much of its administrative costs. Officials said some $3 million in private donations is pending, but will not be available until February.

To make up the shortfall, the authority board of directors approved the request Friday morning to ask the state for a $2 million advance on state aid payments for operations to get it through January. The request still has to be approved by Superintendent of Public Instruction Mike Flanagan, Treasurer Andy Dillon and Budget Director John Nixon, but administration spokesperson Caleb Buhs said that approval was expected.

Senate { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=60101&locid=1" } (D-East Lansing) said the request shows the EAA is a financial failure as well as an educational one.

"Governor Snyder claimed this experiment would lead to a better and more efficient education for our students, but today's request for $2 million in state aid shows that his plan was never about success, only politics," Ms. Whitmer said in a statement. "The governor has cut billions of dollars from our K-12 schools over the past two years and it's unconscionable that he would now consider taking another $2 million from them to hand over to his EAA when it's clearly not working as promised."

Among the arguments against legislation last session to codify the EAA, which currently operates under an interlocal agreement between Detroit Public Schools and Eastern Michigan University, was the authority had not yet shown educational improvement in the 15 schools it operates.

But opponents also noted the authority had only been actually operating schools since the beginning of the school year, not enough time to know whether it would work and so should be expanded beyond the Detroit schools.

State Seeking 'Freedom To Work' Analyst

At 5 p.m., Friday, the time to take applications for a new "freedom to work" analyst position closed, and officials will begin the process of reviewing applicants for the newly established post in the Department of Licensing and Regulatory Affairs.

The position is being created by the state to do research and analysis on laws and legislation dealing "freedom to work" or right-to-work issues. The person hired will also make sure laws dealing with the issue are properly implemented. The individual will work with the Legislature and the Executive Office as well as companies and unions on the "complex issues related to FTW law," said the state's job posting.

The position will be the equivalent of an administrative law judge 16, an official said, and so applicants need to be either a lawyer with a minimum of three years' experience or have had three years' experience performing legal research. The pay for the position will depend on experience and range from about $65,000 to $100,000.

The position is needed if for no other reason the state has gotten many calls from people wanting to know what the newly enacted right-to-work laws require, the official said.

Democrats blasted the new post.

"It would seem there's no end to the amount of state money this administration is willing to waste in an attempt to sell their political agenda to the public," said Bob McCann, Senate Democratic spokesperson. "It's fairly offensive that the governor would be creating a new position in state government for obvious political purposes while he's asking the rest of our state employees to sacrifice more and more."

Harris Replaced As Benton Harbor E.F.M.

Though it took longer than he had predicted, Joe Harris was replaced Friday as emergency financial manager for Highland Park.

The Local Emergency Financial Assistance Loan Board voted Friday to appoint Tony Saunders, who had been an advisor for the Department of Treasury in Benton Harbor, to lead the effort to pull Highland Park out of its financial emergency.

Roger Fraser, deputy state treasurer for Local Government Services and chair of the board, said the change was the result of discussions between Treasury officials and Mr. Harris.

"He's been talking about this since early last year," Mr. Fraser told the board. "As with a lot of other things, people find it's time to move on."

He has been talking about leaving the city, but not as a voluntary move. Mr. Harris told Gongwer News Service in July (See { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=news.cfm&article_id=511460107" }) that there was on ongoing effort in Treasury to replace him. And he said Friday there had been no discussion with Treasury officials about a transition.

"I just found out 15 minutes ago that I was being released," he said about an hour after the board vote.

Mr. Harris said he had asked to complete some outstanding projects. "I had requested to be involved in preparation of the budget for the coming year and grooming the new finance person we hired a couple weeks ago, but obviously I won't have an opportunity to do that," he said.

He said his ouster was an exchange for support from key city council members for a public safety millage.

Mr. Fraser did praise Mr. Harris' efforts. "He's moved through some really difficult items," Mr. Fraser said.

He noted, however, that the city is still in a financial emergency after nearly three years of Mr. Harris' oversight.

Discussions with Mr. Saunders indicated state officials may have seen Mr. Harris as a bit too abrasive in working with Benton Harbor officials.

Mr. Saunders said his role in Highland Park had been working with local officials. "I worked with the mayor and the city council to identify budget solutions and a strong fiscal plan," he said after the meeting. "Treasury made it clear they were looking for me to collaborate with the mayor and the city council (in Benton Harbor)."

Treasury spokesperson Terry Stanton declined to comment on Mr. Harris' assertions about being pushed out, but did say, "This is an opportunity to move in a new direction and to move the city forward."

Mr. Saunders said he needed time in Benton Harbor before he could comment on what yet needed to be done, but he said among his first priorities would be a transition plan to get the city out of receivership.

In addition to serving as an advisor for Treasury, Mr. Saunders is a partner in WYLD Marketing Group. He has also served as a key advisor to two Detroit City Council members.

FLINT: The board also approved an increase in the expense allowance for Flint Emergency Financial Manager Ed Kurtz to $3,333 a month ($10,000 a quarter) from the current $1,000. Mr. Kurtz is working without salary in the post.

Warren Gregory, 68, Economist Caught Up In H.F.A. Scandal, Dies

Warren Gregory, an economist who was the assistant director of the House Fiscal Agency and a key player in the scandal that overcame the agency in 1993, died on Wednesday. He was 68.

A graduate of both the then University of Detroit and Western Michigan University, Mr. Gregory was an adjunct faculty member at both WMU and Central Michigan University.

He was credited with writing more than 50 articles and books on economics. His most recent book was published in 2011 and entitled "Moving Up to Our Economic Future: Bottoms Up to Prosperity."

At the HFA, Mr. Gregory was praised for his thoroughness on economic reviews.

But it was at the HFA that Mr. Gregory became involved in the scandal that destroyed his and other careers, leading him and others to prison.

Ironically, Mr. Gregory died less than a week from the 20th anniversary of the Detroit News stories that rocketed the scandal into the state's political and legal stratosphere.

Mr. Gregory was eventually convicted of two counts of federal tax evasion for not reporting at least $70,000 in questionable bonuses paid him out of the HFA imprest fund. Some $1.8 million came out of the fund to finance bonuses, raises and other expenses for fiscal agency workers.

Then, after a two-week trial, a jury took less than five minutes to convict Mr. Gregory of attempts to transport stolen goods across state lines as part of a plot to send arms to Croatian rebels.

It also was Mr. Gregory who early on disclosed some key facts about the scandal to House leadership. In his book, "Sharing the Balance of Power," Dan Loepp, then chief of staff to Co-Speaker Curtis Hertel and now president of Blue Cross Blue Shield of Michigan, recalled a key event involving Mr. Gregory.

The day the News story ran, Mr. Gregory spoke to then-Rep. David Hollister and disclosed that HFA Director John Morberg would raise HFA employees' salaries and that the employees would kick back money to Mr. Morberg. Mr. Hollister phoned Mr. Hertel with the news.

It was that revelation - which so shocked Mr. Hertel that he then put Mr. Hollister on speaker phone to repeat to everyone in the room what he had just told him - that prompted Mr. Hertel and other top Democrats to contact the Department of Attorney General, which swiftly dispatched investigators to interview Mr. Gregory, Mr. Loepp wrote.

Mr. Gregory was co-owner of a company called Global Consulting Corporation along with Mr. Morberg and HFA counsel Malik Hodari. Mr. Morberg and Mr. Hodari both testified against Mr. Gregory. Mr. Gregory was eventually sentenced to 30 months in federal prison.

Former Rep. Lynn Jondahl will officiate at Mr. Gregory's memorial service, scheduled for 11 a.m., Saturday at Estes-Leadley Greater Lansing Chapel, 325 West Washtenaw Street, Lansing.

Services Set For Chuck Harmon, Former Romney Spokesperson, Department Director

Funeral services are scheduled in Arizona for Chuck Harmon, 78, former press spokesperson for former Governor George Romney and former director of the state's licensing department.

Mr. Harmon died on Tuesday in Arizona, where he and his wife Bobbie had moved after he retired.

Though born in Flint, Mr. Harmon was raised in Lansing.

After graduating from Michigan State University, and serving in the U.S. Army, he began working at WILS radio in Lansing. He then became a reporter for the Kalamazoo Gazette, and then worked for the Booth Newspapers' bureau in Detroit.

It was there he came to the attention of Mr. Romney. The governor tapped him to be his press spokesperson and Mr. Harmon served in that role during Mr. Romney's entire tenure.

Later, after Mr. Romney left the office, former Governor William Milliken appointed Mr. Harmon as director of what was then the Department of Licensing and Regulation.

After leaving that office, Mr. Harmon was CEO of the Health Care Association of Michigan.

In retirement, he continued to write for Michigan History Magazine and other publications. He published a history of the Court of Appeals, entitled "A Matter of Right."

Funeral services will be at 11 a.m., Saturday, January 26, at the Lutheran Church of the Risen Savior in Green Valley, Arizona.

Stanley Sounds Off On Senate Run

{ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=224601&locid=1" } (D-Flint) is set to make his official announcement of his run for the 27th District state Senate seat on Saturday, but the decision did not come without much thought and much support from residents to do it, he said on Friday.

"I certainly received what I considered an impressive amount of encouragement to get in and also certainly the fact that I'm running in a race that doesn't have an incumbent, I don't have to give up my seat to run," Mr. Stanley said of making the decision. "But the primary reason was that there just seemed to be a very significant amount of interest in me seriously considering it. I thought after weighing all those factors this was an opportunity I couldn't pass up."

Talk swirled around Lansing back in even November that Mr. Stanley and { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=106601&locid=1" } (D-Flint) might run. Mr. Ananich was first to formally announce his decision to run for the seat left vacant by { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=53401&locid=1" } (D-Flushing), who became the Genesee County clerk/register of deeds at the turn of the New Year and has so far boasted two endorsements. But Mr. Stanley said he is not worried about endorsements yet.

"I feel good about the amount of money we've raised. The endorsement piece is one part of the campaign, but I'm not trying to play one-for-one in terms of endorsements," Mr. Stanley said. "I'll get my share of endorsements, but that's not where my campaign is focused right now."

Rather, he said, his focus right now will be on the door-to-door, face-to-face, "grind it out" effort.

Clinton: Insurance Department As Chance For Advocacy

The Office of Financial and Insurance Regulation is strictly a regulator, but the launch of the Department of Insurance and Financial Services is an opportunity to take the lead on some issues, Kevin Clinton, director of both, told Gongwer News Service.

But the change will not mean much of an expansion in staff or budget, he said.

"Right now we're simply a regulatory body," Mr. Clinton said. "I think this gives us the ability to be proactive. This gives us the ability to effectuate change that will create jobs."

Among the first areas where Mr. Clinton expects to be advocating is no-fault insurance. The current unlimited medical care, he said, makes the state unattractive for many insurance companies, and makes Michigan-based insurance companies less competitive in other states.

OFIR Commissioner Kevin Clinton

While the Michigan Catastrophic Claims Association covers all claims past $500,000 per incident, the insurance contracts still leave the insurer liable for the loss. "It's on their paper ... so they don't have as high a (financial) rating," he said.

The rating companies, he said, have to judge the insurance companies as though the MCCA could fold and leave them to cover the claims. And he said the situation is not improved by the MCCA's current $2 billion deficit.

But he said insurers will need to give something to gain caps on the medical liability.

"I think they need to step up to the plate and say, 'This is what it's worth to me,'" he said. "I don't think it's possible to get these through the Legislature without some guarantee."

Mr. Clinton said he also hopes to do more on mortgage fraud. OFIR has done some in helping to combat the issue, but it has mostly been by catching and punishing the lenders. "Since we're a regulator, we tend to be reactionary," he said. "I'd like to put some people out there on fraud and how to recognize it and how to avoid being a victim."

Becoming a department also means the organization will not be as tied to the actions of other agencies, Mr. Clinton said. For instance, when another agency in the Department of Licensing and Regulatory Affairs cut some positions, the people in those posts bumped into OFIR vacancies under the contract. "We got some really good people," he said, but in positions he was not necessarily planning to fill.

And budget will be important to the new department. It will be the second department that, by design, will be entirely funded by restricted revenue. Mr. Clinton said there is no plan to supplement the fee revenue the agency uses now with general fund.

OPEN MEETINGS: The MCCA filed an appeal Thursday of an Ingham Circuit Court ruling that required it to comply with the Freedom of Information Act.

The Coalition Protecting Auto No-Fault had filed the challenge seeking documents supporting the MCCA's rate-setting process.

The MCCA board, made up largely of insurance industry officials, has argued the fund's claims records are proprietary.

State Reviewing Fed Guidance On Driver's Licenses For Young Non-Citizens

The U.S. Department of Homeland Security issued new guidelines on Friday regarding young non-U.S. citizens brought to the United States as children and whether they can legally remain in the country.

The American Civil Liberties Union of Michigan cited the new guidelines in calling on { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=52301&locid=1" } to issue driver's licenses to these individuals. Ms. Johnson had resisted doing so while awaiting federal guidance on which persons in this pool of people could legally be in the United States.

Under the guidelines for deferred action - in which Homeland Security defers action to remove a non-citizen - such persons must have been 30 or younger as of June 15, 2012; come to the United States before turning 16; continuously resided in the United States since at least June 15, 2007; entered the United States without inspection before June 15, 2012, or had their lawful immigrant status expire on that date; be currently in school or have graduated high school, obtained a graduate equivalency degree or are an honorably discharged veteran of the U.S. armed forces; and have no felony convictions, significant misdemeanor convictions or three or more misdemeanor convictions.

"For the bright young DREAMers whom the federal government has authorized to live and work in the U.S., the ability to obtain driver's licenses is an important step to realizing the American dream of working, going to college, and giving back to their communities," said Miriam Aukerman, ACLU of Michigan staff attorney, said in a statement referring to the proposed Development, Relief, and Education for Alien Minors Act. "Now that the federal government has confirmed that DREAMers are legally present, the secretary of state has all the information she asked for. We hope and expect that the Secretary will make good on her promise and issue licenses to DREAMers immediately so that their dreams aren't dashed."

The ACLU filed suit against the Department of State last year on the issue.

Johnson spokesperson Gisgie Davila Gendreau said of the new federal guidelines: "We are aware of new information. Our attorneys are reviewing it and we will make a decision from there."

Snyder Open To Electoral College Change

Mr. Snyder told The Associated Press { HYPERLINK "http://www.detroitnews.com/article/20130118/POLITICS03/301180393/1361/GOP-considering-new-election-laws" \t "blank" } looking at Republican efforts to drop the winner-take-all system in states that have reliably gone for the Democratic presidential nominee in recent elections that he "could go either way."

"It could be done in a thoughtful (way) over the next couple years and people can have a thoughtful discussion," Mr. Snyder said.

And recently, Republican National Committee Chair Reince Preibus told the Wisconsin State Journal of the idea, "It's something that a lot of states that have been consistently blue that are fully controlled red ought to be looking at."

Michigan has gone to the Democratic candidate in the last six presidential elections. Prior to 1992, the Republican nominee had won Michigan the previous five contests.

{ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=245801&locid=1" } called for a thoughtful discussion on the electoral vote issue.

At this point, spokespersons for the Republican majorities in the Michigan House and Senate did not indicate it is a priority item, but neither did they dismiss it.

"It is not something that has come up in our caucus," said Amber McCann, Senate Republican spokesperson.

House { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=226901&locid=1" } (R-Marshall) is "interested in having it fully vetted in committee," said Bolger spokesperson Ari Adler.

{ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=203801&locid=1" } (R-Shelby Township) introduced a similar bill last term that went nowhere. At this point, Mr. Lund said he has not had any contact with national Republicans, who have urged state governments under total Republican control in recently reliably Democratic presidential states to move on the issue before 2014 while they still have power.

"It's got a long way to go," he said.

Democrats are furious at the idea. For the 2016 and 2020 presidential elections, Michigan would award 14 of its 16 electoral votes according to the U.S. House district lines drawn by Republicans in 2011 to favor Republican candidates. According to an analysis by Daily Kos, in 2012, Republican Mitt Romney would have won nine of the districts and President Barack Obama the other five, so Mr. Romney would have pulled nine electoral votes to seven for Mr. Obama, who won the state by 9.5 percentage points.

Asked how such a scenario would be fair, Mr. Lund said: "I think that it takes the votes closer to the way things really are. Nobody wins the state with 100 percent of the votes. I think this just makes it a little bit closer to the reality of the percentage."

As to Democratic complaints, Mr. Lund scoffed.

"Oh, whatever," he said. "Mark Brewer, whoever, can say whatever they want. They always do. I'm not worried about that."

But Mr. Lund had something of a similar message when asked about Mr. Preibus' comments.

"Reince can say that all he wants, but it's up to the individual states to decide and we'll decide it on our own, not based on what any national party wants," he said.

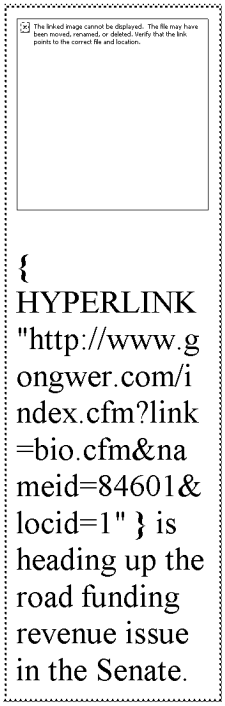
Kahn: Too Early To Count Votes On Road Funding

{ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=84601&locid=1" } wants legislation passed on the future of transportation funding by March 7, and while he acknowledged the package will need bipartisan support to make its way to the governor, he said it was premature to say exactly how many supportive votes either chamber has.

"Whatever the number is, it needs to be recounted. We have to talk to members," Mr. Kahn (R-Saginaw Township) said in an interview. "It's premature to be talking about vote numbers when there's nothing there for them to like or dislike."

The idea is that by March 7, the Legislature would send to Mr. Snyder a mix of higher gasoline taxes and vehicle registration fees to raise $1.2 billion for roads. Then it also would approve a separate 2-cent increase to the sales tax, now set at 6 cents for every dollar, and put that proposal on the ballot in May. If voters approved, the higher gasoline taxes and vehicle registration fees would disappear.

March 7 is the last day to put something on the May ballot.



Regardless, Mr. Kahn acknowledged the legislation - whenever it is introduced - would need Democratic support, though he was not sure what exactly could be part of the mix to earn it.

In a panel event on Thursday in Mount Pleasant, { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=206201&locid=1" } (R-Traverse City) suggested possibly including restoring some of the reduction implemented to the Earned Income Tax Credit to lure some Democratic appeal, { HYPERLINK "http://www.detroitnews.com/article/20130118/POLITICS02/301180382/1022/politics/Snyder-favors-allowing-voters-decide-how-pay-highway-upgrade" \t "blank" }.

Mr. Schmidt did not return messages Friday on the soon-to-come transportation bills.

As for ideas that would appeal to Democrats, Mr. Kahn said: "Nothing is off the table for me and nothing is on the table for me."

And Democrats are generally waiting to see what will happen, too.

"We're not proposing anything at this point," said Bob McCann, spokesperson for Senate { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=60101&locid=1" } (D-East Lansing). "We need to see the details of it and we'll be able to work with them on where our concerns lie."

Mr. McCann said he believes Republicans know where Democrats' interests lie - in education - but remained adamant that Democrats are waiting to see what exactly is proposed first.

Ms. Whitmer has previously stated that she could not see herself or her caucus supporting further burdens on individuals and families as has been done for the past two years, she said (See { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=news.cfm&article_id=520050102" }).

"Our members have some pretty significant concerns with the burden being put on families," Mr. McCann said. "(Mr. Snyder) mentioned potentially $120 in user fees as if it's nothing, and maybe it's not to him, but to a lot of families that is.

"The question is what are (Republicans) putting on the table and what are the expectations at that point," Mr. McCann said.

In the meantime, { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=73001&locid=1" } (R-Traverse City) has already proposed legislation to increase the sales tax by 1 percent, and more legislation to eliminate the gas tax. Some skeptics - including Mr. Kahn - have said a 1 percent sales tax increase would only be enough to replace revenues currently while 2 percent could allow for more growth (See { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=news.cfm&article_id=520100101" }).

Group Executive Format Pays Off For Quality Of Life

Governors, and their agency directors, have talked for years about the need for the different departments to work together on various projects, but those efforts always seemed to fall short.

{ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=245801&locid=1" }'s use of the group executive system, however, seems to be paying off, at least for the Quality of Life Group. But the directors in that group acknowledge it helps they have all known each other for some time.

Environmental Quality Director Dan Wyant said the system is the best he has seen so far in getting the departments to work together, and he has directed two different departments under three different governors.

"This group executive process is working phenomenally well in our area," he said, adding he had talked to the Natural Resources and Agriculture and Rural Development directors more under the current administration than he had the DNR and DEQ directors under the prior two administrations where he worked as Agriculture director.

But he said it helped that he had worked with all of his counterparts on some level, as well as with former DNR Director Rodney Stokes.

Natural Resources Director Keith Creagh has the most obvious ties to Mr. Wyant, having served as one of his deputies in Agriculture before being appointed director of that department by Mr. Snyder.

"It worked well when I was at Agriculture. It works as well or better now that I'm at the DNR," Mr. Creagh said.

Mr. Stokes, now working in the Executive Office, was a long-time DNR deputy before Mr. Snyder named him director there in his third shot at that office.

Agriculture Director Jamie Clover Adams had worked with all of her current counterparts both as policy director in the DEQ and as deputy chief of staff of Senate Republican caucus, and she had contact with Mr. Wyant at least in her role as Kansas agriculture director.

"Dan and Keith and I have known each other for a while anyway," Ms. Clover Adams said.

She said the three directors meet monthly, which helps the departments to work together better. "It gives the staff a focal point as well," she said. "People are more aware."

"I'm seeing the staff work together on a number of issues," Mr. Creagh said.

Ms. Clover Adams said that cooperation was essential to development of a new Continental Dairy plant in Coopersville.

She said the regulators from Agriculture and DEQ worked together to smooth the permitting process for the new plant.

"We did our job. We focused on food safety," she said. "But we worked together to get that done."

The program will work even better once the three departments are in one building, Mr. Wyant said.

"We're saving the state money because we're using space efficiently," he said. The departments already share a number of services, and most of those are housed in Constitution Hall where the DEQ and Agriculture already have their headquarters.

Each of the directors also hailed the technology improvements to be made to both buildings as part of the move and renovations.

The move has meant some upheaval. Constitution Hall is riddled with large containers of various materials being moved. And Mr. Wyant was working from temporary office space while the move was completed.

Department of Technology, Management and Budget officials estimated the renovation of Constitution Hall and relocation of DNR staff there would take about a year and a half. Mason Building renovations are set to begin in about six months and last as long as three years.

Once the renovations are completed, departments currently in leased space would move to the Mason Building.

Yowchuang, Seewald Avoid Jail Time In McCotter Petition Fraud

Two top former aides to ex-U.S. Rep. Thaddeus McCotter will have to perform considerable community service, but will not have to serve jail time for their role in the petition fraud scandal that destroyed Mr. McCotter's political career.

Besides avoiding jail time in the case, Don Yowchuang and Paul Seewald also received another piece of welcome news when Wayne Circuit Judge Margie Braxton dropped the felony conspiracy charge pending against both men. That's especially good news for Mr. Seewald because that means he avoids any felony convictions.

Mr. Yowchuang, who was Mr. McCotter's deputy district director and generally seen as the ringleader of the fraud, earlier had pleaded no contest to 10 felony counts of forgery and six misdemeanor counts of falsely signing a nominating petition as a circulator. He received three years probation with any probation violation resulting in him serving the last year in jail. Mr.

Yowchuang also received a sentence of 200 hours community service, court costs and fees and a requirement to report any contact with police or loss of employment to his probation officer.

Mr. Yowchuang admitted to authorities that he copied pages of petitions signed by registered voters to inflate the number of signatures the campaign submitted. The fraud also included the cutting of names and signatures from previous campaigns and pasting of them onto new petitions to pass them off as new signatures, although Mr. Yowchuang has denied doing so.

Mr. Seewald, Mr. McCotter's district director, earlier pleaded guilty to nine misdemeanor counts of falsely signing a nominating petition as a circulator. He received two years probation, 100 hours of community service, court costs and fees and must report any contact with police or loss of employment to his assigned probation officer.

"The message here is very clear - if you break the law, there are consequences," said Joy Yearout, spokesperson for the Department of Attorney General, which handled the case.

Ms. Yearout said the department is reviewing the dismissal of the conspiracy charge against each man and will decide later whether to appeal.

Additionally, Ms. Yearout said the department's investigation into the case remains ongoing although she declined to provide details.

LaHood Announces $31M Toward R.T.A., Public Transportation

{ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=245801&locid=1" } and U.S. Transportation Secretary Ray LaHood traveled to Wayne State University on Friday to announce more than $31 million in federal funds granted to the Regional Transit Authority.

A statement released Friday said the RTA will use the $6.5 million planning grant for a bus rapid transit system that serves four counties and Detroit along major thoroughfares. The creation of the RTA allowed for a $25 million TIGER grant for the M-1 rail consortium to build and operate a 3.3 mile streetcar system along Woodward Avenue from downtown Detroit to the New Center area.

"This is a great example of relentless positive action," said Mr. Snyder during the announcement at WSU according from the governor's office. "After more than 40 years and 23 failed attempts to establish a regional transit authority, I am pleased that we can move forward with our local and federal partners to implement an efficient, effective transportation system for over 4 million Michiganders. This new economic engine will produce thousands of jobs for workers, expand the talent pool for employers and create a broader retail market for small businesses in the region. Secretary LaHood's commitment to these efforts has been vital and we thank him for such strong support."

On Wednesday Mr. Snyder appointed current senior vice president of corporate affairs for DTE Energy and former House Speaker Paul Hillegonds as chair of the RTA. According the statement, the authority will create more than 5,400 jobs. The $6.5 million will fund alternative analyses and environmental studies on Gratiot and Michigan avenues, and a route through northern Oakland and Macomb counties.

"I applaud Michigan's leaders for coming together to support a regional vision for public transportation that will improve access to jobs, education, medical care and other destinations for residents in the Detroit metro area," Mr. LaHood said. "The Obama administration is committed to the creation of a modern transportation system that will create jobs Detroit needs right now, while spurring new economic development to help this region grow stronger in the years to come."

The construction of the Woodward Avenue streetcar line, which will be 3.3 miles long with 11 stops, will begin this summer, the statement said. The construction process is estimated to employ more than 2,000 people.

The public-private partnership is backed by several community leaders, including Roger Penske, Mike Ilitch, Dan Gilbert and Matt Cullen. The Kresge Foundation has donated $35 million and other foundations, corporations, educational and health care institutions have contributed significant amounts to finance the $137 million investment, along with the TIGER grant and earnings from New Market Tax Credits.

Five Democrats, Two Republicans Make Bids For 27th District Senate Seat

The tally is in and a total of five Democrats and two Republicans have submitted their paperwork to run for the vacant 27th District Senate seat left behind by former { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=53401&locid=1" } (D-Flushing).

"I've lived in that area all my life. I think I can do the job and serve the district well," said Democrat Ted Henry, a Genesee County commissioner who entered the race.

Mr. Henry is joined by fellow Democrats { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=106601&locid=1" } of Flint, { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=224601&locid=1" } of Flint, and two residents - Lawrence Woods and Chris Del Morone. Republican challengers include Bob Daunt and Adam Ford, both who have previously run for elected positions before.

Mr. Henry was elected to his first term as a commissioner in November 2006, having served as chair of the Board of Commissioners from January-December 2009. He has also been appointed vice-chairperson and sits on the Parks and Recreation Commission, Genesee County Metropolitan Planning Commission, Genesee County Board of Review and Genesee County Water and Sewer Advisory Commission, according to Genesee County's website.

He works for Clayton Township as a building official.

"I'm a grassroots guy that really doesn't have ties to anybody," he said in a phone interview. "I'm a strong believer in the Democratic Party. I want to support anything I can to retract the right-to-work law."

Mr. Henry also said he would like to help on education and veterans issues, being a Vietnam veteran himself, as well as small businesses. He said his experience in working with county government and the way it is tied to state government (especially when it comes to revenue sharing, he said) would be most beneficial to his working in Lansing if elected.

Much less is known about Democratic candidates Mr. Woods and Mr. Del Morone. Neither returned a phone call by Gongwer News Service seeking comment. Mr. Del Morone ran unsuccessfully for a county commissioner's seat last August.

As for Republicans, Mr. Daunt - who ran for state representative last year - said it was not always his intent to go after the seat previously held by Mr. Gleason (now the Genesee County clerk/register of deeds) but that he was widely encouraged by local Republicans, friends in the political realm and some business people.

He acknowledged that the area is largely Democrat-leaning but that area Republicans felt it was better to at least put up a challenger to represent their party.

"We're hoping maybe we can change some peoples' minds and at least give it a chance," Mr. Daunt said in an interview. He said he is a right-to-life person that believes there should maybe be a part-time Legislature,

"I just think we need a new face and new ideas. So many of these politicians, they're lifetime politicians," he said, making specific mention of Mr. Gleason who worked his way up from the local level to state senator. "I think we need other people to come in and do some changes."

Mr. Ford has also previously run for multiple elected seats, ranging from the city of Flint School Board to the state House and Senate.

"I'm a lot more conservative and I'm not really happy with what's going on in the city of Flint," Mr. Ford said in an interview. He said he works in customer service and decided to run after seeing who was in the race and deciding the city "needed somebody to be a better representative for Flint."

Mr. Ford said he is not a fan of special interests in the state and floated such ideas as repealing the state income tax, taking on auto insurance mandates, cutting the budget, and deregulating electricity in an effort to have smaller bills as ideas he had if elected. He also said he'd like { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=245801&locid=1" } to look at the city of Flint water bills, calling their rates "criminal."

Snyder Receives Average Grade In Conservation

The Michigan League of Conservation Voters, which endorsed { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=245801&locid=1" } in 2010 in the Republican primary, gave Mr. Snyder a "C" grade for his first two years in office, according to a statement released Friday.

The report card is based on Mr. Snyder's bill signings, vetoes, appointments, executive orders, permit approvals and denials during his term so far, the statement said. A "How Green is Your Governor?" accountability tool can he found { HYPERLINK "http://www.michiganlcv.org/sites/default/files/HOWGREENISYOURGOV2012Jan17_FINALWEB2.pdf" \t "blank" }.

"The governor always promises relentless positive action; this midterm report card is the result of our own relentless tracking," said Lisa Wozniak, executive director at the league. "The governor is also consistently seeking metrics to determine progress - a practice we rely on ourselves. We are happy to share our metrics of his performance with the public now."

The league endorsed Mr. Snyder because his platform embraced the importance of protecting Michigan's land, air and water. Since taking office, the statement said, Mr. Snyder's activity has been focused on transportation and agriculture and not much has been done to conserve resources, resulting in his average grade.

"We would love nothing more than to assign Governor Snyder an A+ on the next report card and have him proudly take it home and pin it to the refrigerator," Ms. Wozniak said. "For now, though, if we were to scrawl a quick note at the bottom of this one it would simply say that 'the governor shows remarkable potential, but he has yet to really apply himself. As a bit of a nerd, he must better stand up for himself when confronted by bullies in the Legislature.'"

Supreme Court Orders Sexual Abuse Case Back To Appeals Court

The Court of Appeals has been ordered by the Supreme Court to review a case of a man convicted of criminal sexual conduct committed when he was 13, saying the defendant gave up his right to appeal on whether it was appropriate for him to have been tried based on his age at the time of the crime.

While Christopher Kiyoshk committed the act when he was 13, he was 21 when he was charged and convicted, and a 5-0 majority of the Supreme Court said the issue of whether he should have been tried in a circuit court was a matter of personal judgment. Because Mr. Kiyoshk failed to object to the trial court hearing his case, he lost on the question of whether it was appropriate for him to have been tried in circuit court at all.

The order, in People v. Kiyoshk (SC docket No. 143469), was one of three orders the Supreme Court issued Friday regarding cases it had heard.

Mr. Kiyoshk pleaded guilty to having sexual intercourse with a victim who was younger than 13 when he himself was 13 (though there was a question of whether he was 14 when the crime occurred, which would have made him eligible for circuit court jurisdiction). He was charged with the offense in 2006 when he was 21.

He later challenged his guilty plea, arguing that as a minor he should not have been subject to the circuit court. The trial court disagreed. But the Court of Appeals vacated his plea, saying the trial court lacked jurisdiction.

The Supreme Court reversed the appeals court and ordered the case back to that panel to rule on an argument from Mr. Kiyoshk that he had ineffective counsel.

The trial court had general subject matter supervision over the crime. The matter of his age, the court said, was a matter of personal judgment on the part of the court.

But because he entered a guilty plea, and did not object to the court's supervision of the case, the Supreme Court said Mr. Kiyoshk implicitly agreed to the personal judgment of the court in trying him.

{ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=334301&locid=1" } did not participate in the decision since it was argued before she was elected. { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=153201&locid=1" } did not participate as she is vacating the court on Monday after being implicated in an alleged fraudulent short sale of her Detroit-area home.

HOMELESS INJURY: A homeless man residing at a shelter cannot claim to be a family member of the shelter, and therefore an insurance company cannot claim benefits to cover his injuries, the Supreme Court held in another order.

The court decided 5-1 to order that summary judgment be granted to National Liability and Fire Insurance in Michigan Insurance Company v. National Liability and Fire Insurance (SC docket No. 144771).

In the case, Lawrence Stubbe, a homeless man residing at a Pontiac shelter, was injured when he was struck by a car. Michigan Insurance provided coverage for the car and paid his bills, but then sued National Liability, which covered the shelter. Michigan Insurance argued that Mr. Stubbe was a ward of the shelter and should be covered by National Liability.

But the Supreme Court ordered that summary judgment be awarded National Liability. Mr. Stubbe was injured as a pedestrian and was not a relative of the shelter.

{ HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=151701&locid=1" } wrote that he would have heard the full appeal. Ms. Hathaway did not participate in the decision.

MALPRACTICE TIMING: The Supreme Court also rejected an appeal trying to block a medical malpractice case based on the timing of the initial suit.

The court split 3-3 on whether to rule in favor of Peter Barrett in Hoffman v. Barrett (SC docket No. 144875) so the ruling of the Court of Appeals was upheld. { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=75601&locid=1" }, { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=114801&locid=1" } and { HYPERLINK "http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=148801&locid=1" } would have reversed the Court of Appeals. What action { HYPERLINK

"http://www.gongwer.com/index.cfm?link=bio.cfm&nameid=298201&locid=1" }, Mr. Cavanagh and Ms. McCormack would take was not noted. Ms. Hathaway did not participate.

The case has gone back and forth in the courts, and several times been before the Supreme Court, on the question of whether an earlier ruling by the Supreme Court extended a specific time frame that Beth Hoffman, personal representative for the estate of Edgar Brown, could file suit against Mr. Barrett.

The Court of Appeals held that the suit could go forward.

Michigan Ranks 6th In Unemployment Among The States

Michigan's December unemployment rate of 8.9 percent leaves it with the sixth-highest unemployment rate among the states, according to data released Friday by the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics.

Two states, Nevada and Rhode Island, shared the top spot for the highest unemployment rates at 10.2 percent, and both saw improvements in their jobless rates from November.

North Dakota continued to have the best unemployment rate, but actually saw its jobless rate go up slightly in December compared to November.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics said that 22 states showed declines in unemployment from November to December 2012. Another 16 states and the District of Columbia showed increases. Twelve states, including Michigan, were unchanged from November to December.

Nevada's unemployment rate fell from 10.8 percent in November to 10.2 percent in December. Rhode Island saw its rate drop from 10.4 percent to 10.2 percent.

California had the third-highest rate at 9.8 percent, unchanged from the previous month. New Jersey stood at 9.6 percent, down from 9.7 percent in November. That was followed by North Carolina at 9.2 percent, up from 9.1 percent.

On the low end, North Dakota's 3.2 percent unemployment in December was actually up from 3.1 percent in November. Nebraska's 3.7 percent was unchanged from November, and South Dakota's 4.4 percent unemployment was also unchanged.

In terms of the Great Lakes states, after Michigan and Illinois had jobless rates of 8.7 percent, unchanged from the previous month. Both Indiana and New York had rates of 8.2 percent, but New York's was down from 8.3 percent in November, while Indiana's was up from 8 percent. Pennsylvania stood at 7.9 percent, up from 7.8 percent the previous month. Ohio was at 6.7 percent, down from 6.8 percent. Wisconsin stood at 6.6 percent, unchanged from November. And Minnesota had the lowest rate at 5.5 percent, down from 5.6 percent.

Gaming Board To Review Gilbert Purchase Of Greektown

The Gaming Control Board is scheduled to review a plan next week to allow Quicken Loans founder Dan Gilbert to purchase the Greektown Casino and Hotel.

In a deal announced earlier this week, Athens Acquisition, a company affiliated with Rock Gaming, which Mr. Gilbert chairs, would purchase the majority stake in the casino. Mr. Gilbert said the purchase, if approved, would lead to additional renovations to the facility.

Greektown has struggled financially, undergone several ownership changes and experienced bankruptcy since opening and has remained the smallest of the three private casinos in the city.

The board is set to consider the transaction at its meeting on Tuesday in Detroit.

Board Approves Loans For Muskegon Heights, Highland Park Schools

Two of the school districts currently under emergency financial management were approved Friday for a total $6.5 million in emergency loans from the state.

The Local Emergency Financial Assistance Loan Board found that both Highland Park Public Schools and Muskegon Heights Public Schools would run deficits for the current school year and needed the loans to cover those shortfalls.

Highland Park will borrow $3 million and Muskegon Heights $3.5 million. Under the loan agreements, Treasurer Andy Dillon would have to approve use of the funds, which are only to pay vendors.

The districts are alone in having their operations passed to a charter school management company as part of the effort to repair their finances. Managers in both districts found they would not be able to balance their budgets under their prior management structures.

Michigan Foreclosure Rate Drops In 2012

Foreclosures in Michigan during 2012 fell by 23.4 percent from 2011, a national tracking firm said. But the state still had more than 76,000 foreclosures during the year and an overall foreclosure rate of 1.69 percent, meaning Michigan was still among the 10 states with the highest rate of foreclosures.

According to RealtyTrac, a California-based online foreclosure firm, Michigan's number of foreclosures was down by 43.4 percent from 2010.

Florida had the highest overall foreclosure rate. The more than 279,000 homes foreclosed in that state meant 3.11 percent of its properties were taken. Florida's foreclosure rate increased by 53.45 percent from 2011.

Following Florida was Nevada, where 31,658 properties were foreclosed on, meaning 2.7 percent of the properties were taken. Still, foreclosures declined by almost 57 percent from 2011.

Arizona was in third place, as the 76,487 properties meant that 2.69 percent of its properties returned to the lender. It was followed by Georgia, where 105,610 properties meant that 2.58 percent of its properties were changed. Then came Illinois, where 2.58 percent of its properties were lost, 136,603, in 2012. California saw 319,162 properties foreclosed, or 2.33 percent.

Ohio was seventh overall, as 89,584, or 1.75 percent of its properties foreclosed on in 2012.

Michigan was eighth. Its 76,711 properties foreclosed represented 1.69 percent of properties lost.

In ninth place was South Carolina, where 35,583, or 1.66 percent of its properties, were foreclosed on in 2012. Finally, in 10th place, was Colorado where during 2012 1.64 percent of its properties, 36,246, were foreclosed on.

North Dakota had the lowest overall rate of foreclosures, with just 119 properties, or 0.04 percent of its total, taken. However, that still represented a 29.35 percent increase over 2011.

MURRAY: Public should know the real King, Obama

Today marks only the eighth time in the history of our country that a president is to publicly take the oath of office on a Monday. It is also the second time a president has publicly been sworn in on Martin Luther King, Jr. Day, a federally-observed holiday. Those facts make for interesting trivia, but while the two men will dominate the day, there are some perspectives we should take note of."

Secretary of State Johnson Must Allow Young Immigrants the Right to Drive

DETROIT – in a telephone news conference on Wednesday, Reverend Jack Eggleston joined two young immigrants to demand that Secretary of State Ruth Johnson comply with federal guidelines and grant young eligible immigrants the right to drive. Michigan immigrants eligible for work permits under immigration reforms still have no legal way to search for work or to get to work because of Johnson's illogical refusal to grant them driver's licenses. President Obama's executive action this summer allows certain younger undocumented immigrants work permits and temporary relief from prosecution under the Deferred Action Childhood Arrivals (DACA) program. During the news conference, Attorney Susan Reed provided a legal perspective while Adonis Flores, an immigrant Wayne State University student and Jose Franco cofounder of One Michigan recounted the burden placed on them by Johnson's roadblock to their legal right to drive."

U-M professor: Provisional residency in U.S. can solve illegal immigration problem

"As support builds for some kind of immigration reform, the focus has been on "legalization" proposals for the 11 million undocumented. Yet legalization, though important, is only a temporary fix. If the rules we use to admit immigrants do not change, immigrants will continue to come to the U.S illegally despite all of the border security and workplace enforcement we can create. The problem at the heart of immigration reform is simple: People we want to come to the U.S legally, can't."

Senator Hopgood's "Children's Protection Act" Moves to Senate Floor

LANSING — Senator Hoon-Yung Hopgood (D – Taylor) today commended the Senate Judiciary Committee on its passage of the "Children's Protection Act," which was reintroduced by Sen. Hopgood in late January. Senate Bill 131 would place restrictions on parental rights of sex offenders, allowing judges to grant custody only if there is clear and convincing evidence demonstrating that doing so presents no substantial risk to that child, and that there is a preponderance of evidence demonstrating that denying custody or parenting time creates a substantial risk of harm to the child. The legislation now moves to the Senate floor."

Faith Leaders Lead Immigration Rally to Rep. Mike Rogers' Office Urging Support of Immigrant Familie

"LANSING – This morning, Lansing faith leaders led members of Michigan United, Action of Greater Lansing and other immigration reform advocates in a rally that turned into a march to Congressman Mike Rogers' office. The event began at Union Missionary Baptist Church of Lansing and marched across the street to Rogers' office. Once there, activists left dozens of pairs of shoes as symbols, hoping to make real the deaths and devastation that continue to plague families as a result of the broken immigration system. The group requested a meeting with Rogers and called on him and other GOP House members to help put an end to deaths and deportations that are a direct product of the failed immigration system. "

Gov. Rick Snyder: City of Flint ready to move forward as financial emergency resolved

Transition advisory board of city leaders to help with financial stability

LANSING, Mich. –The financial emergency in the city of Flint has been resolved and a Receivership Transition Advisory Board has been appointed to ensure a smooth transition to local control and continued financial stability for the city, Gov. Rick Snyder said.

"I was pleased to receive and accept Jerry Ambrose's recommendation that the financial emergency in Flint has been sufficiently addressed," Snyder said. "This is a new day for Flint and the city is ready to move toward a brighter future. These are important steps as we work together to transition back to local control in the city."

Snyder said Ambrose, and those who preceded him, worked diligently to finalize several critical reforms in the city, so it can return to local control. The Receivership Transition Advisory Board appointed today will work closely with local leaders to ensure Flint continues on a path toward long-term financial stability.

Ambrose notified the governor Tuesday of his determination, noting numerous accomplishments in Flint since a financial emergency was declared in November, 2011:

- Deficits in both the General Fund and Water Fund have been addressed, with a $7 million GF deficit to be eliminated through a loan authorized by the Local Financial Assistance Loan Board this morning.
- Long-term liability costs have been reduced from $850 million to $240 million. Multipliers for remaining employees with defined benefit pension plans have been reduced with new employees enrolled in a hybrid pension plan.

- New ordinances addressing long-term financial sustainability have been enacted by City Council with support of the mayor, including a strategic plan; a biennial budget and five-year financial projections; and, establishment of a fund balance reserve, including establishment of a budget stabilization fund.
- The structure of the city organization has changed significantly. A city administrator has been hired with expanded control over daily activities. The workforce has been reduced by more than 20 percent with city operations to better reflect and meet current needs.
- In November 2014, voters approved revisions to the current charter and approved establishment of a Charter Review Commission, which will consider the city's future form of governance, including whether to create a city manager.

Ambrose had previously enacted a two-year budget for the city and issued his final order as emergency manager this morning. The order outlines responsibilities of elected officials and their collaboration and cooperation with the RTAB.

The new board includes:
- Frederick Headen, legal advisor to the state treasurer (state treasurer designee).
- Brian Larkin, director at Flint and Genesee County Chamber of Commerce (Department of Technology, Management and Budget director designee).
- David McGhee, officer with the Skillman Foundation (representing persons with relevant professional experience).
- Robert McMahan, president of Kettering University (representing persons with relevant professional experience.
- Beverly Walker-Griffea, president of Mott Community College (representing persons with relevant professional experience).

"I am very pleased to appoint such distinguished people to this important post," Snyder said. "Each of these people cares deeply about the future of this great city and I'm certain they will work closely with Mayor Walling and city council members to move Flint forward and maintain a strong financial path."

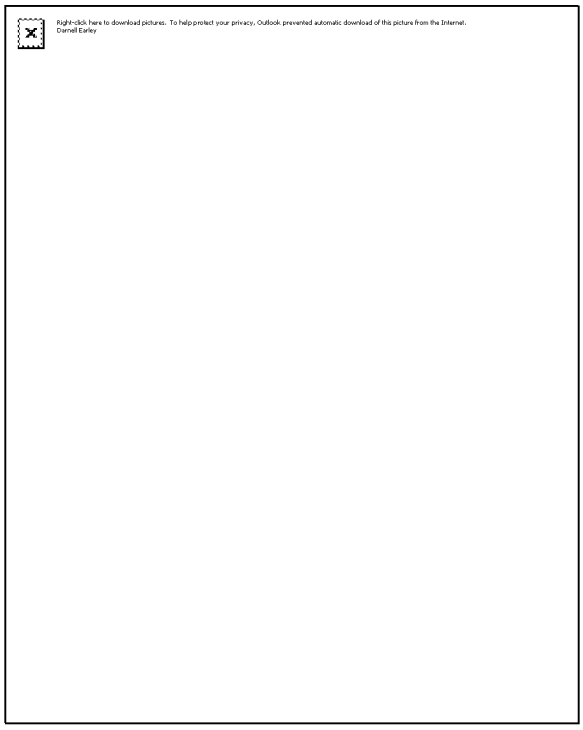
Gov. Rick Snyder: Detroit Public Schools financial emergency continues

Darnell Earley named new financial manager as community discusses future of city's public education; transitional emergency manager named in Flint



LANSING, Mich. – Detroit Public Schools remains under a financial emergency as community leaders start discussions about a long-term reinvention to build a stable, financially secure system that creates a brighter future for all city students, Gov. Rick Snyder said.

With the district struggling with a nearly $170 million deficit, Snyder said it is necessary to continue with an emergency manager while community discussions move forward. He today announced the appointment of Darnell Earley, following the provisions of Public Act 436 of 2012. Earley replaces Emergency Manager Jack Martin effective today.

The transition in Detroit Public Schools comes as the Coalition for Future of Detroit Schoolchildren, convened by the Skillman Foundation, starts a community discussion about the future of all the city's schools. That work will continue and Snyder plans to meet with the coalition members later in the week.

"A thriving public school system is an essential part of Detroit's comeback," Snyder said. "Financial challenges unquestionably hinder efforts to improve academics. I appreciate the hard work of Jack Martin, who oversaw the district during an extremely challenging period. Darnell Earley has a track record of success and can guide the district as we work collectively and collaboratively to turnaround the fiscal crisis and ensure a quality education for the city's school children that they need and deserve."

Snyder made the announcement at Detroit Public School District's Burton International Academy.

Earley has served as the city of Flint's emergency manager since September 2013. His experience includes serving as Saginaw city manager, Flint city administrator and Ingham County's budget director and deputy controller. Earley is a municipal finance expert known for working closely with community organizations.

Earley will be replaced in Flint by Jerry Ambrose, who since December 2011 has served as financial adviser to Flint's emergency manager. Earley's term in Flint was expected to expire in April, and the city is still expected to transition back to local control at that time.

"Important community discussions are underway about creating a brighter future for education in Detroit," Earley said. "It's vital for the district to be on firmer financial footing so this work can move forward. Education must be a cornerstone of a strong, revitalized Detroit."

Snyder praised Martin for his leadership of the state's largest school district during challenging times. Martin worked to stabilize the district's enrollment after 20 years of significant losses. He also restored art, music and athletic programs at elementary and middle school levels and redesigned career tech programs to address current needs in the skilled trade marketplace.

Martin also refocused the district's real estate strategy, selling and leasing a number of unused properties to generate several million dollars for the city schools.

"I took this job because it meant I would be helping children get the education they need to be productive, successful members of our community," Martin said. "Every action I've taken over the last 18 months has been about the students and fixing the system so every child in Detroit can receive the quality education they deserve."

THE REINVENTION OF MICHIGAN CONTINUES.
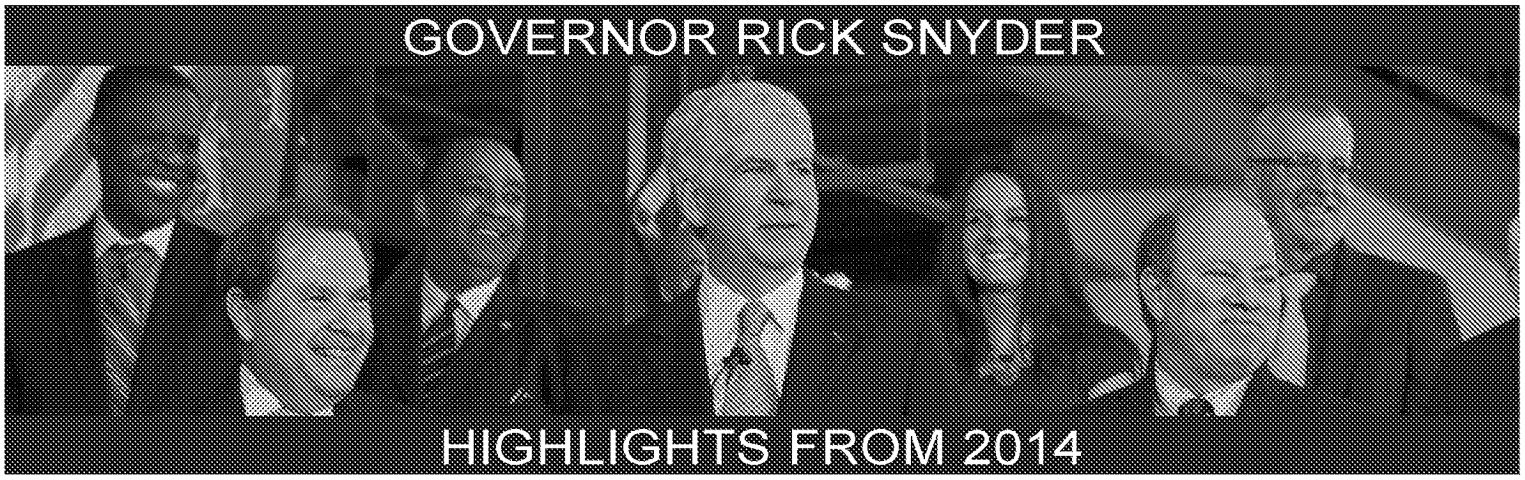
2015 STATE OF THE STATE ADDRESS



In 2014, we continued our focus on creating more and better jobs for Michiganders while solving our state's toughest problems. More than 300,000 private sector jobs have been created since December 2010, over half a million Michiganders now have health care under the Healthy Michigan plan, and Detroit is on the threshold of a brighter future. Together, we achieved great results, but our work is not yet done.

MAKING MICHIGAN #1 IN SKILLED TRADES

- The Community College Skilled Trades Equipment Program will make $50 million available to community colleges for the purchase of training equipment for in-demand occupations, and the Skilled Trades Training Fund helps Michigan companies find the talent they need by training Michiganders for skilled trades.
- Expanded career apprenticeships with the MAT2 apprenticeship program in high-tech fields, more than doubling the number of students and participating companies.
- FIRST Robotics continues to grow, and Michigan is now first in the nation with 349 high school teams -- more than any other state.

HELPING MICHIGAN BUSINESSES GROW

- Eliminated the Personal Property Tax, removing a disincentive for businesses to expand.
- Pure Michigan Business Connect continues to connect Michigan businesses with each other so they can grow. The program has facilitated $2 billion in contracts since it started in 2011.

IMPROVING EDUCATION

- Expanded Preschool Education for low-income children with $65 million in additional funding in FY2015, helping to make Michigan a no-wait state for preschool.
- Pathways to Potential provides better service to Michiganders by bringing caseworkers to 219 schools in 22 counties. The program has reduced chronic absenteeism by 33% for 2013-2014 school year in Pathways schools.

HELPING MICHIGANDERS

- Healthy Michigan was launched in April 2014, and more than 500,000 low-income, working Michiganders are enrolled. Within first nine months we have seen almost 350,000 primary and preventive care visits, over 26,000 mammograms and over 12,000 colonoscopies.

THE REINVENTION OF MICHIGAN CONTINUES.

- Helping People with Disabilities: Issued an executive directive eliminating hurdles faced by people with disabilities as they seek a career in public service and called for increased training for all state employees to raise awareness of disability etiquette and best practices.
- Jobs for Veterans: Partnered with Hiring Our Heroes program to help active-duty members find jobs after leaving the military; added $4.7 million for a tuition assistance program for Air and Army National Guard personnel; launched a 24/7, 365-day hotline (1-800-MICH-VET) to provide veterans and their families access to benefits they deserve.
- Serving Older Michiganders by increasing funding to make Michigan a "no-wait" state for in-home services and to combat elder abuse.

IMPROVING PUBLIC SAFETY

- Secure Cities Partnership has reduced violent crime from 2011 to 2014 by 20.2% in Detroit, 28.1% in Flint, 28.3% in Pontiac and 26.7% in Saginaw.
- Investing in Public Safety to train more troopers and to update the state's public safety communications system, bringing Michigan's trooper strength from 957 in 2011 to 1,184 in 2015.

CONSERVING OUR ENVIRONMENT

- Expanded Recycling with a statewide initiative to double Michigan's recycling rate within two years, and we're on a path to success.

PREPAREDNESS AND DISASTER RESPONSE

- We've seen good government at its best in the preparedness and response to several disaster situations throughout our state that impacted the lives of thousands. Whether it was the flooding in Southeast or Mid-Michigan, addressing a propane shortage in the Upper Peninsula, or even preparing for the threat of Ebola, we saw cooperation and coordination from all levels of government that shows we are prepared to respond to unforeseen threats to our people.

FINANCIAL RESPONSIBILITY

- Balanced Budget: We've had four years of balanced budgets, all of which were completed in June, giving school districts, local governments and other recipients of state funding the info they need to plan their budgets.

RESTORING OUR CITIES

- Detroit: Detroit's bankruptcy was completed, securing pensions, putting the city on a sound fiscal path, allowing for a reinvestment into city services, safeguarding the Detroit Institute of Arts, and improving the quality of life for the city's 700,000 residents.
- Other Cities: The financial emergencies in Benton Harbor and Allen Park were resolved last year, and we are on a path to transition out of financial emergency in Flint. Progress is being made in restoring fiscal health to the public sector, and we should be proud that we're tackling the tough challenges at all levels.

PROVISIONS CONCERNING APPROPRIATIONS

FOR FISCAL YEAR 2014-2015

GENERAL SECTIONS

Sec. 201. In accordance with the provisions of section 30 of article IX of the state constitution of 1963, total state spending from state resources in this appropriation act for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2015 is $7,775,000.00 and state appropriations paid to local units of government are $0.00.

Sec. 202. The appropriations made and expenditures authorized under this act and the departments, commissions, boards, offices, and programs for which appropriations are made under this act are subject to the management and budget act, 1984 PA 431, MCL 18.1101 to 18.1594.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE

Sec. 301. (1) From unexpended and unencumbered funds appropriated in 2010 PA 191 for branch and central operations, $6,000,000.00 is appropriated for a business application modernization project and shall be reappropriated for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2015 in an appropriation line entitled information technology services and projects.

(2) The funds described in subsection (1) shall remain available for expenditure to implement provisions of business application modernization ongoing costs. The unexpended funds reappropriated into the information technology services and projects line item are considered work project appropriations, and any unencumbered or unallotted funds are carried forward into the succeeding fiscal year. The following is in compliance with section 451a(1) of the management and budget act, 1984 PA 431, MCL 18.1451a:

(a) The purpose of the projects is to modernize the technical infrastructure to support the business needs of the department.

(b) The projects will be completed by contract staff and state employees.

(c) The total estimated cost of all projects is $6,000,000.00.

(d) The tentative completion date is September 30, 2019.

Sec. 302. (1) Unexpended and unencumbered amounts of funding remaining in accounts appropriated in section 301 of 2011 PA 83, for implementation of the help America vote act of 2002, 42 USC 15031 to 15545, for the secretary of state, shall be reappropriated for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2015 in an appropriation line item entitled help America vote act.

(2) The funds described in subsection (1) shall remain available for expenditure to implement provisions of the help America vote act of 2002, 42 USC 15031 to 15545, section 37 of the Michigan election law, 1954 PA 116, MCL 168.37, and other election reforms. Consistent with the help America vote act of 2002, 42 USC 15031 to 15545, the unexpended funds reappropriated into the help America vote act line item are considered work project appropriations and any unencumbered or unallotted funds are carried forward into succeeding fiscal years. The following is in compliance with section 451a(1) of the management and budget act, 1984 PA 431, MCL 18.1451a:

(a) The purpose of the projects is to implement provisions of the help America vote act of 2002, 42 USC 15031 to 15545, section 37 of the Michigan election law, 1954 PA 116, MCL 168.37, and other election reforms.

(b) The projects will be completed by state employees, by contracts with private vendors, or by grants to local units of government.

(c) The total estimated cost of these projects is identified in each line-item appropriation.

(d) The tentative completion date for these projects is September 30, 2019.

STATE TRANSPORTATION DEPARTMENT

Sec. 401. Unexpended and unencumbered amounts of DOT, federal railroad administration (ARRA) funds appropriated in 2011 PA 157 for high-speed intercity passenger rail (ARRA) shall not lapse pursuant to section 451a(1) of the management and budget act, 1984 PA 431, MCL 18.1451a, but instead are reappropriated for expenditure as originally intended and are a work project meeting the following criteria:

(a) The purpose of the project to be carried forward is to preserve and invest in transportation infrastructure of the state of Michigan.

(b) The projects will be accomplished by state employees and by contract.

(c) The total estimated cost of the project is $26,711,800.00.

(d) The tentative completion date is September 30, 2017.

DEPARTMENT OF TREASURY

Sec. 501. (1) From the funds appropriated in part 1 for special grants, the fund shall allocate $500,000.00 for the purpose of funding the cost of GED testing and certification as provided by this section. The workforce development agency shall administer a

Michigan GED-to-school program, which shall cover the cost of providing the GED test free of charge to individuals who meet all of the following requirements:

(a) The individual has not previously been administered a GED test free of charge under this section.

(b) The individual meets at least 1 of the following requirements:

(i) Prior to taking the GED test, the individual successfully completed a WDA-approved GED preparation program.

(ii) Prior to taking the GED test, the individual completed the official GED practice test and the individual's score indicated that he or she is likely to pass.

(2) A WDA-approved GED preparation program shall include all of the following:

(a) Instructional and tutorial assistance.

(b) GED test practice.

(c) Required attendance at program instructional sessions.

(d) A curriculum that prepares students for opportunities in postsecondary education and the job market.

(e) Information on potential postsecondary and career pathways.

(f) Counseling on preparing for and applying to college.

(g) Personal and job readiness skills development.

(h) Comprehensive information on college costs and financial aid.

(i) College and career assessments.

(j) Computer-based instruction, practice, or remediation.

(3) By January 1, 2016, the workforce development agency shall post online an announcement of the Michigan GED-to-school program, minimum standards for GED preparation program approval, and approval procedures.

(4) By April 1, 2016, the workforce development agency shall do all of the following:

(a) Develop procedures consistent with this section under which individuals can take the GED test without charge.

(b) Provide program information for educators and students on the workforce development agency website, including explanations of the procedures developed under this subsection, and contact information for questions about the program.

(c) Provide an estimate of the full-year cost of the program to the senate and house appropriations subcommittees on general government, the senate and house fiscal agencies, and the state budget director.

(5) By September 30, 2016, the workforce development agency shall report to the senate and house appropriations subcommittees on general government, the senate and house fiscal agencies, and the state budget director on utilization of the GED incentive program, including numbers of GED certifications issued by location, year-to-date expenditures, and numbers of participants qualifying under subsection (1)(b)(i) or (ii), or both.

(6) The unexpended funds appropriated for the GED-to-school program are designated as a work project appropriation, and any unencumbered or unallotted funds shall not lapse at the end of the fiscal year and shall be available for expenditure for projects under this section until the projects have been completed. The following is in compliance with section 451a(1) of the management and budget act, 1984 PA 431, MCL 18.1451a:

(a) The purpose of the project is to fund the cost of GED testing and certification for certain individuals as provided by this section.

(b) The projects will be accomplished by utilizing state employees or contracts with private vendors, or both.

(c) The total estimated cost of the project is $500,000.00.

(d) The tentative completion date is September 30, 2019.

PART 2A

PROVISIONS CONCERNING APPROPRIATIONS

FOR FISCAL YEAR 2015-2016

GENERAL SECTIONS

Sec. 1201. In accordance with the provisions of section 30 of article IX of the state constitution of 1963, total state spending from state resources in this appropriation act for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2016 is $9,350,100.00 and state appropriations paid to local units of government are $6,000,000.00.

Sec. 1202. The appropriations made and expenditures authorized under this act and the departments, commissions, boards, offices, and programs for which appropriations are made under this act are subject to the management and budget act, 1984 PA 431, MCL 18.1101 to 18.1594.

DEPARTMENT OF ENVIRONMENTAL QUALITY

Sec. 1251. From the funds appropriated for the city of Flint emergency water services, the department is authorized to pay up to $6,000,000.00 for reconnection services to the Detroit water and sewerage department or its successor. The payments shall only be made once a legally executable agreement has been reached between the parties and a successful reconnection has occurred to the Flint water system. These funds are intended to pay reconnection costs through June 30, 2016.

DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH AND HUMAN SERVICES

Sec. 1301. From the funds appropriated in part 1A for Michigan rehabilitation services, the department shall allocate $6,100,300.00, including federal matching funds, to service authorizations with accredited, community-based rehabilitation organizations for job development and other community employment-related support services.

Sec. 1302. (1) From the funds appropriated in part 1A for in-home community care programs, $400,000.00 shall be used to expand or create new in-home care and community-based juvenile justice services to rural counties through a grant making process. Counties that received funds for the purpose described in section 587 of article X of 2013 PA 59 are not eligible to receive the funds in this section. The department shall have contracts in place for the full amount of funds for the purpose described in this section by January 15 of the current fiscal year.

(2) By June 30 of the current fiscal year, the department shall submit a report that describes the program expansion and expenditures in detail to the senate and house appropriations subcommittees on the department budget, the senate and house fiscal agencies, and the senate and house policy offices.

REPEALERS

Enacting section 1. Sections 587 and 806 of article X of 2015 PA 84 are repealed.

Enacting section 2. Section 1069 of article VIII of 2014 PA 252 is repealed.

Subject: Work Project Letter

Hi Dave—

I lied. The work project letter hasn't gone out yet. We're waiting for the FY15 supplemental to pass so we can include the ARRA re-approp and a few other similar items. I'll forward along as soon as it does go out. The FY15 Supp had some boilerplate added relative to the Flint water situation, which delayed things.

Cheers,

2. $850,000 GF – in the Family, Maternal, and Children's Health Services unit; Childhood Lead Program line

3. No boilerplate

4. EXPLANATION - For the Department of Health and Human Services, in addition to the purchase of water filters, funds will be used to conduct visits by nurses and certified Environmental Blood Level Investigators to families in Flint. Nurses will monitor child blood lead levels for changes and communicate with primary care providers if other tests are required. Nurses will also conduct developmental screenings and if necessary make referrals for services in the community. They will also conduct nutritional assessments and counseling. Environmental Blood Level Investigators will test various surfaces in the home for lead, collect dust samples and submit to the lab and conduct detailed inspections. Investigators will also prepare detailed reports summarizing the results of the investigations and coordinate those results with the nurses making home visits.

Farah – we need to discuss the fund sourcing of the proposed FY 16 supplemental and the FY 17 request.

Also, which line items will be affected? I assume more than just the Childhood Lead Program line.

Nancy/Chris – Attached is the DHHS proposed supplemental request related to the City of Flint. We've attempted to provide detailed descriptions of each item requested. The FY16 funding levels are requested in addition to the supplemental dollars already approved in October 2015. The FY17 funding levels proposed assume full year costs, not increases from FY16.

We wanted you to have this as soon as possible. Please feel free to let us know if you have any questions.

From today's agenda at the operations meeting---highlights show potential interest areas.

1. New Contract – update on subcontractor issue raised at CEO meeting
2. MDHHS org charts
3. MI Health Account – What would plans think about 1) conducting reminder calls and 2) allowing credit card payments?
4. MI Child conversion issues
5. HMP Enrollment Update
6. HMP Waiver Update
7. HMP Incentive Random Sample – quarterly. Does MDHHS have a calendar on when these sample reporting will be due? This was part of the performance bonus in FY15. Will this be part of the performance bonus or compliance review?
8. HRA Letters/gift cards – will MDHHS be requiring plans to add reference to using gift cards for healthy behaviors (no tobacco or alcohol)?
9. Update on changes to Quarterly Statement and Copy of the UofM study on recommended changes
10. Blood lead test results from state lab – Will MDHHS be providing this info to the plans? In what format? How often?
11. L 15-73 – City of Flint Blood Lead Guidelines
12. 2016 Compliance Review – Final documents – confirm due date for first submission
13. Final performance bonus requirements for FY2016
14. Rate sheets – when will these be provided? When will updated rates be provided for new risk scores for ABD/CSHCS population? When will the recoup and repay process occur?

DHHS Fiscal Year: 2015

Work Project	Emergency Services Local Office Allocations - Flint Water Safety
Estimated Completion Cost	$1,016,000
Estimated Completion Date	9/30/2016
Appropriation Number	32640
Appropriation Title	Emergency services local office allocations
Estimated End of Year Appropriation Balance	$1,016,000
Estimated Total Carry Forward Amount	$1,016,000
Work Project Carry Forward	"Entire Balance"
Fund Number (D23)	0901 – Est. end of year balance $1,016,000
Fund Name (D23)	State General Purpose / General Fund
Estimated End of Year Fund Balance	$1,016,000
Estimated Total Carry Forward Amount	$1,016,000
Project Purpose:
The Department will utilize surplus FY 2015 Emergency services local office allocation funding to distribute residential water filters for MDHHS clients (FIP, FAP, CDC, SDA, SSI and WIC clients) as outlined in the official action plan for the City of Flint. It is estimated 14,427 client households are located in zip codes 48503 and 48504. The water filters will be maintained by the Community Action Agency for distribution to local offices as needed.
Is there statutory authority designating this project?	No
Public Act and Boilerplate Section	N/A
Is Implementation Plan available for review?	In development. Multi-departmental collaborative with State of Michigan DEQ, MDHHS, Federal EPA, City of Flint, Genesee County and other stakeholders, partners participating in the plan's development.
Summary of Implementation Plan
This is part of the roll out of the entire implementation plan that is currently on a fast track to ensure: testing at schools and homes; determine lead exposure of residents; water testing; corrosion controls; technical assistance; water improvement and replacement of faulty water lines. Both short and long-term action plans are being developed for immediate implementation, but are not complete or ready for review. DHHS has developed specific coding structures and is currently developing policy protocols and staff alerts to institute the distribution of water filters and to provide services as authorized as quickly as possible.

Subject: Work Project Report
Attachments: WP Fiscal Agency Reports_2015-10-20.pdf

This is the 200+ page report that we send to the fiscals on each work project for all departments. The presumption is that there are department implementation plans backing up the summaries (of course, there are no required formats for the full implementation plans – they can be whatever you choose). Regarding new versus continuing work projects, it's not clear what Kevin wants without asking him.

Project Purpose

The purpose of these grants is to support research, education and technical assistance efforts identified as emerging or critical to business development and growth of the food and agriculture industry in Michigan. Eligible entities include educational institutions, economic development organizations, non-profits, agricultural producer networks or cooperatives and agricultural businesses that produce, process or market Michigan grown agricultural products.

Implementation Plan available for Review? Yes

Summary of implementation plan

MDARD established two award rounds, one in March and the second in September. This work project would allow time to adequately complete the committee work for the second round in order to award quality grants. Grant awards will be announced in early October and encumbrances established after agreements are drafted.

Homeowner Protection Fund	3800	$2,800,000	$2,800,000

Project Purpose

These funds are made available under the Joint State-Federal Foreclosure Settlement.

The Home Protection Unit will provide added law enforcement and consumer protection support under the use restrictions placed on the foreclosure funds by the consent judgement. The consent judgement restricts funds to avoid preventable foreclosures, ameliorate effects of the foreclosure crisis, enhances law enforcement efforts against financial fraud, and compensates the state for costs resulting from alleged unlawful conduct of defendants.

Implementation Plan available for Review? Yes

Summary of implementation plan

The Attorney General's Home Protection Unit is staffed with three limited-term attorneys, three investigators, one financial specialist, one legal secretary and two part-time students. The Unit provides legal and consumer protection enforcement to prevent foreclosures and fight financial fraud, subject to the terms of the foreclosure settlement. There are many outstanding cases that will extend past the end date of this work project, and the Attorney General will be requesting a new appropriation in FY 2017, subject to available funds.

Project Purpose

The purpose of the project is to operate a multi-media student safety hotline.

Implementation Plan available for Review? Yes

Summary of implementation plan

The Student Safety Act (P.A. 183 of 2013) required a Request for Proposals for operating the Student Safety Hotline (MSP won the contract in May, 2014). The program, entitled "OK 2 SAY", was launched during the 2014-2015 school year. "OK 2 SAY" is a program designed to empower Michigan students, parents, school personnel, community mental health service programs, and law enforcement to share and respond to student safety threats. The Attorney General is working with the project partners to implement the requirements of the Student Safety Act.

The purpose of the Enterprise IT Solution is to allow the Michigan Gaming Control Board to reduce the current 30 applications supported by IT to a more cohesive environment using one to three commercial off the shelf solution products.

Implementation Plan available for Review? Yes

Summary of implementation plan

MGCB has created a Project Charter as a plan to accomplish Phase 1 of this project. This purpose of Phase 1 is to identify all of the business requirements needed to move forward to granting a request for proposal (RFP). Phase 1 is scheduled to be completed by May 2016 and will be considered complete after final issuance of a vendor contract.

Phase 2 cannot be completed until a vendor is chosen. However, MGCB has conducted spotlight presentations with a few vendors to better gauge system and implementation cost. Estimation was also received of DTMB support charges related to implementation of the system. Based on this research, total budgeted cost is $5,900,000. MGCB is planning final end-user rollout of the Enterprise IT Solution as 9/30/2017.

Federal	0300	$72,000,000	$72,000,000

Project Purpose

Promote adoption and use of Electronic Health Records (EHR) by Eligible Hospitals (EH's) and Eligible Professionals (EP's) by administering 100% Federal incentive payments, and increase the interoperability of State systems to support meaningful use and health information exchange. The latter requires the upgrade of state health related systems to support federally required health IT standards, and the activities are federally funded at 90%.

Implementation Plan available for Review? Yes

Summary of implementation plan

The plan includes the following activities: 1) Administration of Medicaid incentive payments to Medicaid EH's and EP's; 2) Oversight of the Medicaid EHR Incentive Program, including routine tracking of meaningful use attestations and reporting mechanisms: and 3) Pursuit of initiative to encourage the adoption of certified EHR technology for the promotion of health care quality and the electronic exchange of health information; 4) MiHin, MiPage, and Data HUB activities which are Governor's priorities. The total combined estimated completion cost of the overall project is $586.4 million through FY16. This reflects only the current amount approved by CMS through the Advanced Planning Document for the first five years of the project, plus the estimated incentive payments that are 100% Federal. The general fund associated with the project is to match federal Medicaid administration dollars needed to administer the 100% federally funded incentive payments and adapting technology for the promotion of health care quality and the electronic exchange of health information. The total project is anticipated to last 10 years.

General Fund/General Purpose	0100	$1,600,000	$1,600,000

Project Purpose

This project will address a priority of the Mental Health and Wellness Commission which is to improve case management and treatment systems for high risk children and their families, including state hospital, residential and non residential settings.

Implementation Plan available for Review? Yes

Summary of implementation plan

There are multi-faceted planning and evaluation efforts under way especially involving children who are placed in the state institution and who have proven not successful in community placements, even with high intensity wrap around services in the home or foster care setting. The plan is to develop a very specialized private residential setting (called a psychiatric residential treatment facility) which is Medicaid reimbursable for a very narrow set of very high risk children. Michigan does not have one of these types of settings yet so there will be one time development work involved as well as creating the path for this to become part of our Medicaid program on an ongoing basis. Additionally, there will be teams developed to provide support for these same high risk children and others as they move from the psychiatric residential treatment facility or state hospital to community settings with treatment services following them. The two support teams and Psychiatric Residential Treatment facility need to be developed together in order for this to be a successful model for the highest risk children.

Project Purpose

The 2014 Mental Health and Wellness Commission (MHWC) formed several recommendations to improve the lives of and outcomes for individuals and families living with mental illness, developmental disabilities and substance use disorders in the state. This work project will support thirty initiatives that directly address the MHWC recommendations.

Implementation Plan available for Review? Yes

Summary of implementation plan

The FY 2015 appropriation provided $30.6 million for 30 Mental Health and Wellness Commission (MHWC) initiatives, consistent with the recommendations of the Governor's Mental Health and Wellness Commission. The project plan would be to carry forward unspent funds in order complete these initiatives. The work project dollars are proposed to be distributed proportionally to the current MHWC initiatives based upon the original FY 2015 allocation of funding. The department intends to fully spend the FY 15 work projected dollars by the end of FY 2016.

Project Purpose

Develop per statute and administrative rules a regionalized, coordinated and accountable system of care for the injured in Michigan. This includes supporting regional trauma networks, verifying and designating trauma facilities, and collecting trauma data in a state trauma registry. It will also support the efforts of the existing 62 Medical Control Authorities (MCA) to organize into 8 regions to enhance efficiencies, support regionalization, and improve communication and the use of resources.

Implementation Plan available for Review? Yes

Summary of implementation plan

The work plan for 2016 includes verifying and designating approximately 93 acute care facilities; supporting data entry into the state trauma registry; and supporting trauma education for pre-hospital providers, registrars, trauma program managers and others. This project will facilitate the tracking and identification of the injured from the field to definitive care. Supporting injury prevention and interfacing with other partners to advance injury prevention initiatives is also an outcome. The MCA initiative will continue the work begun in 2015 to support the organization of 62 existing MCAs into regional organizations or networks, analysis and assessment of the MCA structure/EMS system, and medical communication and data systems within that structure.

Project Purpose

The state of Michigan is in the process of developing a new accounting system, SIGMA, and the existing system, MAIN, will be phased out. As a result of this new system, the Michigan Department of Health and Human Services' (DHHS) Health Services Programs (previously the Department of Community Health) has several systems that were developed to directly interface with MAIN. Due to the implementation of SIGMA, many of DHHS' systems must be modified in order to interface with SIGMA.

Implementation Plan available for Review? Yes

Summary of implementation plan

Summary of implementation plan: The DHHS is in the process of working with the Department of Technology, Management, and Budget (DTMB), Project SIGMA staff, and vendors to develop the interfaces needed between multiple department systems with the new accounting system, SIGMA. The DHHS systems that are directly impacted by SIGMA include ASAP, Crime Victim Payments, Data Warehouse, Egrams, Family Support System, and the MSA Manual Payment System. Below is the breakdown of funding needed for each one:

	GROSS	FEDERAL	STATE
ASAP	$145,000	$108,750	$36,250
Crime Victim Payments	$150,000	-0-	$150,000

Federal	0300	$18,634,600	$18,634,600

Project Purpose

The purpose of this project is to transform the healthcare system, payment reformation, and population health improvement. Also, to ensure access to high quality care, integrate primary care and behavioral health, coordinate with community resources, and support health information technology and exchange. Some targets are healthier babies, reducing emergency department utilization, and reducing several chronic diseases including diabetes, hypertension, depression, obesity and alcoholism.

Implementation Plan available for Review? Yes

Summary of implementation plan

The work plan is to create systems that coordinate complex care with medical, behavioral and human services, link with community health innovation regions for better performance outcomes, and align and integrate care management between providers and health plans. Move away from fee-for-service over time, reduce costs by removing waste from the health system, provide upfront investments for health information technology, continuous improvement infrastructure, and community health, and assure data transparency to promote good decision-making.

As part of the DHHS spending plan, costs are broken down by fiscal year and by grant category. The department has entered into one contract with MPHI which will also subcontract some of the work identified in work plan, and additional grants will be issued in FY 16. All other contracts/grants will be issued using the state's current procurement guidelines. For initial implementation in FY 15, the department has budgeted around $1 million contractually to MPHI, as a majority of expenditures will occur in FY 16-FY 18. For FY 16, $16.1 million is estimated for MPHI contracts and $4.2 million for state expenses (local funding and state staff) for a total of $20.3 million. In FY 17, $26.8 million is estimated for contracts and state expenses and $22 million in FY 18.

The purpose of the work project is to reimburse eligible school districts for costs incurred by districts that inherited buildings from the dissolved school districts of Buena Vista and Inskster. "Dissolved school district" means a school district that has been declared dissolved under section 12 of the revised school code, 1976 PA 451, MCL 380.12.

Implementation Plan available for Review? Yes

Summary of implementation plan

Districts that have inherited buildings will continue to incur costs until the buildings are either sold or demolished. These costs have continued into FY15, and will continue into FY16, and possibly beyond.

The department developed a reimbursement application process and a reimbursement distribution process. Reimbursable costs include, but are not limited to, the costs of maintenance, utilities, security, or insurance associated with, or the demolition of, buildings transferred from a dissolved school district to the eligible district. The reimbursement made to eligible districts for all of the property transferred from a single dissolved school district shall not exceed the total cumulative sum of $2,500,000 for all of the eligible districts to which property was transferred from that dissolved school district.

The purpose of this project is to implement a kindergarten entry status assessment.

Implementation Plan available for Review? Yes

Summary of implementation plan

The Department has been granted funding under P.A. 29 of 2012, to develop an assessment tool to assist local schools in determining the proficiency of trainers, schools and kindergarten teachers.

Funds shall be used for the following purposes: (1) professional development for trainers, schools and kindergarten teachers (2) purchasing the license for the assessment tool and the online system for entering assessment findings, and other integration costs with the existing P-20 data system (3) outreach and education for parents and families, and (4) project implementation and management.

During the FY15-16, the following implementation activities are expected to be initiated/continued in support of this work project:

(1) Continue support for an Education Research Consultant 14 to provide management in support of implementing an operational Kindergarten Entry Assessment.
(2) Continue to pilot and/or field-test a Kindergarten Entry Assessment solution with Teaching Strategies Gold to train. This contract will continue to remain in a pilot/field-test status due to continued low saturation/ participation by the field during the 2014-15 school year. These field-test opportunities provide rich training to the field as well as allow increased familiarity with the assessment to teachers and students.
(3) Begin the process of evaluating our current contract with Teaching Strategies Gold as well as investigate other possible solutions for this assessment to provide input to a future Request for Proposal (RFP) to continue these efforts for kindergarten entry assessment as well as meeting the requirements of P.A. 29 of 2012.

The purpose of the work project is to provide grants to districts to support professional development for principals and assistant principals in a department-approved training program for implementing educator evaluations as required under section 1249 of the revised school code, MCL 380.1249.

Implementation Plan available for Review? Yes

Summary of implementation plan

Work that will continue to be performed during FY 16 includes:

Offer a grant application window in the Michigan Electronic Grants System Plus (MEGS+) to ISD, LEA, and PSA districts to submit Personnel Identification Codes (PICs) from the Registry of Educational Personnel (REP) for their principals and assistant principals interested in evaluation training programs. Districts must apply for grants by selecting one of the approved educator evaluation training models. Once the application window has closed, verify that submitted PICs are from personnel assigned in the REP as principals and/or assistant principals and approve those that are; deny those that are not coded as principals and/or assistant principals in the REP. Notify district MEGS+ applicants of approval/denial status for submitted PICs in applications.
Expend grant awards for approved submitted PICs in district applications to district. Conduct survey among districts receiving grant funds for purpose of obtaining feedback. Priority is given to districts that have new building administrators who have not previously received training in programs funded under this section.

As of 7/18/15, awards in the amount of $1,152,680 have been distributed. The balance will be awarded to eligible districts that apply for training grants. MDE plans to expend the remaining funds by the end of FY17.

Project Purpose

The purpose of the work project is to provide grants to districts to support professional development for principals and assistant principals in a department-approved training program for implementing educator evaluations as required under section 1249 of the revised school code, MCL 380.1249.

Implementation Plan available for Review? Yes

Summary of implementation plan

Work that will continue to be performed in FY16 includes:

Offer grant application window in the Michigan Electronic Grants System Plus (MEGS+) to ISD, LEA, and PSA districts to submit Personnel Identification Codes (PICs) from the Registry of Educational Personnel (REP) for their principals and assistant principals interested in evaluation training programs. Districts must apply for grants by selecting one of the approved educator evaluation training models. Once the application window has closed, verify that submitted PICs are from personnel assigned in the REP as principals and/or assistant principals and approve those that are; deny those that are not coded as principals and/or assistant principals in the REP. Notify district MEGS+ applicants of approval/denial status for submitted PICs in applications.
Expend grant awards for approved submitted PICs in district applications to district. Conduct survey among districts receiving grant funds, for purpose of obtaining feedback. Priority is given to districts that have new building administrators who have not previously received training in programs funded under this section.

As of 7/18/15, awards in the amount of $1,152,680 have been distributed. The balance will be awarded to eligible districts that apply for training grants. MDE plans to expend the remaining funds by the end of FY16.

Implementation Plan available for Review? Yes

Summary of implementation plan

Michigan's Race to the Top – Early Learning Challenge Grant (RTT-ELC) is comprised of seven projects to be implemented collaboratively by MDE, MDHHS, DTMB (CEPI), MiAEYC, and ECIC. Detailed scope of work documents and budgets have been developed and are continuously updated for each of the projects. Interagency agreements, MOUs, and contract amendments are updated/initiated on an "as needed" basis. A sub-recipient monitoring plan has been drafted and executed with grant partners.

Project activities include:
1. Increased access for children with high needs to high-quality learning programs. MDE plans to work on the development of key indicators for child care licensing and create scholarships to improve access to high quality early learning settings.
2. Increased opportunities for licensed and unlicensed subsidized home care providers to improve the quality of their programs. MDE is working on several marketing and incentive programs to increase participation.
3. Improved family engagement in childhood early learning and development. MDE is bringing on board family engagement consultants to improve family engagement.
4. Expanded efforts to identify and promote children's physical, social and emotional health.
5. Increased professional development opportunities for early learning care providers.
6. Development of an early learning data system to monitor and evaluate quality standards of individual programs.

Project Purpose

The purpose of this project is to implement a tiered quality improvement rating system for early childhood program providers.

Implementation Plan available for Review? Yes

Summary of implementation plan

Great Start to Quality is Michigan's tiered quality rating and improvement system for licensed/registered early learning and development programs and unlicensed, subsidized providers.

Funds shall be used for the following purposes: (1) hiring and training of raters and quality improvement specialists; (2) alignment of state licensing, Michigan early learning standards and the state professional registry; (3) comprehensive assessment of settings across multiple quality indicators, including early childhood educator qualifications, quality improvement planning and support for at least 1/3 of early learning settings; (4) purchase of educational rating tools; (5) creation of a data system tracking the supply of high-quality early learning settings that links high-need children with quality settings; (6) family and parent education; (7) evaluation; and (8) quality improvement funds.

The implementation plan outlines how activities will support the following: (1) Parents will increase their knowledge about why quality matters and will use ratings information to inform their early learning and care choices; (2) Provide quality improvement supports and resources to early learning programs and unlicensed subsidized providers; (3) Incorporation of Michigan's early learning expectations and core competencies into all workforce development opportunities for early learning providers; (4) Evaluation of early learning and development programs quality based on Great Start to Quality standards.

Remaining funds will be used to seek bids and enter into a contract with an outside vendor to complete the evaluation component of the project.

District Emergency Contingency Fund -SAF	2139	$3,822,000	$3,822,000

Project Purpose

The purpose of the project is to extend spending authority to fund grants to distressed districts meeting eligibility requirements described in section 11r of the State School Aid Act, 2014 PA 196, MCL 388.1611r.

Implementation Plan available for Review? Yes

Summary of implementation plan

Grant amounts are determined by the State Treasurer after consultation with the Superintendent of Public Instruction. Districts eligible for a grant must meet either of the following requirements:

1.) The district has adopted a resolution authorizing the voluntary dissolution of the district approved by the State Treasurer, but the dissolution has not yet taken effect; or

2.) The district is a receiving district under section 12 of the revised school code, MCL 380.12, and the district enrolls pupils who were previously enrolled in a dissolved district in the immediately preceding school year.

Before disbursing funds, the state treasurer must notify the House and Senate Appropriations Subcommittees on School Aid and the House and Senate Fiscal Agencies. The notification must include, at a minimum, the district receiving funds, the amount of the funds awarded, an explanation of the district conditions leading to the need for the fund, and the intended use of funds.

Money in the distressed districts emergency grant fund at the close of a fiscal year remains in the fund and does not lapse to the state school aid fund or to the general fund.

$178,000 has been spent in FY15, based on supplemental language allowing for the payment to Lighthouse Academy for the loss in federal Title I funds pursuant to PA 85 of 2015.

Project Purpose

The purpose of the work project is to develop or select an online reporting tool to provide student-level assessment data in a secure environment to educators, parents, and pupils immediately after assessments are scored.

Implementation Plan available for Review? Yes

Summary of implementation plan

The Division of Accountability Services within the Department of Education is investigating ways to use a phased-in approach to divide the project into smaller segments. They intend to have the first stage ready in early October. A proof-of-concept pilot is scheduled to be prepared by spring 2016, with statewide implementation expected the following year.

The primary goal of the project is to build or utilize an existing online tool to provide immediate access to all statewide assessments that have been administered to one or more students during a one-year period. A second goal is to provide easy expandability of the reporting tool to assist schools and districts with gathering additional data sources, such as collection of information for the Early Literacy Initiative. The tool will utilize a pre-authenticated security approach to restrict the amount and type of information available to each user.

In FY16, MDE plans to expend $3.2 million of funding for the initial statewide implementation of the primary goal, which will include software development/adaptation and hosting for the pilot and initial rollout.

Summary of implementation plan

The dollars requested for carryover for this project will be utilized to fund infrastructure, software implementation, training, staffing and related costs.

Specific activities include the following:
1. Analysis and reporting needs assessment
2. Infrastructure planning
3. Hardware and software acquisition, testing and development within the state's technical environment
4. Internal training on the use of the system's analytical and reporting tools
5. Development and deployment of reports and analytical tools

Implementation Plan available for Review? Yes

Summary of implementation plan

MDE is continuing to expand its current assessment system in order to meet education reform legislation passed in July of 2011, which is also expected to become a key component of a reauthorized Elementary and Secondary Education (ESEA) Act. In support of providing measures that will give local districts options to include student achievement data in their teacher and principal evaluations (as locally bargained) the department will continue to expand its development, including pilot/field-testing, of Interim Assessments (IA's) in English language arts (ELA), mathematics, science, and social studies. The focus for this upcoming year will be on expanding our assessments through IA's for grades K-3 in support of the Governor's Early Literacy Initiative as well as high school for math and ELA. Finally development of model assessments for non-core classes (ie: art, physical education, computers, etc.) will be addressed. The interim assessments will be administered through an online assessment application. This was competitively bid in the fall of 2014 for the 2015-16 school year and beyond. The online administration as well as the item development for the interim assessments will be part of two contracts with Data Recognition Corporation (DRC) for the 2015-16 school year.

Summary of implementation plan

The Office of Professional Preparation is working with their current licensure examination and item development contractor, NCS Pearson, Evaluation Systems (ES), to proceed with updates to standards. In addition, OPPS is focusing on crucial content areas that see a large proportion of teacher candidate enrollment. These areas align with the Governor's 3rd Grade Reading Initiative, legislative mandates on improving K-3 literacy, the Revised School Code, and other State Board of Education policies. This planning, which began in the 2014-2015 school year, allows for maximum involvement of expert stakeholders, such as Michigan K-12 teachers and representatives from teacher education programs. The development of the standards will also involve key MDE personnel who will jointly participate in ES-facilitated committee meetings with the shared purpose of writing teacher preparation standards that reflect Michigan's best thinking in these critical areas. Funds will start to be expended in the fall of 2015.

Project Purpose

Continued modernization of statewide student assessment processes and systems so it has the capabilities needed to comply with the state education reform legislation, as Michigan continues the transition to online assessment as required under Section 104 of the state school aid act, MCL 388.1704.

Implementation Plan available for Review? Yes

Summary of implementation plan

During the 2015-16 school year, MDE will continue to transition to online assessment tools that meet the requirements of state and federal law and will continue to provide accurate results in a more timely manner. The M-STEP English Language Arts and mathematics summative assessments initiated many of these changes in spring 2015. To continue this transition successfully with science and social studies assessments, the department is enhancing the MDE item banking and secure site systems to handle additional technology-enhanced items and adaptive testing. State statute also requires administration of assessments in 9th and 10th grade in spring 2016, which adds effort and funding needs to the assessment program. When completed, these assessment tools will be more in line with the educational experiences of today's students. The continuation of this transition during the 2015-16 summative assessment cycle will allow for expedited administration, scoring and reporting and will enable the department to meet new requirements for educator evaluation and student growth measures.

Implementation Plan available for Review? Yes

Summary of implementation plan

As of the middle of July 2015 the Underground Storage Tank Authority members have been appointed by the governor. The first meeting of the authority was on July 7, 2015.

One of the first tasks of the authority will be to hire the administrator; that process is currently underway. Once the administrator is hired, procedures will be written in order to pay claims to companies who have had a release of a petroleum product into the environment after the effective date of 12/29/2014 per P.A. 416 of 2014. We expect to the authority to start making claim payments in FY16.

Project Purpose

The owner of a small-quantity well may submit a complaint alleging a potential groundwater dispute if the small-quantity well has failed to furnish the well's normal supply of water or the well has failed to furnish potable water and the owner has credible reason to believe that the well's problems have been caused by a high-capacity well.

Implementation Plan available for Review? Yes

Summary of implementation plan

Legislative amendments to the Natural Resources and Environmental Protection Act added regulations to allow Aquifer Protection and Dispute Resolutions. These amendments allow an owner of a small-quantity well to file a complaint with the Department of Environmental Quality (DEQ) or the Department of Agriculture and Rural Development (DARD) if the well fails to furnish its normal water supply or fails to furnish potable water and the owner believes that the failure was caused by a high-capacity well. If an investigation concludes that the groundwater was lowered resulting in an impairment of continued use of the area's groundwater resources caused by the high-capacity well, the MDEQ Director can declare a dispute and order immediate provision of potable water and order the high-capacity well owner to restrict the water usage. The MDEQ and MDARD have signed agreements in place and have developed processes for customers to file such complaints. The appropriated funding for the Aquifer Protection and Dispute Resolution is projected to last for at least five years, currently in year 3.

Project Purpose

The DEQ is implementing a department-wide solution for Electronic Document Management (EDM). The EDM solution will support management of all documents and all correspondence received by and within the department in accordance with record retention schedules. Additional benefits include providing public-facing frequently requested information, reducing the number for FOIAs received, reducing building space used for paper file storage, creating efficiencies in accessing/maintaining information, and ensuring continued compliance with document integrity.

Implementation Plan available for Review? Yes

Summary of implementation plan

The DEQ will be phasing in EDM over the next few years with each of the divisions and district offices. The detailed implementation plan includes 1) evaluating and establishing a common set of indexes for all divisions/offices to use, 2) the purchase of necessary equipment such as high volume scanners, 3) staff training, 4) contracted services and limited term positions for document preparation as well as the actual scanning, and 5) scanning historical and current documents.

To conduct a remedial investigation/feasibility study, remedial design, and implementation of the selected remedial option for the remediation of polychlorinated biphenyl (PCB)-laden sediments within the Manistique River Area of Concern (AOC).

Implementation Plan available for Review? Yes

Summary of implementation plan

The Manistique River, 1.7 miles from the dam in Manistique to the harbor, is designated as a Great Lakes Area of Concern (AOC). To successfully carry out this project the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality (MDEQ) developed a remedial investigation/feasibility study during January and February of 2015 with the goal of Remedial Action (RA) taking place in early fall of 2015. A design contractor was secured in spring of 2014 and they have completed a data gap analysis. Based on review of available data, the contractor has recommended additional sampling needs, which will push the implementation of the remediation to FY 2016. We will work with the design contractor to get a level of effort in place to carry out the remediation in 2016.

Project Purpose

Implementation Plan available for Review? Yes

This project will establish a Child Support Swift and Sure Sanctions Pilot Program to address the hurdles parents are facing which prevent them from being in their children's lives and contribute to them not meeting their monthly child support obligation. The goal is to empower the parent to be able to address these issues and, in turn, provide them with the means to comply with their court ordered obligations now and until their child is considered to be an adult.

Summary of implementation plan

The target population is those payers who want to pay but currently do not have the ability to pay their child support obligations due to obstacles such as chronic unemployment, lack of education, lack of skills, substance abuse, criminal records, and mental health issues. This will include payers at the establishment phase of their child support obligation, ideally preventing the accumulation of arrearages, and those families having contact with the court system in other aspects, such as existing neglect and abuse or juvenile delinquency cases.

Once admitted to the program, participants must willingly participate and follow all program guidelines. For example, for participants who need employment assistance, substance abuse treatment, parenting classes, or require other services, as necessary, the court may arrange for the participant to obtain such services and monitor clients' active participation. Each particular service shall become part of the participant's individualized case service plan, and the participant must remain in compliance with that plan in order to successfully complete the program. Failure to comply with or successfully complete the individualized service plan may result in sanctions such as more frequent court appearances, more restrictive treatment options, tether restrictions, or incarceration.

The first quarter of this project was used to finalize project details in preparation for full implementation. Contracts with service providers were put in place, staff hired, case process flows developed etc. Then a small test pilot group of six (6) participants were admitted into the program to assist the county in evaluating the current intake process and correct any complications in the operational details and process flows. Full implementation has now taken place and new referrals into the project are being made on a regular weekly basis.

The quarterly report from February to April of 2015 shows 42 active participants, with a goal of 100 participants. Of the 42 participants, 37 (88%) have had increased parenting time since entering the program. Twenty eight (67%) of the participants have either obtained employment or enrolled in school since entering the program. The remaining participants are completing resumes, putting in job applications, and going to interviews. The pilot will continue to work toward developing a model that can be replicated in other courts, similar to the drug court models.

Project Purpose

The purpose of this work project is to allow the Michigan Indigent Defense Commission to develop proposed minimum standards for the local delivery of indigent criminal defense services that meet constitutional requirements for effective assistance of counsel.

Implementation Plan available for Review? Yes

Summary of implementation plan

The Michigan Indigent Defense Commission (MIDC)is formed in accordance with MCL 780.987. The commission shall develop and submit the proposed minimum standards to the Supreme Court. Opposition to the proposed minimum standards may be submitted to the Supreme Court in a manner defined by the Supreme Court. Once the minimum standards are approved by the Supreme Court, they are not subject to challenge.

The MIDC is charged with the development, implementation, enforcement and modification of minimum standards, rules, and procedures to ensure that indigent criminal defense services provide effective assistance of counsel and are consistently delivered to all indigent adults in this State. This includes investigating, auditing and reviewing the operation of indigent criminal defense services to assure compliance with the commissions minimum standards. The commission is also charged with hiring an executive director and determining the appropriate number of staff needed to accomplish the purpose of the MIDC consistent with annual appropriations. This work project will provide start-up costs related to renting and furnishing office space, purchase of office equipment and supplies, the initial hiring of necessary staff and contractual services if needed.

An executive director, Jonathan Sacks, was hired in February 2015. MIDC has also hired an office administrator/legislative director, a director of training, outreach, and support and a research director. MIDC published proposed minimum standards for comment in June 2015 and started its statutorily-mandated data collection efforts with the distribution of the first-ever comprehensive survey to measure the delivery of criminal justice for poor people in Michigan in July 2015.
Additional staff will be hired in late FY 2015 and FY 2016 to continue data collection, compliance modeling, and facilitation between counties, courts, and the MIDC.

Project Purpose

Implementation Plan available for Review? Yes

The purpose of this work project is to allow the Michigan Indigent Defense Commission to continue developing proposed minimum standards for the local delivery of indigent criminal defense services that meet constitutional requirements for effective assistance of counsel and to begin its statutorily mandated data collection efforts to measure the delivery of criminal justice for indigent defendants in Michigan.

Summary of implementation plan

The Michigan Indigent Defense Commission (MIDC) was created by PA 93 of 2013.

The Commission is an independent agency, housed within the judicial branch of state government and comprised of 15 members representing interests from the criminal justice system, appointed by the Governor, with recommendations of the legislature, Supreme Court, and State Bar.

The MIDC has a mandate to:
• Collect and compile data for the review of indigent defense services in Michigan
• Create minimum standards, submitted to the Michigan Supreme Court, to ensure all systems providing indigent defense meet constitutional obligations for effective assistance of counsel
• Work with local communities to implement plans to meet the standards and measure the performance of counties in providing public defense services
• Award grants to bring local systems in compliance with the new standards.

The MIDC has now started the process of developing minimum standards, distributing a survey to gather data, and reaching out to the local indigent defense delivery services. Under the current MIDC timetable, a first set of minimum standards could be promulgated by the Michigan Supreme Court as early as February 2016.

Once these standards are in place, the MIDC Act sets out a 180-day time limit for local courts or counties to submit compliance plans and cost analyses and 60 days for the MIDC to accept or reject the compliance plan. Implementation of these minimum standards will provide an extensive and complex task for the MIDC. To properly work with over 150 District and Circuit Courts to design compliance plans, the MIDC will need five regional administrators starting January 1, 2016, one to roughly parallel each of the State Court Administrative Office's regions. To support research, outreach, compliance and basic office functions, the MIDC will need to hire three administrative staffers and an information technology manager.

Summary of implementation plan

The State Court Administrative Office has identified Community Dispute Resolution Program (CDRP) centers that would serve as pilot sites. The centers will each be responsible for recruiting additional schools in which Restorative Practice services will be implemented. Simultaneously, the SCAO will select a project evaluator, and with CDRP center, school, and court involvement, identify the evaluation components.

In truancy cases, process participants collectively develop plans that the parents, students, teachers, and prosecutors all adopt, and which may involve the inclusion of additional community services to support the students in school.

Project Purpose

Implementation Plan available for Review? Yes

This project will allow the State Court Administrative Office to provide funding to the Michigan Legal Help (MLH) Program to sustain and expand assistance for self-represented persons in Michigan. MLH includes a statewide interactive website at www.MichiganLegalHelp.org and a number of affiliated local self-help centers.

Summary of implementation plan

With this funding the MLH will update and refine current content, develop new content and forms for the website, launch additional self-help centers, and continue to conduct outreach and education to the website and the self-help centers. Funding will support the following projects:

- Maintaining and expanding relevant, accurate, and up-to-date content, tools and media.
- Completing new toolkits, articles, automated interviews, and interactive forms.
- Opening at least 8 additional local self-help centers.
- Continuing to implement the Spanish language content development plan.
- Continuing to support LiveHelp assistance for the website.
- Undertaking a three year evaluation of the website and the self-help centers.

In January 2014, weekly visit rates were at 9,000 per week; in June 2015, visit rates averaged over 17,700 per week. Ayuda Legal de Michigan, a Spanish language version of Michigan Legal help was launched in September 2014 and now includes 5 videos, 32 toolkits, and 3 interviews in Spanish. More than 4,800 people have been helped through the Live Help chat feature on Michigan Legal Help. Also, 128 articles about many different legal topics have been published. These articles appear in 53 different toolkits in the areas of Family Law, Consumer Law, Protection from Abuse, Housing Law, Expungement, Public Benefits, Individual Rights, and Income Tax.

Allegan, Berrien, Calhoun, Kent, Marquette, Monroe, Muskegon, Oakland, Oscoda, Ottawa, Washtenaw, and Wayne, counties have legal self-help centers.

Automated online interviews are created by MLH and hosted on LawHelp interactive, which provides this service for free to many legal self-help websites across the country. In the first quarter of 2015, users started 28,167 Michigan interviews, and from these interviews, 15,002 sets of forms were completed - an average of 166 sets of forms created per day. Michigan is in the top three states for the number of documents assembled on LawHelp interactive, following behind New York and California and ahead of Texas and Illinois.

Implementation Plan available for Review? Yes

Using current technologies, the Liquor Control License Application Management System will be updated and redesigned to significantly improve business processes, functionality and usability, which will be passed on to the citizens of the State of Michigan by providing quicker turnaround of license processing. In addition, the proposed solution will expand self-service capabilities and will be hosted in a cloud-based environment.

Summary of implementation plan

Licensing and Enforcement Divisions will be upgrading:

1. Process Engine – Enhances productivity and efficiency in complaint resolution by increasing mobile enforcement capabilities; strengthens internal controls and verification to facilitate appropriate recommendations.

2. Business Analytics — Improves identification of business issues, trends, and opportunities via new reporting and dashboard tools to enhance follow-up to the Commission.

3. Content Management — Enables every MLCC employee to view their caseload documents immediately; improves response time and expedites processing of licenses and permits.

4. Collaboration Tools — Facilitates remote collaboration; enhances long-distance departmental communication, collaboration and trouble-shooting processes.

5. Online Customer Processes – Improves online functionality; gives MLCC customers online access to renewal, initial application submission, and special license requests.

The implementer will work closely with the vendor and SME's (subject matter experts) from DTMB and MLCC together to design a system in the vendor's cloud-based environment.

The total project budget of $4.5 million will be spent buying the licenses, planning, design, development, configuration and testing the MLCC applications for each division with a target end date of Sept 30, 2016. This work project is part of a larger modernization initiative within MLCC that will deliver improved customer experience and streamlined processes for enhanced organizational efficiency.

Licenses have been purchased for 175 staff. Remaining processes begin in August 2015.

In addition, the proposed solution will expand self-service capabilities and be hosted in a cloud-based environment.

Summary of implementation plan

Licensing and Enforcement Divisions will be upgrading:

1.Process Engine – a dynamic platform for modeling and executing process-based applications for new licenses, permits, special licenses, transfers of ownership, escrows and license renewal; including business rules such as quotas and local governmental unit requirements. Enforcement will have enhanced investigation and violation reporting platforms that tie directly into the database. Using mobile technology for increased flexibility in the field will produce a better reporting system and client interaction. The ability to be more productive with complaints leading to better control and validity to make appropriate recommendations.

2.Business Analytics — enable managers to identify business issues, trends, and opportunities with reports and dashboards to allow the proper follow-up and reporting to the Commission.

3.Content Management — provides a system for storing and securing electronic documents, images, and other licensing files with data recovery backup capability as well as redaction tools for FOIA requests. With this function, every employee can view documents pertaining to their case load immediately to make decisions; this will allow quicker processing time to issue licenses and permits.

4.Collaboration Tools — remove intra- and interdepartmental communication barriers through discussion forums, and message boards. Allows for open communication of questions or issues to be resolved quickly between all parties. This software helps facilitate teams working together over geographic distances by providing tools that aid communication, collaboration and the process of problem solving.

5.Online Customer Processes – Web applications designed to increase the interaction between customers and their application information and status. Redesign the MLCC webpage to be a more efficient, user-friendly application with enhanced online features. Create more online functionality to give access to customers wanting to conduct business with MLCC with regard to renewal, initial application submission, and special license requests.

The implementer will work closely with the vendor and SME's (subject matter experts) from DTMB and MLCC together to design a system in the vendor's cloud-based environment.

To develop an electronic plan review and permitting system in the Bureau of Fire Services that will significantly improve business processes, functionality, and usability.

Implementation Plan available for Review? Yes

Summary of implementation plan

The agency intends to complete three tasks by working with DTMB and contracting for IT services through Bureau of Fire Services.

The first task creates a plan review and permitting system for electronic submissions and digital archiving of plan review materials, and cross functionality of plan reviews and permits, which also involves an electronic system that receives applications for storage tanks (expected completion date November 30, 2015).

The second task creates an electronic system for electronic submissions and digital archiving of Field Service reports and plans (expected completion date March 30, 2016).

The third task creates an electronic system for electronic submissions and digital archiving of Firework applications and plans (expected completion date June 30, 2016).

This is a project that will replace the L2K (License 2000) electronic licensing system, which is currently being used by the Michigan Medical Marihuana Program. This new system will increase efficiencies related to the processing of the various types of applications issued by the agency, in addition to handling future registration needs.

Summary of implementation plan

Phase I - Project Planning - The deliverables for this phase are as follows:
1. Project Charter / Project plans / schedule
2. Statement of Work – All deliverables in Statement of Work will be monitored and achieved throughout phases.

Phase II - Requirements Verification and Validation - The deliverables for this phase are as follows:
1. Express Systems Engineering Methodology 402 Business Requirements Documents / reporting
2. Update Enterprise Architecture and Technical Requirements Documents
3. Updated Project Plans (Include Department of Technology, Management and Budget 170 Security Assessment)
4. Base Configuration design in development environment.
5. Determine gaps between systems and the new system
6. Determine enhancements (if required)

Phase III – Functional Design of the New System - The deliverables for this phase are as follows:
1. Functional Design document Systems Engineering Methodology 501(Update only State of Michigan environment)
2. Updated project plans / schedule / updated cost Estimate
3. Training plan and training schedule for internal staff.

Phase IV – System Design
1. Design document / Enterprise Architecture assessments
2. Security assessments DIT-170
3. Contractor Base Configuration design in development environment.
4. Contractor to Design enhancements or configurations as identified
5. Updated project plans /schedule

Phase V - Construction of the New System - The deliverables for this phase are as follows:
1. Software Configuration Documentation
2. Test Plan, including test scripts and schedule
3. Contractor to Setup Base Configuration design in development environment.
4. Test / evaluate business process in development environment.
5. Contractor to Code/Configure enhancements if needed
6. Updated Project plans /schedule

Phase VI -Testing of the New System - The deliverables are as follows:
1. Establish an interactive Bug tracking system to follow problems with the new system.
2. Perform and document testing

Phase VII - Placing the New System in Production - The deliverables are as follows:
1. Installation and configuration of the new application to the production environment
2. Provision of all system interfaces/integration required in the production environment
3. Data conversion (mapping) of all necessary data

Currently, PHASES I - V have been completed.

Project Purpose

Administer a survey and remonumentation of the Indiana-Michigan border.

Implementation Plan available for Review? Yes

Summary of implementation plan

A "boundary survey" will need to be completed for 110 miles of line consisting of 125 posts. To determine the location of that line and associated posts, nearly 200 years of land records will need to be researched and all 110 miles will need to be surveyed/mapped to locate any and all evidence of land records, monumentation, ownership, etc. All of this evidence will need to be evaluated to determine the potential post locations. More specifically, contractors will need to search for specific evidence of a post(s) until the post locations are monumented. Then measurements of the monuments along with state plane coordinates will be established. Lastly, documents will be compiled and filed in each state, and with the commission.

Summary of implementation plan

This work project is the result of the Attorney General's National Mortgage Servicer Settlement. It supports foreclosure avoidance and recovery efforts, as well as related legal services and counseling under a plan approved by the Attorney General. Funds are distributed to MSHDA counseling agencies through a Notice of Funds Availability (NOFA). The agency has completed seven funding rounds for this grant money and there were approximately 44 different agencies approved for funding. The agency issued a Notice of Funds Availability (NOFA) for the last round (Attorney General Settlement Counseling) in August and will continue to make payments on that round in FY 2016

Summary of implementation plan

This work project is the result of the Attorney General's National Mortgage Servicer Settlement. These funds will be used by MSHDA to develop and coordinate public and private resources to meet the affordable housing needs of low income, very low income, and extremely low income households. They will also be used to help revitalize downtown areas in Michigan. Although there have been delays with executing grants due to multiple funding sources involved for projects selected through the first Notice of Funding Availability (NOFA), this account reflects expenditure activity consistent with the estimated completion date of the project.

The Michigan Strategic Fund Act (Public Act 270 of 1984) provides for numerous programs aimed at economic diversification and job creation in the state. The direct assistance (incentive) program has 2 parts--one focused on company requests for assistance and the second focused on community revitalization projects. Both of these areas require job creation to be a driving factor within their awards.

Implementation Plan available for Review? Yes

Summary of implementation plan

The Michigan Business Development Program replaces the state's previous MEGA program that was a feature of the Michigan Business Tax that was eliminated under business tax restructuring legislation approved and signed into law by Governor Snyder in May 2011.

The Michigan Community Revitalization Program provides grants, loans, or other economic assistance of up to $10 million to projects that will revitalize regional urban areas, act as a catalyst for additional investment in a community, reuse vacant or historic buildings and promote mixed use and sustainable development.

Signed into law by Governor Rick Snyder in December 2011, the Michigan Business Development Program provides grants, loans and other economic assistance to qualified businesses that make investments or create jobs in Michigan, with preference given to businesses that need additional assistance for deal-closing and for second stage gap financing.

The MSF will consider a number of factors in making these awards, including: out-of-state competition, private investment in the project, business diversification opportunities, near-term job creation, wage and benefit levels of the new jobs, and net-positive return to the state. Business retention and retail projects are not eligible for consideration of these incentives.

Summary of implementation plan

The Michigan Community Revitalization Program provides grants, loans, or other economic assistance that will be used to revitalize regional community areas, act as a catalyst for additional investment in a community, reuse vacant or historic buildings and promote mixed use and sustainable development, in accordance with the law. It is estimated that most of these funds will be used for community revitalization projects since the number of projects in the pipeline has risen dramatically.

Program standards, guidelines, templates, and any other forms are approved by the MSF Board and published on the website. Up to $10 million per project that does not exceed 25% of the project's eligible investment is allowed for eligible projects.

The MSF will consider a number of factors in making these awards, with the final objective being to rejuvenate our communities and create more jobs for a net positive return to the state.

Implementation Plan available for Review? Yes

Summary of implementation plan

The program is broken into two components:

Skilled Trades Training Fund operated through the Michigan Works! Agencies in conjunction with the Talent Investment Agency. Awards are approved to companies needing specific skills for new and incumbent workers.

The second part is the Michigan Advanced Technician Training (MAT2) program that is a collaboration between a business, a local community college, and the MSF. The business identifies a specific need, the curriculum is developed by the business and college and the MSF is involved in identifying potential candidates to be hired by the companies for this training. This is based on a German model of technical education.

Project Purpose

Michigan Veterans Education Initiative and MiVet Accreditation Training will provide access to accredited service counselors at campuses across the State of Michigan. Accredited service counselors provide a level of expertise and experience of working with veterans that will increase the success rate of student veterans in the State of Michigan.

Implementation Plan available for Review? Yes

Summary of implementation plan

This project is a multiple stage project with $250,000 assigned to train and maintain accreditation for veteran resource counselors with the United States Department of Veterans Affairs. In coordination with the Michigan Association of County Veterans Counselors and the Michigan Veterans Coalition, statewide training will be conducted quarterly for continuing education credits and maintaining professional accreditations.

The second stage of the project will consist of a budget of $1,750,000 to provide for the implementation of veterans counselors on the campuses of 10-15 universities/colleges/ trade schools statewide. Counselors will be recruited and identified by the Michigan Veterans Coalition, as the subject matter experts on benefits counseling to veterans, helping veterans make the transition from military to college life, and fostering an environment more conducive for success.

The Michigan Veterans Affairs Agency will contract through an existing contract with the Michigan Department of Education for the Michigan College Access Network to provide project management and implementation on campuses throughout the State.

As of September 2015, the Michigan Veterans Education Initiative (VEI) is available on fifteen campuses covered by thirteen VEI program counselors. Funds are being utilized for training service officers to assist veterans as they transition to college life.

Project Purpose

The purpose of this project is to implement the Michigan Youth ChalleNge Academy/Job Challenge Program and prepare MYCA graduates to obtain employment in the manufacturing and industrial trades.

Implementation Plan available for Review? Yes

Summary of implementation plan

The Job ChalleNGe program addresses 3 goals: Work readiness, credential attainment, and job placement.
Phase I takes advantage of resources that are proximate to the Battle Creek location of MYCA. Kellogg Community College, its Regional Manufacturing Technology Center, Denso Manufacturing, Duncan Aviation and the Kellogg Company will serve as the settings for refining curriculum, processes, activities and procedures. A priority is to fully develop the residential (Battle Creek model) and the remote Job Challenge program/process, in order to start the first class in January 2016 and develop corporate partner vetting and application process.
Phase I program graduates will be prepared to successfully obtain employment at a viable living wage in a number of occupations, mostly in manufacturing and industrial trades.
Phase II of the program expands services to other disciplines and vocations through partner agencies providing similar programming in other areas of the state. Additionally in Phase II the program will collaborate with Focus: HOPE, a career training agency serving youth in southeast Michigan.

Project Purpose

To conduct a study on the depth of the Grand River from Lake Michigan to the city of Grand Rapids and the cost of dredging that section of the river to a depth sufficient for recreational boat traffic.

Implementation Plan available for Review? Yes

Summary of implementation plan

The DNR is actively searching for a municipality to accept the project and serve as grantee by way of a Waterways grant in aid agreement. If there isn't a municipality that wishes to serve as grantee and take on a Waterways grant agreement by September 30, 2015, the DNR will seek other alternatives to accomplish the study. The DNR will seek bids from interested design consultants via a competitive request for proposal (RFP) process and award a contract by December 31, 2015. Once under contract, the consultant will conduct a study of the Grand River from Lake Michigan to the City of Grand Rapids. This study will include the assessment of depths, general river dynamics, dredging needs, and user information. After the compilation and review of data, preliminary cost estimates for dredging of the Grand River to a depth sufficient for recreational boating traffic will be completed.

Project Purpose

The Help America Vote Act (HAVA) was signed into law by the President of the United States on October 29, 2002. HAVA mandates several changes in the way state and local election officials conduct federal elections. Federal funding will allow Michigan to improve election administration and replace outdated voting equipment. It will also help to improve access for voters with disabilities and those who are living outside the country, including military personnel stationed overseas.

Implementation Plan available for Review? Yes

Summary of implementation plan

HAVA requires a State Plan outlining how Michigan will meet the technology and election administration requirements specified in the legislation; budget and monitor the funds the state is eligible to receive; adopt voting system guidelines consistent with the new federal requirements; educate voters and poll workers; adopt performance measures; and meet other specified requirements and criteria. Michigan's State Plan has been accepted and certified.

Driver Fees	1003	$1,309,500	$1,040,900

Project Purpose

One of the top 10 performance goals for the Michigan Department of State (MDOS) is to reduce wait times in branch offices. Unfortunately, MDOS does not currenly have a good way of measuring branch office wait times. In order to accomplish this, MDOS is seeking a commercial off-the-shelf web-based Customer Flow Management (CFM) system for approximately 50 Branch Offices that will improve customer service, create a better working and waiting environment, reduce real and perceived wait times, and improve workflow. The solution will measure steps in customer flow processes and provide management with the basis for analyzing and further improving them. In addition, the system will include all essential CFM functions such as queuing, prioritizing and segmenting customers, customer and management notifications, customer information, and have a full reporting package. The system should also provide for internet access so that the public can schedule appointments at any of the sites.

Implementation Plan available for Review? Yes

Summary of implementation plan

During FY15, the pilot for the 7 super centers and 3 additional branch offices was accepted and plans were made for the second phase of the project. Phase II includes plans to expand to 8 additional branches. The expansion began with the first branch having kiosks installed in July 2015. In FY16, the MDOS plans to continue with the expansion of the program to the remaining 7 branches.

Project Purpose

The Michigan Department of State (MDOS) currently has seventy-seven (77) unattended self-service terminal (SST) units that accept credit/debit cards as payment acceptance in office locations throughout Michigan. MDOS seeks to purchase ten SST's that offer cash acceptance as a payment option along with the current credit/debit card option.

Implementation Plan available for Review? Yes

Summary of implementation plan

During FY15 MDOS worked with the selected vendor (Kiosk, Inc.) to develop and approve a prototype of the self-service terminal and produce the 20 SSTs. MDOS and DTMB worked with the SST software vendor (Esprida) to upgrade a portion of the SST operational software and in FY16 plans to complete the programming upgrade. In FY16, MDOS plans to implement the 20 new terminals at the selected SOS locations. Additionally, MDOS and DTMB are in the process of upgrading Euro-pay, MasterCard, and Visa (EMV) credit card functionality - hardware and software upgrades - on all SST generations to be in compliance with an EMV-related financial liability shift due by October 1, 2015.

Project Purpose

The purpose of this project is to implement a document imaging solution in Central Operations. The imaging solution will help MDOS move from keeping paper documents in files and microfilm records to electronic records. Paper files and microfilm records are not secure and difficult to securely share with other areas of the department. The existing MDOS microfilming equipment is way past its life expectancy, getting expensive to maintain, and near impossible to find replacement parts like light bulbs.

Implementation Plan available for Review? Yes

Summary of implementation plan

During FY15, the Michigan Department of State worked with the Department of Technology, Management and Budget to resolve contractual concerns with a key vendor and essentially restructure both the solution design as well as overall approach to FileNet implementations for MDOS. The Mainframe Letters to FileNet project is now the foundation for an Enterprise-wide Document Management Solution (EDM) within MDOS. Phase Two of EDM is set to begin in FY16. The Statement of Work for Phase Two of EDM is currently being updated, and will include all of the following business areas; Traffic Safety Division, Business Licensing Division/Regulatory Monitoring Division, Driver Activity, Vehicle Update, IRP, Renewal by Mail, Record Look-up and documents related to Legal Opinion requests.

Project Purpose

Based on the DTMB IT Assessment completed by Gartner, the Qualified Voter File and Branch Revenue systems used by the Michigan Department of State (MDOS) need to be replaced. In addition, MDOS has several other systems that are at end of life including Inventory and the system used by our Driver Assessment and Appeal Division (DAAD). All these systems have current issues and DTMB has indicated the DAAD system is no longer supportable. In order to accomplish changes to the systems, MDOS will incur additional costs for contract staff related to business requirements, project management, and for some projects, hardware and software modifications are included.

Implementation Plan available for Review? Yes

Summary of implementation plan

During FY15, the MDOS worked with the DTMB to identify a case management solution and implementation vendor to replace the Informix System. Also, in order to avoid potential penalties and to comply with statewide Microsoft version upgrade(s) requirements, the scope for the project accelerates the replacement and standardization of non-compliant document management tools used by DAAD. The Informix Replacement project also includes integration of Consolidated Print Center services, streamlining of transcription service provider process, adding online payment options for customers and potentially, migration to the Enterprise Document Management System (FileNet). FY16 will be spent implementing this new system.

Project Purpose

The purpose of this project is to effectively integrate the Revenue Distribution System with the Statewide Integrated Governmental Management Application (SIGMA) to record and distribute over $2 billion from transactions processed in Secretary of State Branch Offices. The integration will also include changes to the International Registration Plan (IRP).

Implementation Plan available for Review? Yes

Summary of implementation plan

Due to the complexity of the system and lack of available Information Technology (IT) resources, 8 additional contractors will be needed to successfully complete this work for a cost of $800K, and an additional $200K for changes to IRP.

In order to meet the SIGMA deadlines for interface system modifications, MDOS is currently working with DTMB IT to finalize the SIGMA requirements. Development work is scheduled to begin in October 2015. The SIGMA programming changes are expected to be completed in FY16.

Summary of implementation plan

The State and Local Implementation Grant Program (SLIGP) project is divided into 2 phases.

1)The SCIP was updated June 2014.
2)Phase I of SLIGP is almost complete, with State Consultation yet to occur (see #4 below) and education and outreach as ongoing.
3)The State's FirstNet consultation readiness packet was sent to FirstNet in March 2015.
4)The date for Michigan FirstNet consultation is set for September 1, 2015.
5)A consultant was selected to assist with Phase II of the SLIGP project and a statewide wide survey for coverage needs is done at this time.
-Providing education and outreach to the public safety community about FirstNet is ongoing.

Phase 2: MSP will work with FirstNet to prepare the "Notice to Governors".

Project Purpose

The purpose of this project is to develop a statewide information exchange system that eliminates redundant entry of warrant information by prosecutors, courts, Law Enforcement Information Network (LEIN) users, Michigan State Police (MSP), and the State Court Administrative Office (SCAO).

Implementation Plan available for Review? Yes

Summary of implementation plan

The E-warrant project will allow for:
• The development of workflow exchanges among criminal justice agencies for all phases of the warrant process: request, authorization, issuance, and execution/cancellation.
• The migration and enhancement of existing exchanges between the records management systems of law enforcement agencies, county prosecutors, the courts, and MSP.
• The development of a web portal that can query the status of warrants.

FY2015
• Convened focus groups of stakeholder agencies.
• Contracted with vendor to develop system architecture.
• Established pilot project in Genesee County to aid in the development of the system's business requirements, identify hardware needs of system users, and ensure system functionality before statewide implementation. Programming for the pilot is expected to be completed by fiscal year end.

FY2016 – FY2019
• System users (criminal justice agencies) will implement necessary program changes to facilitate the exchange of warrant information. Project funds will support these user costs to implement system changes.

Implementation Plan available for Review? Yes

Summary of implementation plan

Together with the FY2016 appropriation, the work project will support the costs of the 20th Motor Carrier Officer Recruit School. The 19-week school is scheduled to begin October 11, 2015 and graduate February 19, 2016.

School-related costs include ongoing costs (payroll, fleet, technology services, etc.) incurred during the school and continuing upon placement in the field. The school also includes one-time costs, including recruiting and selection (events, examinations, etc.), training (instruction, meals, lodging, etc.), and outfitting and equipping (uniforms, weapons, and vehicles) as well as a 17-week Field Training Officer (FTO) program following graduation.

This appropriation ensures funding is available as needed to enable the department to respond to potential and imminent threats to the state's facilities, systems, and property and to provide security forces at non-planned large scale recreational and public events, by supporting the department's costs associated with additional show-of-force, law enforcement, or traffic safety efforts, including costs for overtime, fuel, and equipment.

Implementation Plan available for Review? Yes

Summary of implementation plan

Implementation of activities funded through the Security at Events work project will be undertaken in compliance with the official orders of the department. Security at Events funds are specifically appropriated to support the department's costs for the additional show-of-force, law enforcement, and traffic safety efforts for large unplanned incidents and events, and security activities for potential and imminent threats to the state's facilities, systems, and properties. The department currently has in place a confidential Official Order concerning the mobilization of department personnel for planned and unplanned incidents and events, including emergencies. Implementation Plan available for Review? Yes

Current technology allows us to leverage information sharing to save time, money, and resources. The purpose of this project is to enhance software applications. These enhancements will increase time and reporting efficiencies, allow for integrations between software packages, and provide for data to be shared with other agencies. This project will encompass software and programming changes to various information systems.

Summary of implementation plan

The department is working with the Department of Technology, Management, and Budget (DTMB) to hire vendors where appropriate, and/or identify State of Michigan IT programmers, to address software and programming needs of various systems and databases, including Dashboard, the electronic Automated Incident Capture System (eAICS), Statewide Network of Agency Photos (SNAP), and the Criminal History Records Internet Subscription Service (CHRISS).

Dashboard

- 3 phases developed and in production
- FY15: A specialist was hired to work with existing agencies on content development and on deployment to additional agencies.
- FY16:
  - Add functionality for New Warrant Mapping & Sex Offender Registry data
  - Transition application support from vendor to DTMB.

eAICS

- Phase 1 of this project is in final testing; expect deployment to begin in August 2015.
- Phase 2 -- Beginning October 2015
  - Identify business requirements
  - Hire consultants/programmers for technical design and programming of new functionality to increase operational effectiveness and data quality.
- Phase 3
  - October 2015 - Begin Joint Application Design sessions to focus on the integration of other software in the agency to reduce duplicative typing and increase information sharing.
  - Later in FY16 – move away from other applications as they are absorbed into eAICS.

SNAP

- Phase I – completed in FY15
- Phase II – completion estimated on 9/15/2015.
- Phase III
  - December 2015 -- MSP will draft a Request for Proposal (RFP) for a new maintenance contract for the SNAP system including servers and software (5 year + 2 option years)
  - February 2016 – MSP will submit its portion of the RFP to DTMB
  - FY17 – new maintenance contract in place

CHRISS

- Twelve segments or sprints have been completed.
- Servers have been deployed and tested.
- A new software for the department has been purchased, deployed, and is being customized to track business requirements and bugs for this project.
- It is anticipated that a full demonstration will be ready for evaluation in October 2015.
- Integration between this application and other existing applications is in process with completion expected in October 2015.

The purpose of this project is to purchase Venture Michigan tax vouchers as described in P.A. 86 of 2015.

Implementation Plan available for Review? Yes

Summary of implementation plan

The state budget director may purchase tax vouchers if the tax vouchers meet all of the following:

(a) The tax voucher was issued under section 23 of the Michigan early stage venture investment act of 2003, 2003 PA 296, MCL 125.2253, by the venture Michigan fund, a Michigan early stage venture investment corporation created under that act.

(b) The tax vouchers are held for the benefit of DBAH Capital, LLC and Merchant Holding, Inc., or their successors.

(c) The tax vouchers that have a face value of $100,000,000.00 are due to be tendered on or before September 30, 2016.

(2) From the funds appropriated in part 1, the state budget director may expend up to $50,000,000.00 to purchase the tax vouchers that are tendered during the fiscal year ending September 30, 2015. From the funds appropriated in part 1, the state budget director may expend up to $50,000,000.00 to purchase the tax vouchers that are tendered during the fiscal year ending September 30, 2016.

Flint Catholic Charities plans to renovate and restore the building in the City of Flint where its Center for Hope program is housed.

Implementation Plan available for Review? Yes

Summary of implementation plan

Restoration and renovations on the 67,000+ square foot Center for Hope facility in Flint will include: brick masonry/concrete repairs, roof replacement, mechanical, electrical/wiring updates, elevator equipment and installation, thermal and moisture protection, door and window replacement, interior finishes, and updates to exterior walkways. Work on this project will not begin until the conclusion of a fund raising campaign by Flint Catholic Charities in early FY 2016. $500,000 in state funding support was appropriated in the FY 2015 budget; $250,000 in DHS and DTMB. Work projects are being requested in both departments.

Project Purpose

The purpose of this work project is to design a process and identify a tool to administer surveys to customers of DTMB. DTMB is looking for a strategic agency approach to surveying customers on a wide variety of issues, which accommodates questions of frequency, coordination, and usability of survey information. Work project funds will be spent on project management expenses and the procurement of a tool.

Implementation Plan available for Review? Yes

Summary of implementation plan

The implementation plan continues as projected. At the bottom of the plan, FY16 work is identified that will complete the work project. During FY14, activities addressed survey design, survey response analysis processes, reporting and trending, and the identification of a robust survey tool.

DTMB's latest timeline for this project is as follows:
•November 2014 - Created an RFP.
•April 2015 - Worked with vendor to survey all DTMB Customers.
•June 2015 - Created a baseline for all DTMB services and compared results to industry best practices.
•September 2015 - Develop customer partnerships, review customer service baseline.
•November 2015 - Develop action plans with each department to improve customer service scores.
•April 2016 - Send out survey again, compare results and assess action plan success.

Summary of implementation plan

The State Budget Office is the central state agency responsible for the state's budget and financial management. The agency provides leadership across state government in change management and value for money efforts. The implementation of a new enterprise resource planning system affords tremendous opportunity to implement best practices to further inform budgeting and financial management. This work project will support activities by state employees and contract to capitalize on leadership development and best practices in these areas that support efficient and effective practices in budget and financial management.

The state central accounting system (MAIN) was implemented almost eighteen years ago. The Department of Technology, Management and Budget has started planning for a project to replace MAIN. The goal for this project is to procure and implement a new accounting system that provides state of the art technology, reduces maintenance costs, standardizes and streamlines processes and data, and enhances transparency.

Implementation Plan available for Review? Yes

Summary of implementation plan

The State Budget Office intends to implement this work project in two primary ways:

1. The SIGMA central project team will be supplemented by State Budget Office staff as subject matter experts through Phases 1 and 2 and beyond their respective go-live dates. To maintain adequate staffing for day-to-day operations, State Budget Office resources assigned to the central project team or spending significant amounts of time as subject matter experts, will be backfilled on a limited-term basis.

2. The State Budget Office will also be involved in extensive SIGMA readiness and implementation activities, including design development, testing, and integration of interfaces with other systems and data conversion and validation efforts, which will be fulfilled either with additional State Budget Office staff or contractual support through full and post integration of the ERP.

Summary of implementation plan

The MAIN replacement project (SIGMA)is a multi-year, cross-agency effort that includes procurement, configuration, customization, testing, and implementation of a new central accounting system. It will also include development and testing of needed interfaces to other state systems and reengineering of business processes.

The project consists of two phases. Phase 1 (Budget Development) is scheduled to go-live in December 2015. Phase 2 (Core Financials) is expected to go live in October 2017, with post-implementation support extending through September 30, 2018.

This funding will support efforts to provide effective project governance and subject matter expertise to the project team; and to prepare for the transition from the existing system to the new one.

Project Purpose

This work project will provide readiness support for the State Budget Office for planning, implementation and transition to SIGMA, the new enterprise resource planning (ERP) that will integrate major State of Michigan budget, financial, and accounting systems.

Implementation Plan available for Review? Yes

Summary of implementation plan

The State Budget Office intends to implement this work project in two primary ways:

1. The SIGMA central project team will be supplemented by State Budget Office staff as subject matter experts through Phases 1 and 2 and beyond their respective go-live dates. To maintain adequate staffing for day-to-day operations, State Budget Office resources assigned to the central project team or spending significant amounts of time as subject matter experts, will be backfilled on a limited-term basis.

2. The State Budget Office will also be involved in extensive SIGMA readiness and implementation activities, including design development, testing, and integration of interfaces with other systems and data conversion and validation efforts, which will be fulfilled either with additional State Budget Office staff or contractual support through full and post integration of the ERP.

The purpose of the project is to provide rail infrastructure improvements in accordance with the provisions of the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act of 2009, Public Law 111-5, the Federal Railroad Administration, and the Federal Transit Administration.

Implementation Plan available for Review? Yes

Summary of implementation plan

PROJECT SELECTION: The project was selected by the Federal Railroad Administration (FRA). The federal discretionary grant was awarded from re-distributed American Recovery and Reinvestment Act (ARRA) funds.

PROJECT IMPLEMENTATION: The $26.7 million ARRA funds will be used for the rehabilitation of the 135 mile Kalamazoo to Dearborn track segment in order to preserve freight rail service and support passenger train speeds of up to 110 mph along the entire corridor. Specifically, these funds will be used to replace deteriorated ties, realign ties, remove crossings, upgrade signals and rehabilitate other track infrastructure elements.

PROJECT OVERSIGHT: MDOT will be responsible for the oversight of the projects.

Summary of implementation plan

MDOT has more than thirty integration points tied to its internal systems within the scope of the SIGMA (MAIN replacement) project. Data migration and conversion related to these systems must be completed in 2016 per the SIGMA project plan. MDOT will leverage shared services, systems and databases where possible to support common business functions, thereby saving maintenance and future modernization costs through its integration into the enterprisewide SIGMA project. The work will be performed by DTMB and contract staff.

Under the State Essential Services Assessment Act, PA 87 of 2014 and PA 92 of 2014, and the Alternative State Essential Services Assessment Act, PA 93 of 2014, the Department of Treasury is mandated to collect and administer both assessments. The purpose of this project is to utilize these funds to implement and comply with these new programs as outlined below.

1. Website development
2. Policy and procedures development
3. Program design
4. Inform local governments and businesses of this new requirement
5. Create, distribute and maintain forms and instructions
6. Collect, review, verify, and maintain data
7. Provide associated customer service
8. Audit for compliance
9. Participate in appeals process

In addition to the program responsibilities, there will be a need to build an Information Technology system that will allow for the processing of these returns and payments.

Summary of implementation plan

The Department of Treasury, working in conjunction with the Michigan Department of Education (MDE), will contract for the provision of technical financial assistance to school districts including identification of methods to recover from financial distress.

Specifically, Treasury will implement the following recently enacted legislation: P.A. 109 through 114 of 2015.

Through enforcement of the aforementioned statutes, Treasury and MDE will be equipped with earlier financial information to:
(1) identify potential fiscal stress in school districts, Intermediate School Districts (ISD) and Public School Academies (PSA),
2) require additional financial reporting by certain districts, ISDs and PSAs,
3) revise existing Deficit Elimination Plans requirements,
4) create an Enhanced Deficit Elimination Plan,
5) revise authority provided to MDE and Treasury to withhold state school aid payments,
6) create an additional trigger under which the Treasurer can determine the existence of probable financial stress for a district with a deficit elimination plan, which then triggers the appointment of a financial review team, and
7) create an additional trigger under which the Treasurer can declare a financial emergency and recommend the appointment of an emergency manager.

Project Purpose

The Michigan School Bond Loan Program (SBLP) is responsible for the qualification of approximately $1.5 billion of K-12 public school bonds annually and for the issuance and servicing of loans, which currently total approximately $1.78 billion. Qualifications of these bonds results in a State guarantee of approximately $13.1 billion of school debt.

Amendments to the School Bond Qualification and Loan Act became effective on March 28, 2013. The purpose of this work project is to continue to implement changes in the School Bond Loan program as envisioned in the legislation which will be incorporated into the new IT system.

Implementation Plan available for Review? Yes

Summary of implementation plan

The department will utilize this funding to implement changes in the School Bond Loan program through a new IT system that will include the automation of loan processing and improve loan projection capabilities.

1. Replace current school bond loan servicing system.
2. Improve loan processing with a more stable and customizable system.
3. Develop standard financial reporting format, forms, documents and website.

The purpose of the project is to perform the work required under the Local Financial Stability and Choice Act, to assist local governments in financial stress.

These funds will be used to assist with the costs associated with litigation and emergency manager activities stemming from PA 4 of 2011 and PA 436 of 2012.

Implementation Plan available for Review? Yes

Summary of implementation plan

The department will use this funding to cover costs related to the bankruptcy process, consulting services for local units, emergency manager salaries, and related litigation. The department will pay for private attorney services contracted by the Attorney General to provide legal assistance including consulting, filing fees, FOIA compliance, discovery, and other legal activities.
The on-going financial reviews and the Emergency Manager status in several Public School Districts and numerous cities necessitate that these funds be available into the future.

Project Purpose

The Department will use this funding to integrate all Tax Compliance projects into a single case management and tracking tool. Thereby, expanding the use of the existing ESKORT software system utilized in support of Tax Compliance audit functions.

Implementation Plan available for Review? Yes

Summary of implementation plan

This would replace 2 obsolete database systems, Paradox and Delphi. It would also implement the use of project management tool features within ESKORT. Finally, it would allow the bureau increased efficiencies by having all projects use a single management tool allowing for better reporting, fewer systems to maintain, and consistent process/procedures for the handling of taxpayers. Potential savings include avoidance of the costs associated with supporting, upgrading, testing, and training for two separate systems.

Project Purpose

The purpose of this project is tax fraud prevention and detection utilizing income tax refund analysis services. The project will allow the Department to detect potentially suspicious and misused identities and take appropriate corrective action.

Implementation Plan available for Review? Yes

Summary of implementation plan

This funding will allow the Department to continue efforts in fraud prevention. The project expenditures include fraud prevention services, and may include staffing costs for Department of Technology, Management & Budget, and Treasury. Identity confirmation services will be utilized to prevent the fraudulent filing of Michigan tax returns and refunds. The Department of Treasury will hire an outside consultant to perform data analytics to identify potential areas of fraud and provide guidance to improve current Treasury processes. The Department will continue investigating methods to prevent fraudulent filing for tax refunds during the next few years. These funds will be used to provide information technology services from the Department of Technology, Management and Budget, as well as outside vendors.

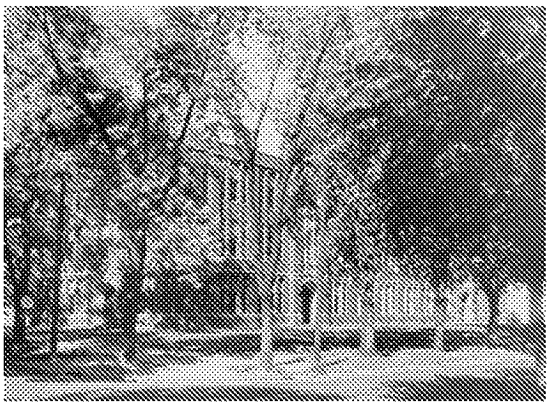
Project Summary

Nearly everyone in the country is aware of the economic turmoil that the recent recession has brought to Flint and Genesee County. What many may not know is that the situation began here long before it impacted the rest of the country. The rates of unemployment and homelessness, or near homelessness, have risen at alarmingly in the last few years. Here in Flint, two of the area's key agencies tasked with serving the needs of this target population–Catholic Charities of Genesee County and Genesee Health System (formerly Genesee County Community Mental Health)–have come together in an unprecedented collaborative effort, to create the Center for Hope, with plans to:

- Deliver a full range of services to meet physical and mental health needs, simply and efficiently
- Improve the delivery of human service needs through seamless agency interaction
- Provide a cost-effective method of delivery
- Capitalize on the strengths and resources of each partner agency
- Provide an opportunity to improve the quality of life for our target population by changing one life, one family at a time



The project involves a planned renovation of the site, centrally located in downtown Flint in the former St. Michael School building, now the Center for Hope, on Fifth Avenue, west of Saginaw Street. The building has already been assessed for future life and the planned renovations, estimated at $9.6 million, will have a lengthy service life. Center for Hope partnering agencies are all currently funded for their individual operational and program costs, and plan to be funded into the foreseeable future.

Significant planning and assessment has already been completed. If funding can be obtained, the Center for Hope is anticipated to be fully operational in 2016.

Every person has value and deserves the opportunity to receive basic needs and essential human services. The interactive coordination between partner agencies will provide a full range of services including meals, food pantry, clothing, personal needs, household needs and furniture, substance use and/or mental health counseling, housing assistance, recreational activities, warming center (during the winter months), along with laundry and shower facilities. Delivery of these services will be coordinated and performed at no cost to the target population, and will be done in a cost effective manner, eliminating duplication of services.

The Center of Hope will offer services to those who qualify solely based on need, without discrimination based on age, gender, religion or ethnicity.

Renovation Funding

The estimated cost for the planned renovation is $9.6 million. Restoration will preserve this landmark, giving it a new role of service in the future of Flint for decades to come.

Homeless Programs Appropriation 32610
Fiscal Year 2015
Work Project Implementation Plan

July 2015

MDHHS with the City of Detroit, will identify one shelter provider to provide diversion to families who call Detroit's Coordinated Assessment Model (CAM) line to prevent shelter entry, resulting in safe and stable housing through direct services and financial assistance. MDHHS with Northwest Michigan Community Action Agency (NMCAA), in a rural service area will lease several housing units under a master lease program to be used as temporary housing in lieu of utilizing motel lodging for families who call their CAM line. If the household does not have a safe housing option for the night, NMCAA will immediately route to one of their leased housing units instead of to a motel. The Homeless Management Information System (HMIS) will be utilized for both Diversion and Master Lease cases.

Finally, in February 2015, HUD issued guidance for the Equal Access Rule that addresses appropriate placement of transgender individuals in single-sex facilities, how best to address privacy and safety concerns, and the barring of separating families or discriminating on the basis of sexual orientation and gender identity. MDHHS will partner with the current Emergency Shelter Program (ESP) contractor, The Salvation Army Eastern Michigan Division, to execute a Request for Proposal process for emergency shelters currently receiving ESP funds that wish to make repairs or improvements to increase their capacity and/or improve service delivery. Proposals must address identify repairs or improvement and how it increases capacity or improves service delivery, the total cost, and the estimated timeline for completion. A 25% match will be required.

Frequently Asked Questions About Lead in Flint Water

MDHHS Michigan Department of Health & Human Services

- Lead is hard to avoid completely. It can be found in old paint, water pipes and brass water faucets, in dirt, at some job sites, and in metal used for some hobbies.
- The amount of lead found in some Flint homes' drinking water could affect kids' health.
  - Even small amounts of lead can harm kids' health because they are little and still growing.
  - Adults are less likely to be harmed by the levels found in the water.
- Filter your drinking water using a NSF-approved filter.
  - Find a NSF-approved filter at http://www.gchd.us/docs/lead_filter_information.pdf.
  - If you use City of Flint water, you can call 211 to find out where you can pick up a free water filter.
- Some filters can remove up to 99% of the lead in water when used properly. To be sure your filter is removing as much lead as it can, carefully follow the instructions that came with it.
  - Change the filter cartridge as often as you should.
  - Run only cold water through the filter.
- Even after changes to the water system, it may take a while before lead levels in your home's water drop. Use the tips below to know when it's best to use filtered water:

Lead in Water

Although your water may be a different color sometimes, it is not caused by lead. It's important to remember:

- You can't see, smell, or taste lead in water.
- Lead won't change the color of your water.
- The only way to know what your home's lead levels are is by having your water tested in a lab.

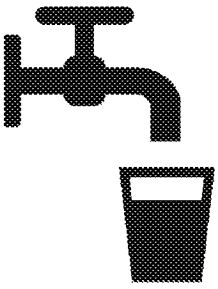
Please call the Flint Water Department at 810-787-6537 to request a free or low-cost water test.

In The Kitchen



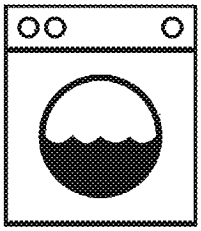
Use filtered tap water for:

- Drinking (including making coffee, drink mixes, juice, baby formula)
- Cooking (even if you boil the water, the lead will stay in the water and food)
- Washing fruits and vegetables

You can use unfiltered tap water for:

- Washing your hands
- Washing dishes
- Wiping down countertops

Cleaning



You can use unfiltered tap water for:

- Mopping floors
- Washing clothes

Your washing machine and dryer won't put lead from the water into the air of your home.

In the Bathroom

Use filtered tap water for:

- Brushing kids' teeth

You can use unfiltered tap water for:

- Showers
- Baths (don't let kids drink the water as they play in the tub)
- Brushing your teeth (if you are an adult)

Lead will not cause rashes or other skin problems. However, if chlorine levels or other cleaners are high in the water, it may cause itchy or dry skin (similar to what can happen when you swim in a pool).

Caring for Pets

Use filtered tap water for:

- Pets' water bowls

You can use unfiltered tap water for:

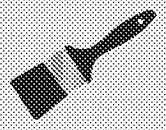
- Baths

If you notice your pet acting differently than normal, please contact your vet.

Other Sources of Lead in Your Home



Lead Paint

- Homes built before 1978 likely have lead paint, both inside and outside.
- Old paint is the most common way that kids are exposed to lead.

Dirt

- If you live in the city, there may be lead in the dirt outside your home.
- Before 1996, gas and the exhaust from cars contained lead. More lead will be found in dirt in busy traffic areas.

Dust

- The dust in your home can contain tiny amounts of both the paint and the dirt that contain lead.

Hobbies & Jobs

- Solder, fishing sinkers, bullets, and stained glass framing materials are some of the items in your home that may contain lead. You could also track home lead dust from your job site.

IS YOUR CHILD SAFE FROM LEAD POISONING?

LEARN HOW TO PROTECT YOUR FAMILY:

CREATE A LEAD SAFE HOME

What causes lead poisoning?

There are many places in a home that can put babies and children in danger of lead poisoning.

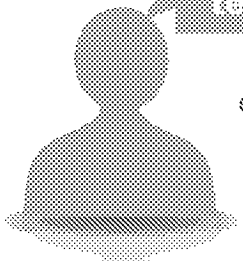
Lead paint is the #1 cause of lead poisoning in Michigan and is often found in homes built before 1978. The older the home, the more likely that painted surfaces like windows, cupboards, doors and porches will contain lead paint.

Lead poisoning occurs most often when children come in contact with lead in the air, in dust particles and in lead paint. Lead can also be found in soil, drinking water if supplied by lead pipes, certain home remedies and is used in some hobbies and occupations.

Exposure to lead particles is a serious health threat. Carefully consider where your child spends time (childcare, relatives, your home) when thinking about lead poisoning hazards.

How can I tell if my child has lead poisoning?

Talk to your doctor about testing your child's blood for lead poisoning.



When should my child be tested for lead poisoning?

Children should be tested at one and two years of age or if you think your child has been exposed to a lead hazard.

To learn more about lead poisoning prevention and blood lead testing, call the Childhood Lead Poisoning Prevention Project:

(517) 335-8885

(888) 322-4453

Take this quiz to see if your child may have lead poisoning:

Symptoms of lead poisoning can be silent—and hard to recognize. Preventing lead poisoning before it happens is the best way to keep your family safe. Take this quiz to see if your child may be at risk.

Does your child currently live in a home built before 1950 or have they lived in a home built before 1950 in the recent past? Do they spend time at or often visit a home built before 1950?

Yes No Don't know

Does your child currently live in a home built before 1978 that was recently remodeled? Have they lived in or often visited a home built before 1978 that was recently remodeled?

Yes No Don't know

Does your child have a brother, sister or playmate with lead poisoning?

Yes No Don't know

Does your child live with an adult whose job or hobby involves lead?

Yes No Don't know

Does you or your child's caregiver use home remedies that may contain lead?

Yes No Don't know

If you answered NO to all of these questions, your child is probably not at risk for lead poisoning.

If you answered YES or DON'T KNOW to any of these questions, talk to your doctor about testing your child for lead poisoning.

MAKE EVERY DAY LEAD SAFE

Safe Cleaning. Use these steps to help keep your home clean and reduce your child's risk of exposure. Use these tips to clean your windows, doors, floors, porches, stairs and child pay areas.

Put on gloves. If you do not have rubber gloves, wash your hands well after cleaning.

Use the right cleaners and disposable supplies. Use soapy cleaners or products made to remove lead dust.

Remove paint chips first. Window areas and porches often have peeling paint and lead dust. Pick up visible chips and dispose of them in a plastic bag.

Always wet-mop floors and window sills. Do not broom lead dust. Dispose of cloths after wiping each area. If using a mop, replace water frequently.

Don't use a vacuum unless it is a HEPA vacuum. It will spread lead dust into the air you breathe. Some health departments have HEPA vacuums available to borrow Rinse after cleaning. Use clean water and a new mop head or fresh paper towels to wipe away suds.

Always empty wash water down a toilet.

Repeat these steps often when dirt and dust appear on floors, porches, window wells, window sills, stairs and children's play areas.

For Homes with Lead Pipes

If you use a water filter, be sure it meets NSF/ANSI 53 standards for lead reduction.

✓Flush your pipes before drinking, and only use cold water for cooking and mixing formula. Flush pipes by running the water for approximately 5 minutes.

✓Test. Consider contacting your local water authority to have your water tested.

Daily Lead Safe Practices

- Wash hands, bottles, pacifiers and toys often
- Always take off shoes before going into the house.
- Watch your child's diet. Foods high in calcium and iron help keep lead from being absorbed by a child's body.
- Avoid using power sanders, open-flame torches, heat guns, dry scrapers and dry sandpaper o painted surfaces.
- Fix peeling or chipping paint.
- Use a certified Repair and Remodeling Professional when making updates to your home
- Practice safe cleaning methods.

Childhood LEAD POISONING prevention program

October 30, 2015

Dear Provider:

As you may be aware from recent news reports, elevated levels of lead have been found in lead pipes within the City of Flint's water system.

To help protect the children of Flint from the current lead in water exposure, the Genesee County Health Department and Michigan Department of Health and Human Services are contacting you to assist you in providing guidance to support your families.

Children can be exposed to lead from drinking water in that runs through lead pipes, old lead paint, soil, pottery, cosmetics and toys and some home remedies. Adult jobs and hobbies, like auto repair, stained glass and jewelry making, and ammunitions handling can also put children at risk if they touch clothing or play in areas where lead is found.

As a primary care provider, you play a critical role in helping to ensure that children and families exposed to lead receive the care and reassurances they need to manage the potential health impacts of lead poisoning.

Identification. Children suffering from lead poisoning often fail to present outward symptoms. However, early clinical symptoms can include anemia, anorexia, abdominal pain and constipation. Lead is a neuro-toxin, and exposure can result in violent and aggressive behaviors, lead to learning disorders, may cause Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder (ADHD) and has been known to reduce IQ by as many as 5-8 points with levels as low as 10 ug/dL. Lead is metabolized through the gastrointestinal system similar to iron and calcium, with uptake rates depending on the size and weight of the child. The blood half-life of lead is short (approximately 1 month) but the bone half-life can extend into decades.

Due to multiple risk factors facing many residents in the City of Flint (including aging housing conditions and water quality), we recommend that all children under age 6 living in the City of Flint or living in homes that use Flint water, attending school or childcare in Flint, or who spend time with a caregiver in the City of Flint, receive a blood lead test. Blood lead testing should be done through a child's primary care doctor to ensure adequate short-term and long-term follow-up. Families should be encouraged to have their children tested immediately either at their doctor's office or the Genesee County Health Department.

Management of Blood Lead Levels. The following guidance is provided for management of childhood blood lead levels:

- BLL < 5 ug/dL
  - A lead level of less than 5 mcg/dL is not typically cause for concern.
  - Provide education and anticipatory guidance to ensure that lead levels do not rise.
  - Consider retesting in 12 months based on risk factors or concerns.

- BLL >5 ug/dL
  - Children with capillary results of 5 ug/dL and higher must have a confirmatory venous blood draw.
  - Families should receive anticipatory guidance, nutrition counseling, instruction on safe cleaning techniques and appropriate follow-up care from their primary care provider.
  - In-home services including case management and environmental investigations are available for all children with lead levels greater than 5 ug/dL. Refer patients to the Genesee County Health Department for this service.
  - Children with confirmed venous testing results greater than 5ug/dL within the past 18 months must be retested based on Medicaid policy and AAP guidelines. (See attached "Provider Quick Reference). If a child has not been retested within these timeframes, retesting is recommended as soon as possible.
- BLL > 44 ug/dL.
  - Children with capillary results of 5 ug/dL and higher must have a confirmatory venous blood draw.
  - Lead levels over 44 ug/dL may require hospitalization. Consult with an expert at the Children's Hospital of Michigan in Detroit for additional guidance.
  - Families should receive anticipatory guidance, nutrition counseling, instruction on safe cleaning techniques and appropriate follow-up care from their primary care provider.
  - In-home services including case management and environmental investigations are available for all children with lead levels greater than 5 ug/dL. Refer patients to the Genesee County Health Department for this service.
  - Children with confirmed venous testing results greater than 5ug/dL within the past 18 months must be retested based on Medicaid policy and AAP guidelines. (See attached "Provider Quick Reference). If a child has not been retested within these timeframes, retesting is recommended as soon as possible.

  Reminder: All children covered by Medicaid must be tested at age 1 and 2.

Follow-up Care. As providers, there are steps you can take to help support your families:

1. Continue to inform and educate families regarding lead risks and preventative steps that they can take to minimize their risks.
2. Encourage your families to use filtered water for drinking, mixing formula and washing dishes. Families can contact 2-1-1 for information on free NSF Certified water filters.
3. Healthy nutrition is critical for lead-exposed children. Make sure your patients are consuming balanced diets high in iron, calcium and Vitamin C. If you have concerns about their nutrition, consider recommending a multivitamin with iron. WIC and SNAP provide assistance to parents and children who need fresh and healthy foods. Contact the Genesee County WIC office at (810) 237-4537 to learn more. In addition, SNAP offers a Double Bucks program that can provide healthy foods for less.
4. Breastfeeding is highly protective and encouraged. However, if the mother's blood lead level rises above 40ug/dL or her level is greater than 20 ug/dL and the baby has a level above 5 ug/dL breastfeeding is not recommended.

5. Because lead is a neuro-toxin, children with lead poisoning need longitudinal follow-up and may require developmental and behavioral health intervention services. Continue monitoring your patients' development at every visit.
6. Consider additional wrap-around and support services that will benefit your patients such as early childhood home visiting programs, early head start and head start. Call 2-1-1 for more information.

Local Resources. Several local resources are available to you and your patients:

- Blood Testing. Patients are encouraged to contact their primary care provider for testing. The Genesee County Health Department also administers lead tests. Patients in need of transportation should contact 2-1-1 for assistance.
- Water Testing. Water testing is free through the City of Flint Water Testing Plant. Patients can call 810-787-6537 to learn more.
- WIC and SNAP provide assistance to parents and children who need fresh and healthy foods. Contact the Genesee County WIC office at (810) 237-4537 to learn more.
- Child Development. If you have concerns about a child's growth, development or learning contact 2-1-1 for a Home Visiting Program in your area.

Foul Water

October 2, 2015

FLINT, MI – So far, the citizens of Flint haven't marched on city hall or the governor's office with pitchforks and blazing torches. But if they did, a lot of people might not blame them.

Flint has plenty of troubles, to be sure; devastating job and population losses, plummeting property values, and a succession of emergency managers over the last four years.

But the latest outrage is all about water.

Discolored city water, bad-smelling water, water with first too much bacteria and then too much disinfectant.

And water which now seems to be causing lead poisoning in some of the city's children. One woman, whose husband works as a policy planner for Flint city government, said her spouse was "in tears as a new father himself when an irate resident came in with her premature, lead-poisoned baby."

Flint's water saga goes back to last year, when Flint officials announced that their cash-strapped city could no longer afford to buy water from Detroit.

They announced they would join a new consortium, the Karegnondi Water Authority, which would supply purified water from Lake Huron. But Karegnondi's operation won't be up and running until sometime next year.

So Flint announced that in the meantime, they would supply residents with treated water pulled out of the Flint River.

But that turned into a disaster from almost day one. From the start, there were consistent reports that the Flint River water was discolored and foul-tasting.

When tests showed that the water was dangerously contaminated with bacteria, including the infamous E Coli, the city pumped chlorine into the water. But that backfired too.

In January, residents were told their water didn't meet federal safety standards, this time because of the chlorine.

While it may have killed the bacteria, it left the water with high levels of trihalomethane (TTHM) which is thought to increase the chances of developing cancer.

Average levels didn't fall to acceptable levels until late this summer – and then Flint had a terrifying new problem: Lead poisoning.

Last week, a new study by physicians at the Hurley Medical Center showed that the tap water in Flint has now resulted in significantly elevated levels in the blood of Flint's children. The scientists said the lead isn't actually in the water, but that the river water itself was more corrosive than the lake water Flint had been buying from Detroit.

A team from Virginia Tech tested samples earlier this month from 300 homes, and found "seriously" high levels of lead. The Hurley Medical Center study found the percentage of kids with seriously elevated lead levels had almost doubled.

That got the politicians' attention, Mayor Dayne Walling advised residents to only use cold water, let it run for five minutes, and buy a filter for lead removal.

He also asked Gov. Rick Snyder to come up with $30 million to fix the system and replace lead pipes.

City officials say about half the customers in Flint may be facing a problem, mainly because the transmission lines connecting them to city water mains are made with lead.

That wasn't good enough for the editorial board of the Flint Journal, the city's newspaper. When the news of lead poisoning surfaced, it ran an editorial saying "It's time to abandon the Flint River," as a drinking water source.

"We call on the governor to make this right for Flint citizens by brokering a return to Detroit water that won't bankrupt the city of Flint," it said, adding: "Flint is in a crisis that was created in no small part by Snyder's hand-picked emergency manager, and it is Snyder's job to fix this mess."

Yet the governor has shown no signs of doing any such thing. Part of the problem may be that in a sense, Flint is "Detroit's Detroit." Flint has many of the same problems as the Motor City – but hasn't captured the national imagination the way Detroit has. Young European artists and intellectuals aren't flocking to the city. Flint doesn't get cover stories in national magazines, or trendy books written about it.

The closest it's come to national notice has been in native son Michael Moore's iconic 1989 movie, Roger and Me.

Pat Clawson, a longtime Flint area resident and former investigative reporter, thinks his city's plight should be a national scandal. "They are poisoning the people with this water –poisoning them, and that's what the doctors call it among themselves," he told me.

He puts the lion's share of the blame on Mayor Walling, who he says "was involved in planning and promoting the switch to Flint River water from the start."

But he thinks there is plenty of blame to go around. "I believe there is criminal culpability on the part of public officials for causing and concealing this crisis."

He urged both the federal and state governments to convene grand juries to investigate. Whether that will happen is anyone's guess. But meanwhile, the agony continues for the 99,000 folks who still live in the once-prosperous city of Flint.

Bungled Politics

November 13, 2015

LANSING — Late in August, one more deal to fix Michigan's crumbling roads fell apart when Gov. Rick Snyder rejected the state house's insistence on slashing $600 million a year from the already strapped general fund budget.

That would be highly irresponsible, he said. Anyone with a spread sheet and a calculator could see that such a cut would devastate human services spending, including Medicaid.

Higher education funding would also be bound to take a huge hit, further threatening Michigan's competitiveness.

So, the governor, a man who has always said he is in favor of "relentless positive action" to make Michigan competitive, said no.

But then he reversed himself, and said yes.

Suddenly, Snyder was not only willing to sign off on cutting the general fund by $600 million a year – he was willing to sign an agreement that seemed even worse than the ones he'd rejected.

The package of bills the legislature narrowly passed Nov. 3 indeed recklessly slashes the general fund – without specifying where the huge cuts are supposed to come from.

They hike car registration fees by an average of 20 percent.

But that's not the worst news: Incredibly, they fail for years to raise any meaningful money to fix Michigan's roads!

No serious money to fix the crumbling streets and bridges will begin to trickle in for three years. The bills won't generate anything like the $1.2 billion a year promised until at least 2021.

By that time, however, that will be far too little, far too late. A spokesman for MDOT, the Michigan Department of Transportation, showed me a comprehensive independent analysis done last year indicating the true cost of bringing the state's roads and bridges back to an acceptable standard had risen to nearly $2.2 billion a year.

That is certain to be much higher by 2021.

Those who really understand the road package passed by the legislature have been close to unanimous in denouncing it.

Nolan Finley, the Detroit News editorial page editor, is normally a stout defender of the governor, and sometimes of his fellow Republicans in the legislature.

Not this time. "They played this as poorly as possible," he wrote in a column. "Motorists will be paying the high taxes well before they see potholes disappearing. It's bad enough lawmakers got the policy wrong on this road deal. But they bungled the politics, too," he said.

The reason why the legislators structured the bill this way is simple, if contemptible, and directly related to Michigan's government-destroying lifetime term limits.

By the time the really hard decisions have to be made, nearly all the lawmakers making them will be gone from the legislature, banned for life from returning, under Michigan's draconian term limits.

They won't have to deal with the consequences of their actions. Instead, many of them will undoubtedly have gone to work as lobbyists for special interest groups in the state capitol.

Snyder will also be gone from office. Asked why he changed his mind and agreed to sign these bills, he said he was convinced a booming economy will cause the state's general fund to grow so much that the $600 million in cuts won't be felt at all.

Most economists think that is highly unlikely.

Rick Snyder is not financially naïve. He is a former venture capitalist and a computer company president with an MBA from the University of Michigan. What happened to change his mind?

Quite possibly, something that had nothing to do with roads: Flint.

The Snyder administration was badly embarrassed in recent weeks when it turned out that despite smug administration denials, the water in impoverished Flint was badly tainted with lead, which can cause brain damage in babies and young children.

A Snyder-appointed emergency manager had ordered the city to shift from water supplied by Detroit to Flint River water, in order to save money. The river water turned out to be discolored, foul-smelling and had to be treated for contamination by bacteria.

But Snyder appointees at the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality insisted this summer there was no reason to worry about lead and claimed they had tested the water.

DEQ spokesman Brian Wurfel, the husband of Snyder's press secretary, said anyone concerned about lead should "relax."

The DEQ tests turned out to be bogus. The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency expressed concern about lead in a confidential memo. Curt Guyette, an investigative reporter for the ACLU, saw that memo, and helped get a grant to have a researcher from Virginia Tech test the water, which indeed proved to be lead-contaminated.

Corrosive Flint River water was causing lead to leach out of old pipes. An embarrassed governor suddenly found the money to reconnect Flint to Detroit's much safer water supply.

After that, "there was never any real doubt the governor would sign whatever road plan came across his desk," Inside Michigan Politics editor and publisher Susan Demas said.

"He's a politician who really needed a win," she added.

That — or something he could claim as a win, after the Flint scandal and years of defeat on road repair schemes.

But whether the road bill is any kind of a "win" for Michigan's citizens is an entirely different, and dismaying, question.

Volume #53, Report #146 -- Tuesday, July 29, 2014

GOP Worry Intensifying On Kowall

What was once expected to be a relatively easy run to re-election for Republican Sen. Mike Kowall is now proving more difficult as Republican sources say his tea party challenger, Matt Maddock, is gaining ground in the 15th Senate District GOP primary.

Several sources say it comes down to a handful of votes Mr. Kowall, of White Lake Township, has cast on key issues like Medicaid expansion as well as not realizing fast enough how credible a threat Mr. Maddock, of Milford, posed.

The biggest point that sources say Mr. Maddock is dinging Mr. Kowall on is his vote in support of Medicaid expansion. Mr. Maddock has himself referenced this, saying in a previous interview with Gongwer News Service that he is going to "put principles over party. I'm never going to increase the size of government," he said (See Gongwer Michigan Report, June 20, 2014).

Sen. Mike Kowall (R-White Lake Township) is facing more of a challenge than some sources believe he expected.

The consensus among Republican observers for now is that Mr. Kowall will survive, but not without expending much more effort than anticipated.

Adding to the evidence of Republican establishment worry, late money has poured into his campaign coffers. For starters, just Tuesday, Mr. Kowall tapped his leadership PAC for $20,000 to aid his campaign.

Just 10 days ago, Senate Majority Leader Randy Richardville (R-Monroe) contributed $10,000 through his leadership PAC to Mr. Kowall.

Mr. Kowall also has received late contributions (donations received starting July 21) to the tune of $44,250, with money coming by $1,000 or more, generally, from such sources as developer Ron Boji, McLaren CEO Phillip Incarnati, DTE Energy PAC, MITA (Michigan Infrastructure and Transportation Association) PAC, Telecommunications Association of Michigan PAC, and the Police Officers Association of Michigan Legislative Fund. The leadership PAC controlled by Rep. Gail Haines (R-Lake Angelus) contributed $1,000 to Mr. Kowall's race, and the Moving Michigan Forward Fund added a whopping $20,000.

By contrast, Mr. Maddock has so far only reported one late contribution of $500 from an individual that owns a restaurant. Mr. Maddock primarily self-financed his campaign by an estimated $27,556.

For the entire election cycle, Mr. Kowall has raised $280,925 but spent $211,042. Mr. Kowall spent a significant portion of that during the last six months, $101,631. He had some $80,635 on hand as of July 20, but nearly $106,200 in debts and obligations.

In terms of campaign finance, Mr. Maddock reported raising some $62,298 and spending $54,490 with $25,000 in debts and obligations. He has $7,807 in cash heading into the primary.

The race has become so heated that Rep. Eileen Kowall (R-White Lake Township), Mr. Kowall's wife, took to Facebook recently to blast Mr. Maddock's campaign.

"We get permission from individuals and business owners to put our political signs on their property. They are people we have an established relationship with. Somehow, my husband's jerk of an opponent thinks his signs belong there too. I just drove past our dentist's office on M-59 and our signs were gone and guess who's (sic) sign was there?" she said.

"When people call and ask him to take his signs down, the response from him or one of his lackey's is rudeness and belligerence and outright refusal. The conduct coming from his camp is unbefitting any junior high school kid - never mind a candidate running for public office," she said.

SCHMIDT V. MACMASTER: And another candidate filing tens of thousands in late contributions the week before the primary election is Rep. Wayne Schmidt (R-Traverse City), who has been engaged in a nasty battle with Rep. Greg MacMaster (R-Kewadin) for the 37th Senate District seat, where incumbent Sen. Howard Walker (R-Traverse City) decided not to seek re-election.

Mr. Schmidt has blown Mr. MacMaster out of the water in terms of fundraising and spending on this campaign, according to the most recent campaign finance reports (See Gongwer Michigan Report, July 25, 2014), yet many pollsters say Mr. MacMaster has the lead. Mr. Schmidt also has more endorsements than Mr. MacMaster.

As of Tuesday, Mr. Schmidt had filed about $20,300 worth of late contributions while Mr. MacMaster has filed none. The largest of those late contributions came from the Meijer PAC, who chipped in $5,000 to Mr. Schmidt's campaign for Senate, while DTE Energy Co. PAC added $3,000, Michigan Milk Producers $1,000 and the MI State Police Troopers PAC $1,200.

During the reporting period between January 1 and July 20, 2014, the Realtors PAC has contributed the most money at $10,000 ($12,050 cumulative), while the Auto Dealers of MI PAC, CMS Energy PAC, MI Chamber PAC, MI Jobs Fund, Saginaw PAC and Business Leaders for Michigan PAC had each contributed $5,000 each (cumulative varies). And various DeVos family members contributed a total of $18,000.

Mr. Schmidt also got support from the Gail Haines Leadership Fund and the Stamas Leadership Fund, $1,000 each. He also threw in nearly $50,000 of his own money.

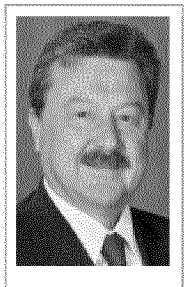
Mr. MacMaster, who reported raising about $43,420 during the reporting period ($60,452 cumulative), also got $1,000 from the Gail Haines Leadership Fund and he shifted a cumulative $4,352 from his state representative campaign committee to his Senate committee, as well as added about $9,525 cumulative of his own personal money into the race.

Mr. MacMaster has $8,985 in debts and obligations and $11,435 cash on hand heading into next week's primary.

Vaupel Stands By MEA Recommendation In 47th House Primary

Handy Township Supervisor Hank Vaupel said on Tuesday he was the only Republican in the 47th House District Republican primary to interview with the Michigan Education Association, and he said the two didn't agree on much, but he told the group he would always communicate with them and ended up with its endorsement.

"If it hurts my credibility that I would be willing to actually talk to teachers about education, I am sorry I stand by the endorsement," Mr. Vaupel said.



Wendy Day and Hank Vaupel, two Republican candidates in the 47th House District.

Mr. Vaupel's main opponent in the primary is tea party organizer Wendy Day of Howell. While Mr. Vaupel does have the MEA recommendation, he also has a joint endorsement with Ms. Day from the conservative education group, the Great Lakes Education Project.

"It seems like GLEP is making a lot of interesting decisions right now," Ms. Day said. She also said she pursued the endorsement because of the group's support of school choice, and that the group endorsed her although she opposed the Common Core State Standards, which the group backs but has not made a litmus test for its endorsement.

Mr. Vaupel said he believes in standards, but wants to ensure local control and that each school can decide on its own curriculum with parental involvement. He said he has concerns about Common Core coming from the federal government.

Howell Mayor Phil Campbell III said he does not support Common Core, but knows it is not a federal takeover of education. However, Mr. Campbell said, from his experience as a teacher, text books and tests will start to be based on Common Core, and the standards will then take over the curriculum.

Mr. Vaupel also was hit by a robo-call 9 a.m. Sunday morning, he said. The call called him liberal and was sent by a group not registered in the state, he said.

"We are trying to run a good, clean, honest campaign," Mr. Vaupel said. He added he does not know who might have been behind the call.

Money-wise, Mr. Vaupel has the edge, spending $52,235 this year. Ms. Day has spent $22,249. Mr. Vaupel also has $21,727 on hand to $307 for Ms. Day.

Mr. Campbell also has slightly outspent Ms. Day, with $22,746 in spending of his own. He has $3,979 on hand. However, Americans for Prosperity-Michigan has leveled the playing field by sending out mail praising Ms. Day.

Business groups have largely stayed out of the race although the Michigan Bankers Association has endorsed Ms. Day. Mr. Vaupel scored a big endorsement in winning the backing of the Michigan Farm Bureau AgriPAC. Mr. Vaupel also has the backing of Sen. Joe Hune (R-Whitmore Lake) and the term limited incumbent, Rep. Cindy Denby (R-Handy Township).

Mr. Campbell said his experience as mayor really gives him an advantage over the other candidates.

"I think I have the broadest experience of all the candidates," he said.

On roads, Mr. Campbell said he approved of the House plan. He said the Senate plan had too many large tax increases. He also said Public Act 51 should be looked at, as the funding formula for the state's infrastructure could have some structural issues.

Ms. Day said it is a complex issue. One idea, she said, is to look at performance contracts. She said they would work like warranties but with no escape clause.

Mr. Vaupel said the money from the sales tax on gasoline that goes into the General Fund needs to be followed more closely to see how much of it goes to roads. He said that would be a start.

On the tea party, Ms. Day said it's simply just a set of ideas, and across the state local segments of the party are different.

She said she does believe a balance could be made between establishment Republicans and the tea party, but it would require a healthy compromise.

"But what usually happens when you are talking about politics is whoever is on the more liberal edge, the compromise is coming to them," she said. "I don't think that is the kind of compromise we are looking for."

Mr. Campbell said the tea party has challenged the Republican Party's assumptions about government.

"I would say the tea party movement has been very helpful in raising political awareness among state residents," he said.

Two other Republicans are also running in the primary, Theodore Ring and Harold Melton, both of Howell.

Schauer Outlines Plan He Says Will Create 'Thousands' Of Jobs

Outlining a proposal that would focus on education, building the middle class in Michigan, boosting alternative energy and building the state's infrastructure, Democratic gubernatorial candidate Mark Schauer said he would build "tens of thousands of jobs" in the state if elected.

Surrounded by supporters at the Plumbers and Pipefitters Local 333 training facility near Capital Region International Airport in Lansing, Mr. Schauer repeated his oft-stated criticism of Governor Rick Snyder that the incumbent's policies are not working for middle-class individuals and families.

And while he said the pace of job growth is slowing in Michigan and that the state is one of the few that has not regained all the jobs lost during the Great Recession, Mr. Schauer was not willing to pin down a more specific number of jobs that would be created under his administration.

Former U.S. Rep. Mark Schauer

Mr. Schauer did not dispute that some 250,000 private sector jobs have been created during the time Mr. Snyder has been in office, but said many of those were created through the revived auto industry.

Mr. Schauer did say that the number of jobs created in his administration would be in the "high tens of thousands."

A spokesperson for Mr. Snyder's campaign called Mr. Schauer's proposals "empty rhetoric."

Mr. Schauer, along with his lieutenant governor running mate Oakland County Clerk Lisa Brown, outlined his 10-point proposal. Many of the points have been outlined before, such as investing more in education, restoring tax credits for child care and ending the income tax on retirement income, rebuilding the state's infrastructure and providing greater protections for women in the workplace.

Mr. Schauer, however, also called for boosting the state's renewable energy standard from the current 10 percent by 2015 to 30 percent generation from renewable sources by 2035.

He also called for greater environmental protections and for making government more transparent, including establishing a required code of ethics for individual office holders.

Mr. Schauer was cautious in outlining where revenues would come for many of his proposals.

He repeated his comments that he did not want to make changes to the Corporate Income Tax rate, but said he would call for the end to loopholes that cost the state money. Mr. Schauer also repeated his call to audit all state agencies and to end contracts, such as the Aramark contract for prison food services.

In terms of education, for example, he would not say specifically how much would be added to the budget, especially for higher education. Mr. Schauer did say he would restore the funds that he charges Mr. Snyder cut from education - which Mr. Snyder disputes - and he said the state would establish what it costs to actually educate children.

And while he blasted Mr. Snyder and the Republican-controlled Legislature for not enacting a plan to increase funding - pointing out that many local governments, including his home township, have tax proposals on the August 5 ballot for road funding - Mr. Schauer also said he did not want to increases taxes like the gas tax. Doing so would again hit middle-class families.

But he did criticize lawmakers for not increasing taxes on heavy trucks - the state's diesel fuel tax is lower than the gasoline tax - and said he would push for the state to get more highway funding out of the federal government.

With the plan in place, Mr. Schauer said the state could not undo "all the damage Rick Snyder has done overnight," but it would be a beginning.

But Emily Benavides, spokesperson for Mr. Snyder's campaign, said the public knows what Mr. Snyder's record is with 250,000 private sector jobs and the lowest unemployment rate in six years.

When Mr. Schauer was in the Legislature and Congress, she said, unemployment in Michigan hit double digits (during the Great Recession, the state's unemployment rate averaged 13.5 percent according to figures from the Senate Fiscal Agency).

"Michiganders cannot afford Mark Schauer's empty rhetoric," Ms. Benavides said.

The 15 Toughest House Races To Call

With the August 5 primary election one week away, there are several compelling contests and interesting candidates many that are too close to call.

Below is an analysis by Gongwer News Service of some of closest races, in order by district number.

27th: This five-person contest comes down to former Judge Rudy Serra of Ferndale and insurance agent/Democratic activist Robert Wittenberg of Oak Park. In a district with a large, politically active gay population, the openly gay Mr. Serra may have an edge with those voters, but all signs point to this race being too close to call. Most major Democratic organizations have sat this race out although the Michigan Nurses Association is backing Mr. Wittenberg.

36th: It's attorney Pete Lucido's money against Shelby Township Clerk Stan Grot's experience in the basic tactics of a political campaign. For some time, the thinking out of Macomb County on this race was that Mr. Grot was running a more effective campaign even with less money. Then Mr. Lucido filed campaign finance reports showing he was on his way to putting nearly $300,000 of his own money into the race, rare air for a House candidate.

And yet what has Mr. Lucido spent his money on? As of last week, he had yet to run any cable television and seemed to be focusing on mail and hosting pasta dinners. Can Mr. Grot hang on? Macomb Republicans think so, but doubt has crept in.

43rd: Two barn-burners as a result of Democrats and Republicans having competitive primaries. On the Democratic side, there is a sense that if former Waterford Township Supervisor/ex-Clarkston City Manager Dennis Ritter wins the primary that he could be the type of candidate with crossover appeal to win a seat that tilts a bit GOP. The other Democrat, Waterford school board member Robin McGregor, is a more conventional Democrat who has won most of the major labor endorsements. Democrats say this will come down to whoever works the doors the hardest.

On the Republican side, the establishment (the Detroit Regional Chamber and term limited Rep. Gail Haines of Lake Angelus) are backing Independence Township Trustee Andrea Schroeder. But tea party forces are lining up behind Jim Tedder of Clarkston, who is benefitting from mail Americans for Prosperity-Michigan is issuing praising his positions on conservative issues.

45th: A month ago, Rochester Hills City Councilmember Michael Webber looked unstoppable in his bid for the Republican nomination to succeed term limited Rep. Tom McMillin (R-Rochester Hills). He had all the endorsements and name recognition.

But campaign finance reports submitted last week revealed what some Republicans had suspected, that Mr. Webber was not taking the race seriously enough while Mark Avery of Rochester Hills was working it hard. Mr. Avery actually has outspent Mr. Webber, whose fundraising haul did not square with someone in a well-to-do area having virtually every key endorsement, and reports out of that area say he has sent more mail as well. And Americans for Prosperity-Michigan is sending out mail praising his position on conservative issues.

47th: Prior to Handy Township Supervisor Hank Vaupel getting the recommendation of the Michigan Education Association, which usually aligns with Democrats, Mr. Vaupel was looking like a narrow favorite over one of the founders of the tea party movement in Michigan, former Howell school board member Wendy Day.

But Mr. Vaupel, who also incongruously has the endorsement of the pro-school choice Great Lakes Education Project (which also endorsed Ms. Day), now is on the defensive, trying to prove he's not a liberal Trojan horse. He still has the all-important backing of Sen. Joe Hune (R-Whitmore Lake) and Rep. Cindy Denby (R-Handy Township), but the door is wide open for Ms. Day.

58th: This seven-way Republican primary is difficult to read. Auto dealership president Eric Leutheuser of Hillsdale has risen to favorite status thanks to his endorsement from the Michigan Farm Bureau AgriPAC and superior fundraising effort. Hillsdale County Commissioner Brad Benzing of Hillsdale, an appliance store owner, has the National Rifle Association endorsement and experience as an elected official, but an underfunded campaign.

Tea party backing has mostly gone to Jeff Jacques of Jonesville who also is benefitting from AFP issuing mailings praising him. Tim Haberl of Quincy also has received some endorsements.

60th: Jon Hoadley of Kalamazoo has an overwhelming edge in money and endorsements as he seeks the Democratic nomination, but he has run into the formidable well of good will, name identification and experience Kalamazoo County Commissioner David Buskirk of Kalamazoo has built during a 20-year run on the county board.

61st: Republicans say this contest between a pair of Kalamazoo County commissioners, Brandt Iden of Oshtemo and Phil Stinchcomb of Portage, is a pick 'em. Mr. Iden has a big advantage in money and virtually the entire Republican establishment has rallied to his side. Meanwhile, the tea party and AFP like Mr. Stinchcomb. Both men downplay the contest as a clear Establishment vs. Tea Party contest, but based on who is supporting each man and the issues/governing approach each man emphasizes, that is exactly what this race is. Tea party leaders say Mr. Stinchcomb may have less money, but has a strong door-to-door effort.

65th: It feels like anyone could emerge from this race. Right to Life of Michigan endorsed Leoni Township Trustee Robert Sutherby, but he has spent less than $7,000 on the race. Columbia Township Treasurer John Calhoun has the Michigan Farm Bureau AgriPAC endorsement. Brett Roberts of Eaton Township has spent the most money. Grass Lake Township Supervisor James Stormont has a profile. Dale Moretz of Blackman Township looks like a long-shot.

Only Dan Fulara of Brooklyn can be dismissed since has filed a waiver indicating he will spend less than $1,000 on the race. This is one of the quieter open seat races. Neither Americans for Prosperity-Michigan nor the Great Lakes Education Project is involved.

A Democrat held this seat from 2007-10, but so far Democrats have not talked up their chances much here. Retired corrections officer Bonnie Johnson of Leoni Township, who got clobbered in 2012 by Rep. Mike Shirkey (R-Clarklake), who is running for the Senate this year, has scooped up union support. Teacher and Democratic activist Ed Peterson of Grass Lake also is in the mix.

73rd: Here's another Republican primary where no one has a strong sense of who will win. Grand Rapids Township Treasurer Chris Afendoulis, a longtime business executive, is the establishment favorite (though he eschews labels), winning the backing of the Grand Rapids Area Chamber of Commerce and a dual endorsement with retired auto dealership owner John Decker of Belmont from the Great Lakes Education Project. Mr. Decker won the support of the Michigan Farm Bureau AgriPAC.

But it is Frank Pfaff Jr. of Comstock Park, a jewelry business specialist, who has surprised Republicans with an intense door-to-door effort. AFP is sending out mail praising him. However, Robert "RJ" Regan of East Grand Rapids also is mounting a strong grassroots effort.

80th: Most of the buzz out of this Allegan County seat is that tea party organizer Cindy Gamrat of Plainwell is running a strong campaign, but that nurse Mary Whiteford of Casco Township is still in the hunt. Ms. Whiteford has more money to spend (if she wishes) and has strong backing from business groups. But while AFP is sending out mail touting Ms. Gamrat, GLEP did not intervene in this race. That has made Ms. Whiteford's task more difficult.

90th: The establishment backing is overwhelmingly with Daniela Garcia of Holland, but Geoff Haveman has tea party support and the benefit of sharing the same surname as the term-limited incumbent and distant cousin, Rep. Joe Haveman (R-Holland), even if Joe Haveman is endorsing Ms. Garcia. AFP is sending out mail touting Mr. Haveman.

98th: Gary Glenn of Midland, the anti-gay activist turned tea party favorite, is seen as a slight favorite here after an impressive fundraising and grassroots campaign effort against establishment favorite Karl leuter of Sanford. AFP is touting Mr. Glenn, but GLEP is throwing everything it can at Mr. Glenn and trying to turn his support for the so-called FAIR tax, where the sales tax would be increased and the income and property taxes eliminated, against him.

104th: A crowded and quiet battle on the Republican side for the chance to succeed Rep. Wayne Schmidt (R-Traverse City), who cannot seek re-election because of term limits.

Jamie Callahan of Traverse City knows the turf from his days as a legislative aide to previous House members from this seat. He also has the Michigan Chamber of Commerce endorsement.

AFP is sending out mail touting Robert Hentschel of Traverse City. Kingsley school board member Ken Hinton has a base as do Karen Renny of Traverse City and Grand Traverse County Commissioner Larry Inman of Williamsburg. Isaiah Wunsch of Traverse City has the support of the Michigan Farm Bureau. Beau Vore of Kingsley has some tea party support.

No one candidate has a major cash advantage. It will likely come down to the door-to-door work.

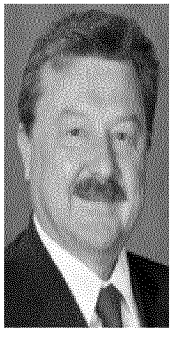
107th: Lee Chatfield of Levering is threatening to become the first Republican to oust an incumbent in a primary for a Michigan legislative seat on the basis of issues in almost 30 years. He has Rep. Frank Foster (R-Petoskey) on the run as a result of Mr. Foster's support for Medicaid expansion, Common Core and expanding the Elliott-Larsen Civil Rights Act to people based on sexual orientation. Still, Mr. Foster has a lot of money and is getting considerable help from the Republican establishment.

Trott Seems Shoo-In Against Nonexistent Bentivolio Campaign

U.S. Rep. Kerry Bentivolio promised a strong re-election campaign when he hired on a new campaign manager in May, but so far that new effort has not materialized.

Mr. Bentivolio (R-Milford) also appears not to be seeing a repeat of the 2012 support of tea party financiers who helped him get into office over establishment attempts at a write-in campaign.

David Trott, Mr. Bentivolio's primary opponent, meanwhile, has launched a strong campaign funded not only with his own money, but with contributions from those establishment Republicans.



Dave Trott (bottom) is challenging U.S. Rep. Kerry Bentivolio in the 11th U.S. House District Republican primary

Mr. Bentivolio has not been as reclusive in recent months as he was in his initial campaign, having given interviews to the Detroit Free Press and appearing on some radio and television talk shows.

His campaign did not respond to requests for an interview by Gongwer News Service.

He also has been scheduling town hall meetings, with events planned yet this month on veterans issues and border security.

He received some criticism, though, particularly from opponents, for a recent trip to Central America - a congressional fact-finding trip on the border issue - when many thought he should have been in the district campaigning.

Mr. Bentivolio told the Free Press he is planning to overcome Mr. Trott's funding by simply doing his job and letting voters see the results.

Polls so far have shown that Mr. Trott's money and establishment support is trumping Mr. Bentivolio's voting and work record. Virtually no one in Republican circles thinks Mr. Bentivolio can win, the only question is Mr. Trott's margin.

Mr. Trott told Gongwer he planned to improve on what he saw as Mr. Bentivolio's lack of constituent relations. "I'll vote the way I say I'm going to vote," he said. "I'll show up in the district to meet with people."

Mr. Trott said his support so far in the campaign has been a combination of expectations of him and experience with Mr. Bentivolio.

"I like to believe people believe can do a good job for them in Washington," he said. "I also believe it's a reflection on Kerry Bentivolio. Most of the elected local leaders have never met him or anyone from his office. When they do hear from him, it's only so he can plug in his mobile office."

Mr. Bentivolio has tried to use his mobile office as a way to reach constituents but has also seen some push back from local officials in trying to park the converted camper trailer in local government parking lots.

Mr. Trott also took a swipe at Mr. Bentivolio's legal wrangling with his former campaign manager.

"Kerry has more lawsuits and (Federal Elections Commission) investigations going on than any other member of Congress," he said. "Any money they contribute to him probably is going to paying his legal bills."

If elected, Mr. Trott said he would work to shift much of the federal government's programs to the states. "The whole Department of Education comes to mind," he said of programs that need to be moved. "Public support and assistance needs to be moved to the state or local levels ... where more of the tax dollars will go to helping people."

He said he also plans to stay out of the partisan bickering in Capitol Hill. "Most members of Congress are only interested in throwing bombs to get re-elected," he said. "I'll just stay focused on helping my constituents."

Mr. Trott acknowledged that his role as a foreclosure attorney would be a campaign issue. Democrats have signaled they would like to turn the 11th into a targeted race. But Mr. Trott said his work is necessary. "No one wants to foreclose," he said. "But our economy's based on people paying for what they receive."

"I don't believe it'll be a problem in the election," he said.

DEMOCRATIC PRIMARY: The race on the other side of the aisle began to heat up this week with Nancy Skinner taking shots at both of her opponents for not having actually voted for President Barack Obama.

It is unclear whether the attacks will propel Ms. Skinner from her current third place behind Anil Kumar and Bobby McKenzie.

It is also unclear whether any efforts on the part of any of the Democrats will make a difference come November. The district had initially been listed as at risk for Republicans, but with Mr. Bentivolio now a long-shot and with Mr. Trott's funding, Democrats will be hard-pressed to shift voters in the Republican-leaning district.

Money is also what puts the Democratic race likely between Mr. Kumar and Mr. McKenzie.

Mr. McKenzie was recruited by the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee to seek the seat and so has garnered much of the union support in the race, while Mr. Kumar has pursued a largely self-funded campaign.

Mr. Kumar entered the final weeks of the campaign with $99,472 in cash from $253,225 total raised. But the report also showed $720,000 he has loaned himself so far this cycle.

Mr. Kumar also has purchased air time in the district. His pre-primary report showed $23,225 on television time and $20,540 on radio time.

Mr. McKenzie had $68,447 in cash from the $375,432 he has raised through the election cycle. Most of his funding, $316, 535, came from individuals.

Ms. Skinner did not file a pre-primary report, but her prior report showed she had raised only $7,690.

Ms. Skinner claimed the role of having done the most policy work so far, having worked with a community redevelopment effort and on cap and trade efforts in Chicago.

She said her time as a radio and television personality has also drawn people to her campaign.

"Rank and file union members are coming to my campaign in droves," she said. "They know me, they trust me."

Mr. McKenzie, for his part, concentrated on his own experience in homeland security and his union leadership support.

"I'm a problem solver," he said. "I spent my entire adult life solving very complex problems."

He said his string of endorsements show he is a viable candidate.

"We've got the most realistic opportunity for holding seat in some time," he said. "There's a shot to win this seat if we all work together."

He also questioned whether Mr. Trott's money was enough to win the seat. "Eric Cantor had a lot of money, too," he said.

Mr. Kumar did not respond to requests for an interview for the story, nor did Bill Roberts of Livonia, who has also filed for the seat and is an adherent of Lyndon LaRouche.

Courser Slurs McNeilly's Sexual Orientation

Todd Courser, a tea party activist who is working to win the Republican nomination in the 82nd House District with staunch establishment opposition, sent a fundraising email on Tuesday calling strategist and Great Lakes Education Project board member Greg McNeilly a "gay marriage activist" because he married his long-time partner during the brief time it was legal in the state.

And Mr. Courser charged a video of Mr. McNeilly marrying his long-time partner - which he included in the mailing -- was "too graphic" for viewing.

GLEP has endorsed Jan Peabody of Lapeer in the race. They have also sent out mailers against Mr. Courser in the district.

"Who really is GLEP? From the outside they stand for just enough conservatism to make you think that they are, but in reality they are FOR Obama's federal takeover of education through Common Core and mask the fact they support ending traditional marriage," Mr. Courser wrote. "The Chief Strategist of GLEP, the group behind the smear mail against me and in support of Peabody, is Greg McNeilly. Who is Mr. McNeilly? A gay marriage activist who 'married' his male partner this past year the one day it was 'legal' to do so in Michigan."

Mr. Courser's email then linked to a video of Mr. McNeilly and his partner being married. He wrote the video gets graphic after 50 seconds and suggests the reader of the email not even watch the video because it is too "graphic." At 50 seconds, Mr. McNeilly and his partner kiss.

"I am not yet in a position to comment on the legal action that may be spurred by his defamation," GLEP Executive Director Gary Naeyaert said in response to the email. "But I may be able to soon."

"This is a guy who has run out of campaign money and has nothing left to do except try to earn media attention," he added.

Mr. Courser also announced on Tuesday he has filed a campaign violation complaint against GLEP, after they filed a complaint against him earlier this month.

Mr. Courser's complaint states GLEP did not provide a paid for by disclaimer in an email blasting Mr. Courser's candidacy.

"Not only is it ridiculous for GLEP to accuse me of a violation for simply including a hyperlink to another candidate's website, GLEP violated campaign finance rules while accusing me of violating campaign finance rules. If that isn't ironic I don't know what is," Mr. Courser said in a statement.

Mr. Naeyaert called the complaint "frivolous" and said emails are not required to contain the disclaimer.

Sims Has The Best Chance In A Packed Race For Troubled 34th House District

Having just received an endorsement from term-limited incumbent Rep. Woodrow Stanley (D-Flint) on Monday, Genesee County Commissioner Omar Sims is emerging as the likely 34th House District favorite in a crowded race of local officials, educators and community activists.

Mr. Sims has also been endorsed by the Flint Chamber of Commerce, United Auto Workers and several Genesee County officials.

Other candidates vying for the seat include public school teacher Jeff Bean, community activists Donna Calvin and Quincy Murphy, Flint City Councilmembers Eric Mays and Sheldon Neely and EMT Nathan Morrish.

34th District Democratic candidate Omar Sims

Mr. Sims said his work as a city council member and a county commissioner has prepared him well for the Legislature. He said he's neutral regarding Common Core standards and called for complete reconstruction of state roads, saying it would create jobs.

But arguably, the candidates in this district have more local issues on their minds - such as the controversial appointment of Flint's emergency manager, the increased water rates he implemented and the violent crime that continues to plague the city.

"It needs to be reexamined," Mr. Sims said of the emergency manager law. "Local officials have to be equipped with the tools and the resources to run their city. What good is an emergency manager if the city never had the resources it needed?"

The only candidate in the race who supports the emergency manager in Flint is Flint Board of Education member David Davenport, who said emergency managers are necessary because "local officials are elected who don't have financial knowledge."

Mr. Davenport said if elected, he would try to set up a fund, using his salary, for people in Flint who can't pay their water bills.

Mr. Bean said he wanted to revamp the emergency manager law and said it was outrageous that Flint residents are paying an average of $130 a month for water. Having been a teacher for more than 30 years, he said education is a priority. He opposes Common Core and has been endorsed by the Michigan Education Association.

Mr. Murphy said if elected, he'd focus on improving neighborhoods and creating crime prevention activity through recreational and after-school programs. He said he opposes Common Core, the emergency manager law and suggests using the gas tax to fund road repair.

Mr. Morrish called the emergency manager in Flint "a slap in the face," having been a member of the city's Civil Service Commission, which was cut to save money. Like Mr. Murphy, he cites crime as the biggest issue facing the district.

"We're still at the top of the most violent cities lists, and things don't seem to be changing. Our current system is still cutting police," Mr. Morrish said. "It's all going to be about funding and personally I want a few more police on the streets, and I'm the only candidate okay with the State Police being in our city to help."

Neither Mr. Neely nor Mr. Mays returned requests for comment. Mr. Neely has been endorsed by the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees.

Mr. Mays is currently awaiting sentencing on a driving while impaired charge, dating back from an arrest in November 2013. It's not his first brush with the law - Mr. Mays pleaded guilty to felony assault in 1987 and spent a year on probation.

Both Mr. Mays and Mr. Davenport have filed paperwork indicating they don't plan to raise more than $1,000 for their respective campaigns.

Mitchell: Moolenaar Moved Senate Money To Congressional Campaign

Paul Mitchell, one of the Republican candidates in the 4th U.S. House District, accused opponent Sen. John Moolenaar of having used money from his Senate campaign fund in the congressional race.

Mr. Mitchell, in a Federal Elections Commission complaint announced Tuesday, alleged Mr. Moolenaar (R-Midland) moved some $98,000 from his state Senate campaign fund to Value for Michigan, an independent political action committee run by Moolenaar campaign consultant John Yob.

The complaint alleges the funds were used in lieu of paying Mr. Yob for some of his work on the congressional campaign.

"John Moolenaar needs to come clean and admit to voters if he is attempting to hide this payment, circumvent federal election law, and misusing money in his state Senate account," Jeff Timmer, Mr. Mitchell's campaign manager, said in a statement. "This shady scheme would clearly be illegal. Value for Michigan must return the money, and for Moolenaar to pay Yob directly from his congressional campaign, while the FEC conducts its investigation into Moolenaar's actions."

Mr. Yob said there was no tie between Value for Michigan and Mr. Moolenaar's congressional effort.

"It takes someone like Paul Mitchell who is spending the money that he made off the Obama stimulus on dishonest attack ads to argue that a political consultant should be paid more money," Mr. Yob said. "I am proud to be helping a good man like John Moolenaar who has a record as a proven and trusted conservative but doesn't have Mitchell's stimulus money to spend on big fees to political consultants."

Campaign Notes: Richard Bernstein To Announce Bid For Supreme Court

Attorney Richard Bernstein, well-known through his connection with his father Sam Bernstein's Detroit-area law firm, is expected to announce on Wednesday that he will seek the Democratic nomination for Supreme Court.

Mr. Bernstein has not indicated anything formally that he will make the announcement, but it has been reported by outlets such as MLive and the Detroit Free Press. Democrats have long said he would run for the court this year.

Efforts to reach Mr. Bernstein through his law firm were unsuccessful.

Mr. Bernstein is expected to make announcements in Lansing, Flint and Detroit, and on Mr. Bernstein's Facebook page Flint Mayor Dayne Walling said he was looking forward to Mr. Bernstein being in the city.

Mr. Bernstein is a former member of the Wayne State University Board of Governors. Blind since birth, he is well-known for his lawsuits to protect disabled individuals. He has also been the host of a Detroit-area radio show on the law.

LAND SAYS NOTHING NEW ON FINANCIAL DISCLOSURE: Republican U.S. Senate candidate Terri Land submitted to a rare interview Tuesday with an appearance on WJR-AM's Frank Beckmann show, but after the conservative host lobbed several softballs, nothing new emerged on the circumstances surrounding Ms. Land failing to disclose the existence of a joint checking account with her husband she is using to pour $2.9 million into her campaign.

Mr. Beckmann asked Ms. Land if she was concerned about a possible Federal Election Commission investigation.

"As you know Frank, husbands and wives share their income. My husband and I also do that," she said. "That is just politics as usual here in Michigan."

Ms. Land reiterated what her campaign spokesperson has said, that it was an "inadvertent omission" on her financial disclosure form. "We've moved on from that," she said.

CONSERVATION VOTERS TOUT SCHMIDT LEAD: The League of Conservation Voters on Tuesday released new polling results of 519 residents of the 37th Senate District showing 44.5 percent support Rep. Wayne Schmidt's (R-Traverse City) bid for the seat compared to 34.9 percent for Rep. Greg MacMaster (R-Kewadin). The poll has a margin of error of 4.25 percent.

"With only one week to go until Election Day, we are going all in for conservation candidates in Northern Michigan and our work is paying off," Jack Schmitt, deputy director for Michigan LCV, said in a statement announcing the poll results. "Michigan citizens deserve to be represented by people who value our state's natural resources, and it is encouraging to see a leader like Wayne Schmidt take the lead and run with it."

The group issued a poll last week showing Mr. Schmidt gaining on Mr. MacMaster's lead, and said Tuesday that the League's affiliated political action committee has launched a $45,000 radio ad campaign to reach citizens in both the 37th Senate District and the 107th House District, where incumbent Rep. Frank Foster (R-Petoskey) faces a primary from Levering resident Lee Chatfield.

The group has pledged its support to Mr. Schmidt and Mr. Foster.

HOMEBUILDERS ENDORSE SNYDER: Friends of Housing, the political arm of the Home Builders Association of Michigan, have endorsed Governor Rick Snyder for re-election this November. Officials with the association said Mr. Snyder understood the importance of the homebuilding industry to the state and that housing values have improved dramatically during Mr. Snyder's tenure.

BISHOP AD: Mike Bishop Tuesday launched a new television advertisement in his run for the 8th U.S. House District this week.

The ad highlights his work in the Legislature, and, as expected, notes that he is endorsed by U.S. Rep. Mike Rogers (R-Brighton), whom he hopes to succeed in Congress.

Campaign officials said the ad would be posted online later in the week.

"Bishop fought Jennifer Granholm's liberal agenda and will fight to repeal Obamacare," the ad says.

The ad also hits opponent Rep. Tom McMillin (R-Rochester Hills) for some of his votes.

"Tom McMillin voted to increase taxes on retirees by $900 million," the ad says. "A friend of the ACLU, McMillin voted against drug testing for welfare recipients and against criminal background checks for nursing home workers."

MCMILLIN ENDORSEMENT: Mr. McMillin on Tuesday announced he had been endorsed by crooner Pat Boone and the 60 Plus Association.

"I'm still singing at concerts, but today I'm singing the praises of Tom McMillin. Seniors can depend on Tom McMillin," Mr. Boone, a California resident, said in a statement.

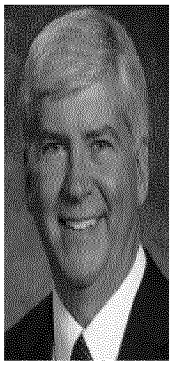
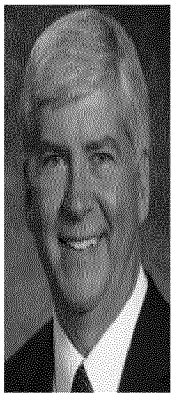
Schauer: Snyder 'Lied To People,' Snyder: Schauer 'Distorting Facts'

The governor's race began to take on the characteristics of a bare-knuckle fight on Friday when Democrat Mark Schauer charged that Governor Rick Snyder's administration showed "rank corruption," and that Mr. Snyder himself had "lied to the people" over the details of a contract to provide food service to Michigan's prisons.

Mr. Snyder's spokesperson blasted back that Mr. Schauer was "distorting" facts and making things up from bits and pieces of statements.

The focus of the exchange was the revelation late Thursday that the state had "suspended" a $98,000 fine levelled against prison food services company Aramark Corporation earlier in the year.





Governor Rick Snyder (top) and Democratic gubernatorial candidate Mark Schauer

In a teleconference with reporters, Mr. Schauer charged the revelation showed a "pattern of rank corruption in the governor's office that can no longer be ignored or tolerated by the people of Michigan."

Mr. Schauer charged that Dennis Muchmore, Mr. Snyder's chief of staff, "cleared the way" for Aramark to get "special treatment." Mr. Schauer accused the firm of being grossly incompetent and putting the lives of state employees, Department of Corrections officers, "at risk."

And twice during the call Mr. Schauer said Mr. Snyder "lied" by leaving the public with the impression that Aramark had been fined $98,000 for contract violations.

Sara Wurfel, Mr. Snyder's spokesperson, charged that Mr. Schauer was essentially making things up out of pieces and distorting the issue.

The Executive Office was determined to correct problems that had arisen with the Aramark contract, she said, and the fact the administration fined Aramark $200,000 showed it had taken "decisive action" on the contract.

The controversial contract - as the state was dropping food service conducted by state workers in the hopes of saving money - came into fresh controversy early after it went into effect.

On March 11, the Department of Corrections announced the $98,000 fine for "overfamiliarity" between Aramark employees, who replaced state employees in correctional food service last December, as well as unauthorized meal substitutions.

But emails obtained by the liberal group Progress Michigan, released Thursday, showed that two days later, Snyder Chief of Staff Dennis Muchmore and Corrections Director Dan Heyns exchanged emails on the Aramark controversy. The Department of Corrections, which processed Progress Michigan's FOIA request, redacted one of Mr. Muchmore's emails. In response to the redacted email, Mr. Heyns said he would take several actions, including delaying or canceling the fines.

Thursday night, Corrections spokesperson Russ Marlan confirmed the department had in fact canceled the $98,000 fine.

That was the first time the state publicly announced that decision.

Mr. Schauer said Mr. Snyder should immediately cancel the Aramark contract and release Mr. Muchmore's email. Mr. Schauer said he did not know what Mr. Snyder may have ordered Mr. Muchmore to direct Mr. Heyns to do.

He also said Mr. Snyder should apologize to the public for not being straight on the fate of the $98,000 fine, and also reveal whether Aramark or any of its executives contribute to the now closed Nerd Fund. The fund's contributors were closed to the public.

While saying Mr. Snyder lied, Mr. Schauer was careful not to say Mr. Snyder overtly told a falsehood, but lied by leaving an impression with the public that Aramark had been fined.

Asked if he thought Mr. Snyder had directed Mr. Muchmore to make arrangements on the fine, Mr. Schauer said he did not know what Mr. Snyder or his aide Rich Baird ordered Mr. Muchmore to do.

But Ms. Wurfel charged Mr. Muchmore was not discussing the fine with the department, but was dealing with other issues that had come up with the contract.

The Executive Office, she said, made "absolutely no attempt to hide anything at all." Because the contract did deal with the safety of Corrections workers and the public, the administration took the issue seriously and was determined to establish what was happening with the contract.

"This administration works on facts," she said. "There were problems with the contract and everything was designed to fix those problems."

Tom Shields, with Marketing Resource Group, said although the issue is something Mr. Snyder likely doesn't want to deal with right now, it really doesn't directly involve his office. However, he said, if Mr. Schauer uses it, it could affect the election.

"(Mr. Schauer) will have to make more out of it than it really is, but that's what campaigns are really all about," Mr. Shields said. "If it has any effect, it would have be used by Schauer in some way shape or form."

However, T.J. Bucholz of Vanguard Public Affairs, a Democrat, said a pattern has begun to form within Mr. Snyder's administration that is not good for his re-election interests.

"This administration has let several policy style state government brush fires burn unchecked," Mr. Bucholz said. "They've done nothing to either fully address to situations to put them to bed or they have blatantly broken procedure or certainly best practice."

Mr. Bucholz said the administration has ignored various problems and it could hurt Mr. Snyder's re-election chances.

"At this stage in the game you want the waters in state departments across the board to be still, you don't want any kind of problem," he said.

House Minority Leader Tim Greimel (D-Auburn Hills) issued a statement on Friday saying the governor and his administration need to be held accountable for not holding Aramark accountable.

"Cancelling Aramark's $98,000 fine clearly sent the signal that they didn't need to worry about their contract violations because the situation only got worse after that, putting Department of Correction employees and communities hosting those prisons in danger," Mr. Greimel said. "Emails show that Director Heyns was in contact with people from the governor's office who, at the very least, knew that Aramark was going to get a pass on serious contract violations."

Rep. Sam Singh (D-East Lansing), who sits on the House Appropriations Committee, said he and other members were assured corrective action was being taken against Aramark.

"This revelation, five months after the cancellation of the fine, not only makes me feel misled, but suggests this administration has very little respect for the legislative branch," he said in a statement. "The fact that the fines were canceled even after Director Heyns expressed concern about losing control of one of the prisons due to unrest over Aramark's conduct is troubling. The disregard for the safety of corrections officers and for public safety is astonishing. Aramark's performance only worsened over the following months.

"I think it's time Governor Snyder cancel this contract and become fully transparent about his administration's dealings with this company," Mr. Singh said.

Redacted Aramark Email Was About Getting Drinks

The email that the Department of Corrections redacted when releasing an email conversation between Director Dan Heyns and Dennis Muchmore, chief of staff to Governor Rick Snyder, about Corrections food service provider Aramark had to do with drinks. Specifically, it was a question from Mr. Muchmore to Mr. Heyns if he wanted to get together for a drink.

When the liberal group Progress Michigan released the emails it obtained Thursday of the conversation, the department had redacted one from Mr. Muchmore. And that redaction drew a demand from Democratic gubernatorial candidate Mark Schauer that the redacted material be released.

In the emails, Mr. Muchmore and Mr. Heyns were discussing the initial wave of reports of problems with Aramark administering the contract for food services in prisons since replacing state employees in December.

What Mr. Muchmore wrote was, "Do we need to get drink?"

Mr. Heyns' response was "I can always use one of those but not necessary. I know where you want to go. I will tone down my attack dogs, delay or cancel any fines and give Aramark time to solve the problems."

The omission of Mr. Muchmore's email had prompted demands from Progress Michigan and then today Mr. Schauer for the state to release that email. The Department of Corrections did so, and spokesperson Russ Marlan said he is trying to determine from the department's staff why it redacted the email. The Freedom of Information Act provides a limited set of reasons public bodies can exempt records from public disclosure.

Mr. Schauer also blasted Mr. Heyns telling Mr. Muchmore he would delay or cancel the $98,000 fine levied on Aramark just two days after disclosing the fines on March 11 for overfamiliarity between Aramark employees and inmates as well as unauthorized food substitutions. He called the move "rank corruption" and accused Mr. Snyder of lying to the people.

Mr. Marlan clarified his comment from Thursday that Mr. Heyns canceled the fine, saying it technically was suspended. He said the department did not announce the $98,000 fine, per se, but answered questions from Gongwer News Service and other media about whether a fine was coming.

"We didn't put out any press release or announcement when we imposed the fine, we didn't put out any press release or announcement when he made the decision to suspend," he said.

Fines are not about punishment, but about bringing a contractor into compliance on a contract, Mr. Marlan said. As soon as Aramark received the letter from the department informing it of the fine, its vice president called Mr. Heyns.

"Their vice president and Director Heyns had a very frank and honest conversation where the Aramark vice president pledged his commitment and high level support to resolve the problems we were experiencing at the time. The director felt he understood the situation, was sincere and had a solid plan to fix the issues," he said. "There wasn't any sort of deception. His goal was to get the problems resolved."

For months, several stories in the news media, including in Gongwer, referenced the $98,000 fine. At no point did anyone contact Gongwer, nor apparently any other outlet, to correct the record. There was at least one point where Gongwer asked the department if Aramark's compliance had improved since the fine.

Asked why the department did not correct the record as the stories about the fine continued, Mr. Marlan said the situation was fluid and the fine was in fact imposed even if suspended. Mr. Marlan said the department handled the rising number of stop-orders of Aramark workers the same as those numbers mounted beyond what initial stories said.

"The fines are a way to get a contractor to resolve the problem," he said. "When you impose them or suspend them, that's at the discretion of the director. There's no deception. There's no manipulation."

Sara Wurfel, Mr. Snyder's spokesperson, blasted Mr. Schauer for distorting facts and figures on the controversial contract. The administration took decisive action to correct the problems with the contract, she said, when it fined Aramark $200,000 and then hired Ed Buss to oversee the operations of the contract.

Ms. Wurfel also said Mr. Muchmore was not discussing the $98,000 fine in the emails exchanged with Mr. Heyns, but instead was discussing "all the other issues that kept popping up" in regards to the contract.

Some of those issues included performance matters on the state's side, such as some monitoring problems, that needed resolution.

But she also acknowledged that the Executive Office did not know that the $98,000 fine had been suspended until some months "after the fact."

The Executive Office, she said, made "absolutely no attempt to hide anything at all." Because the contract did deal with the safety of Corrections workers and the public, the administration took the issue seriously and was determined to establish what was happening with the contract.

Creagh Bans Drilling Under Hartwick Pines State Park

There will be no oil and gas exploration under Hartwick Pines State Park under an order issued by Natural Resources Director Keith Creagh.

Portions of the park had been on the list for non-development leases in the auction coming next month, meaning the winners could have extracted oil and gas from under the park, but not put any drilling equipment on the surface of the park.

But Mr. Creagh announced at Thursday's Natural Resources Commission that he was interpreting the documents granting the land to the state as requiring preservation of the subsurface resources as well as those above ground. That, he said, would prevent any extraction of the oil and gas under the park.

Mr. Creagh said he would be issuing an order declaring the park protected from any oil or gas extraction.

Environmental groups that had objected to the potential leases applauded the decision Friday.

"The Michigan DNR's decision to do right by Hartwick Pines State Park, and protect the largest stand of old-growth pine forest left in the Lower Peninsula, is a win for all Michiganders and the great outdoors," Jack Schmitt, deputy director of the Michigan League of Conservation Voters, said in a statement. "There are some places in Michigan that should be off-limits to oil and gas activity, and Hartwick Pines State Park is one of those places."

"We appreciate Director Creagh's respect for the Hartwick family's wishes, and thank him for making the right decision to protect this one-of-a-kind park," Chris Kolb, Michigan Environmental Council president, said in a statement. "Personally, I'm thrilled that the experience of standing beneath the park's towering white pines will remain unchanged for visitors to enjoy."

Republican Former Governor Milliken Endorses Peters

U.S. Rep. Gary Peters landed an endorsement from Republican former Governor William Milliken on Friday in his bid for a U.S. Senate seat against Republican candidate Terri Lynn Land.

Mr. Milliken, in his statement, said the stakes for the state and nation in this race are very high, as the successor to U.S. Sen. Carl Levin (D-Detroit) must be able to work effectively across the political aisle on critical issues such as national defense, as well as someone who can overcome partisan politics to "find common ground and deliver" for Michigan.

"I have decided that the candidate who is best prepared to be that voice of moderation is Congressman Gary Peters," Mr. Milliken wrote. "In his public career as a state legislator and as a Congressman he has shown an ability and willingness to rise above partisan bickering and search for a nonpartisan solution to the very real problems we face."

Mr. Milliken is no stranger to pledging his support for non-Republican candidates, though he this week endorsed Governor Rick Snyder for re-election. Among his other endorsements of non-Republicans, Mr. Milliken previously endorsed former Governor Jennifer Granholm in 2006 and then-U.S. Sen. John Kerry of Massachusetts over President George W. Bush in the 2004 election.

Mr. Peters (D-Bloomfield Hills) said it was "deeply humbling" to have the support of Mr. Milliken, someone he has always admired and respected for his "leadership, integrity, and commitment to service to better our state."

"Governor Milliken has always put solutions before politics, and that's the approach that will guide me in the U.S. Senate," Mr. Peters said in a statement announcing the endorsement. "As Michigan's next U.S. Senator, I will continue to be an independent voice that Michigan middle class families and small businesses can count on."

General Fund, School Aid Revenues Up, SFA Says

Revenue from the state's General Fund and School Aid Fund earmarked taxes totaled $1.7 billion in August 2014, up 3.4 percent from the prior year's level and about $35.2 million above the level expected in the Senate Fiscal Agency's estimate for the month based on the May consensus revenue estimates, the agency said.

Revenue from the State Education Tax, which is affected by the timing of counties' remitting payments to the state, accounted for almost all of the greater-than-expected revenue. Those collections in August were 3.9 percent below the year-ago level but $34.4 million above the expected level for the month, the report said.

Although collections earmarked to the General Fund were $22.4 million below the expected level for August, School Aid Fund tax collections were $54 million above forecasted levels, the SFA said in its monthly revenue report. Through August, year-to-date General Fund collections are $76 million below and School Aid Fund collections $2 million below consensus revenue estimates.

Net income tax revenue totaled $634.8 million in August, up 3.1 percent from the previous year. Withholding payments were 3.9 percent above year-ago levels as well. The agency noted that while withholding payments for August were slightly above forecast, the increase was offset by greater-than-expected individual income tax refunds and lower-than-expected quarterly and annual payments.

Corporate Income Tax collections totaled $16.1 million, about $12.6 million above forecast, and revenue from the repealed Single Business Tax totaled a negative $12.5 million (a net loss of revenue to the state due to refunds exceeding collections). And revenue from the repealed Michigan Business Tax totaled a negative $57.9 million in August as well.

Year-to-date, CIT collections are $34.2 million above expectations. But combined, SBT, CIT, and MBT revenue totaled a negative $54.2 million in August 2014, and on a year-to-date basis is $23.3 million below the expected level.

Sales tax receipts totaled $629.2 million in August, 4.5 percent above the year-ago level and $26.6 million above forecasts. Through August, sales tax collections are up only 1.5 percent from 2013, but are $35.8 million above expectations. And sales tax collections from new vehicles are up only 0.6 percent from 2013.

Whitmer Makes Pitch For Female Senate Candidates

In a year when most interests are looking at whether the House will flip control to Democrats, Senate Minority Leader Gretchen Whitmer has a new idea to introduce supporters, via e-mail, to some Democratic women running for the Senate.

Ms. Whitmer (D-East Lansing) has long said it was a priority of hers to increase the number of women in the Senate when she left office, and the party seems to be working toward that: there are 12 female Democratic candidates, including incumbent Sen. Rebekah Warren (D-Warren), who is seeking re-election to her 18th Senate District seat.

Ms. Whitmer, in an e-mail to supporters on Friday, noted that while there may be four women in the Senate currently, "only two of us have consistently voted on behalf of Michigan women" (the other two women are Republicans Sen. Tonya Schuitmaker of Lawton and Sen. Judy Emmons of Sheridan). She said the result has meant "continued opposition to equal pay for equal work; relentless attacks on women's reproductive rights and health care; the appalling rape insurance law; (and) silencing and censoring female legislators."

While there may be 12 Democratic female candidates, only a handful are true contenders for seats: Rep. Dian Slavens of Canton in the 7th Senate District, Rep. Stacy Erwin Oakes of Saginaw in the 32nd District, and obviously Ms. Warren (who should cruise to victory in her heavily Democratic-leaning seat).

Former Clawson School Board member Cyndi Peltonen, running in the 13th Senate District, is a toss-up. She showed enough grit to oust party favorite Ryan Fishman in a heated primary, but she has a different kind of battle on her hands with former Rep. Marty Knollenberg as the Republican candidate in that district. Both are starting off with essentially the same amount of cash on hand, though after Mr. Knollenberg spent big on securing his spot over four other Republican candidates.

Also iffy are Michigan National Organization of Women President Bobbie Walton, seeking to oust incumbent Sen. Dave Robertson (R-Grand Blanc) in the 14th District, and Michigan Education Association member Dawn Levey, who is going against incumbent Sen. Rick Jones (R-Grand Ledge) in the 24th District.

And elected Oceana County Road Commissioner Cathy Forbes, vying for the 34th Senate District seat against incumbent Sen. Goeff Hansen (R-Hart), excites the Democratic Party but becomes questionable in terms of fundraising, considering Mr. Hansen has reported six-figure revenues. Still, the district has a Democratic base that could be tapped.

Ms. Whitmer, in her e-mail, started the introductions with one of the party's perhaps strongest competitors, Ms. Slavens. Highlighted was her six years in the House and two decades as a respiratory therapist in Southeast Michigan.

"Simply put, Dian Slavens will be a senator that will fight for you and the issues you care about. She is facing one of the most conservative and out-of-touch senators in Michigan, and she has been working hard and doing everything she can to unseat him," the e-mail says, referring to incumbent Sen. Patrick Colbeck (R-Canton Township).

Moody's: Flint Unlikely To Need Bankruptcy

While Flint is much like Detroit in its socioeconomics, the smaller city is not in such dire financial straits that it will need to file bankruptcy, at least as long as its proposed retiree health benefit changes are approved, Moody's Investor Service said in a report released late Thursday.

Moody's attributed much of the difference between the two cities to emergency management, though it said Flint had also done much to help itself.

"Flint's EM has substantially improved financial operations with dramatic changes, including restructuring pension benefits, outsourcing services, eliminating 20 percent of the city's workforce and reducing total employee compensation equivalent to 20 percent of wages," the report said.

The report also praised the health benefit changes, but noted those currently face a court challenge.

In addition to the emergency manager, the report said it helped that the state acted more quickly on a manager for Flint - which Moody's does not rate - than it did for Detroit, which the service has rated Caa with a negative outlook.

But the report said the state would also have to do more to help Detroit than it would for Flint in the same condition.

"Detroit has a population seven times larger than Flint, with four times the geographic area and a tax base that is almost 15 times larger. Detroit's size makes it more difficult for outside assistance to be meaningful," the report said.

Flint also has a substantially smaller debt load, at half of its operating revenues compared to 2.17 times its operating revenues for Detroit. The national average, the report said, is 87 percent of revenue.

Flint had also done more to help itself, the report said, noting the 6-mill public safety tax in 2012. The Detroit City Council rejected a 9-mill public safety proposal in 2012.

First Bill Snyder Vetoed Back In House

A bill similar to the first piece of legislation Governor Rick Snyder vetoed has a hearing in the House Regulatory Reform Committee next week, and in some cases would prohibit a state agency from adopting rules more strict than federal guidelines.

HB 5731, introduced by Rep. Joe Haveman (R-Holland) would apply to cases where the federal government has mandated the state to promulgate rules and to cases where there is no federal mandate, an analysis said. But the bill would not apply, generally, to rules an agency finds necessary for the preservation of the public health, safety or welfare, and require the concurrence of the governor in the finding of an emergency.

The bill dictates if a proposed rule is more stringent than the applicable federal standard, the regulatory impact statement must include specific facts that "establish the clear and convincing need to adopt the more stringent rule."

In December of 2011, Mr. Snyder vetoed a similar bill because it was too broad and did not provide flexibility to various departments (See Gongwer Michigan Report, December 2, 2011).

The bill Mr. Snyder vetoed would have required state rules to be no more restrictive than federal rules unless specified in statute or done through an emergency rule.

HB 5731 will have a hearing in the Regulatory Reform Committee on Tuesday. Chair Rep. Hugh Crawford (R-Novi) could not be reached about his plans for the bill, but it was on the committee's agenda this week and later removed.

Flags Lowered To Honor Firefighter

Governor Rick Snyder has ordered flags in the state to be flown at half-staff on Monday to honor Russell Wiita, assistant fire chief at Coldsprings-Excelsior Fire and Rescue, who died September 8.

Mr. Wiita died of an apparent heart attack after responding to an emergency call Monday.

"Courageous first responders like William risk their lives daily to protect our communities and state," Mr. Snyder said in a statement. "On behalf of all Michiganders, I thank William for his years of dedicated service and extend sincere condolences to his family, friends and community."

CLEAN WATER ACTION RATES LEGISLATORS: Clean Water Action released its legislative score cards on Friday and gave 26 legislators a perfect score and gave 62 a score of zero.

The scorecard is based on the group's priorities, which include energy, health, wildlife, water and policy. Those with perfect scores included House Minority Leader Tim Greimel (D-Auburn Hills) and Sen. Rebekah Warren (D-Ann Arbor). Those who scored zero include House Speaker Jase Bolger (R-Marshall) and Sen. Rick Jones (R-Grand Ledge).

"It is ridiculous that in the Great Lakes State our legislators have pursued an anti-environment agenda that has eliminated or weakened critical safeguards that have protected our state and its residents for decades," said Nic Clark, state director of Clean Water Action, in a statement. "These scorecards are meant to be a gut-check for our Legislature and should force them to make a decision, do they value corporate profits or the people of Michigan and their environment?"

House Approves Flint Water Fix

The House unanimously voted this evening to approve $9. 35 million of state funds to return Flint to the Detroit water system and pay for additional state staff in the city's schools to gauge exposure to lead, handle evaluation and protocols on drinking water and to assist with plumbing engineers.

Governor Rick Snyder last week called for state funds to return the city to drawing water from the Detroit system and ending a disastrous move to pull water from the Flint River, as well as funds to pay for additional state staffers from the Department of Health and Human Services, the Department of Environmental Quality and the Department of Licensing and Regulatory Affairs working in the city.

The supplemental (HB 4102) allocates $6 million to get the city back on Detroit's water system; $300,000 for DEQ's drinking water and environmental health services; $1 million for DEQ's laboratory services; $1 million for DHHS emergency services to purchase and distribute water to Flint residents; $850,000 for follow up services for children, including testing lead levels and care for those with abnormal levels; and $200,000 for plumbing inspections.

Insufficient corrosion controls for water drawn from the river – which is inherently more corrosive than water drawn from Lake Huron, where the Detroit system draws its water – caused lead from the city's old service lines to leach into the water, leading to lead levels in the water exceeding the federal standard to trigger remediation and to elevated lead levels in the blood of some Flint children.

Gongwer News Service will have more on this story in Wednesday's Michigan report.

Volume #54, Report #204 -- Wednesday, October 14, 2015

Tentative Deals Reached On State Employees Contracts

The state has reached tentative agreements with its bargaining units on new contracts for state employees.

Two unions - the Michigan Corrections Organization and the Michigan State Employees Association - confirmed Wednesday the major aspects of the tentative deals between the state and their unions: a one-year contract for wages and health care starting October 1, 2016, that provides a 1 percent base wage increase, and 1.5 percent lump sum payment for employees in October 2016.

Sources told Gongwer News Service the same provisions apply to tentative agreements between the state and other unions representing state employees.

The Service Employees International Union 517M also announced a tentative agreement but did not publicly offer details.

Officials with the United Auto Workers Local 6000, the state's largest employee union, did not return calls for comment.

"While this agreement isn't perfect, it maintains key pieces of our contract that members said were very important to them, such as their health care costs," MCO President Tom Tylutki said in a statement. "Our negotiations centered on the issues members told us were important. Health care is their number one concern."

The agreements are merely tentative and still require ratification from union members as well as approval from the Civil Service Commission.

But presuming union members ratify them, it will set one key piece of the upcoming 2016-17 fiscal year budget.

Other portions of the contracts would last the traditional three years. However, the Office of State Employer pushed for a one-year deal on the wages and health care components out of concern about what will happen with the federal excise tax on premium health care plans, MCO said in a bulletin to its members.

That is the so-called Cadillac tax in the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act. Under that law, starting with the 2018 tax year, if the aggregate cost of the health care coverage an employer provides exceeds a statutory dollar limit, then the excess is subject to a 40 percent excise tax.

The idea behind the tax was to reduce health care spending. But it is providing a rare point of agreement between Democratic supporters of the law and Republicans who have long called for the Affordable Care Act's repeal. Unions and Democrats have said the tax should be repealed, as have Republicans and business groups, but it is unclear what will happen.

A spokesperson for the Office of the State Employer declined to comment.

Meekhof Slams Schuette On Presumptive Parole; Snyder Also Jumps In

Attorney General Bill Schuette faced heat from Senate Majority Leader Arlan Meekhof Wednesday regarding legislation pending in the Senate on presumptive parole, and Governor Rick Snyder also defended the legislation.

In the past week, Mr. Schuette has launched a campaign-style assault on the legislation, referring to it as "early" release, "catch and release" and "autopilot parole." Supporters of the bill have said he is just totally wrong in his characterization of the bills.

"He's been out there on a limb on this, throwing out a direct line and saying stuff like it's anti-cop, which was over the top, and he and I had that discussion yesterday," Mr. Meekhof (R-West Olive) said of Mr. Schuette. "He's certainly within his right to comment on public policy. (But) he doesn't make public policy, he just follows what we do."

Still, Mr. Schuette's fusillade against the legislation may be having an impact. Mr. Meekhof said his caucus is voicing considerable concern about it.

Mr. Schuette has been relentless on the issue. Last week, on WKAR's "Off the Record," he said HB 4138 was "elitist" because those who live in nicer areas would have fewer worries about criminals being released back into society (See Gongwer Michigan Report, October 9, 2015). And his Twitter account gives updates seemingly every hour or two about "autopilot parole" and examples of parolees re-offending once released.

"Public safety is the first responsibility of government. Autopilot release of violent offenders is bad for our neighborhoods, cities and small towns," he said Tuesday in a joint statement with Genesee County Prosecutor David Leyton, his Democratic opponent in 2010 for attorney general. "We cannot build a better, stronger, safer Michigan if our public safety is threatened."

Mr. Schuette and Mr. Meekhof are also potential rivals for the Republican gubernatorial nomination in 2018 when Mr. Snyder cannot seek re-election.

Asked if he told Mr. Schuette to keep his nose out of the matter, Mr. Meekhof responded, "I said it was probably not a wise idea to talk the way he talked about the caucus on the other side. He said he'd take that under advisement."

Mr. Meekhof said he was unsure whether Mr. Schuette had apologized to the House members who drafted and supported HB 4138, which passed the House earlier this month 67-39 and currently sits in the Senate Government Operations Committee chaired by Mr. Meekhof.

"But he probably ought to think about how he treats everybody in general, and if he really wants to get public policy done, the best effort would be to work with people," Mr. Meekhof said.

Schuette spokesperson Andrea Bitely declined to comment on Mr. Meekhof's comments.

In addition to comments by Mr. Meekhof, Governor Rick Snyder expressed support of the measure in prepared remarks. This came a day after House Speaker Kevin Cotter (R-Mount Pleasant) also felt compelled to defend the legislation against Mr. Schuette's criticism.

"Michigan needs a smarter criminal justice system that doesn't simply punish people who commit crimes, but frees up resources that can instead be used on effective efforts to reduce criminal activity and make our communities safer," Mr. Snyder said. "House Bill 4138 creates consistency in parole decisions for low-risk offenders by ensuring that they are all subject to the same standards when being considered for parole."

Mr. Snyder also noted the long-term impact of the change could be housing about 3,600 fewer low-risk felons in state prisons a decade from now, freeing up some $80 million "that can be reinvested in preventing crime rather than continuing to keep low-risk offenders behind bars after they have served their minimum sentence."

HB 4138 currently awaits action in the Senate Government Operations Committee, chaired by Mr. Meekhof, who said he had a "healthy discussion" with his caucus on the matter on Wednesday.

"We're looking at this presumptive parole along with some other corrections reform. Senator Proos has some great ideas that we're probably going to combine with it and come up with a better package," he said.

But Mr. Meekhof also admitted that there was "a lot of concern" among his caucus members, especially since the issue has always started in the House, even last term.

"They needed a lot of information to even understand the terms that were being talked about because we really haven't studied this at all in our caucus," he said.

Given the expectation that Sen. John Proos (R-St. Joseph) would lead on another package of corrections reform, Mr. Meekhof said it would be "a little while" before there would be any action on the issue in the Senate, though specifics beyond that were not discussed.

On Roads, Meekhof, Greimel Trade Barbs As Meeting Canceled

Wednesday was meant to be a cooling off day following Tuesday's impasse on talks to generate $1.2 billion in new funds for roads, but instead the disputes continued.

Senate Majority Leader Arlan Meekhof (R-West Olive) said he was surprised at remarks by House Minority Leader Tim Greimel (D-Auburn Hills) on road funding talks and how a proposal that the Legislative Quadrant may have on the table is insufficient.

The problem continues to be whether and how to provide income tax relief as a sweetener to an expected gasoline tax increase (See Gongwer Michigan Report, October 13, 2015).

"He sat in the same room, saw the same spreadsheets I did and understood that the way we're doing it by the redirection of revenue going a little bit at a time and tax rollback only when there is over-the-top revenue," Mr. Meekhof said midday Wednesday. "He saw that it worked, so I'm not quite sure where he's coming up with his assertion that it's cutting anything."

The quadrant meeting scheduled for noon was canceled. Snyder press secretary Sara Wurfel said it was too soon on the heels of Tuesday's meeting, after which Mr. Snyder declared the talks at an impasse. But Ms. Wurfel said Mr. Snyder would continue talking to leaders on the issue.

Mr. Meekhof said the rollback has been on the table the whole time, "and now at the 11th hour (Mr. Greimel) wants it removed," Mr. Meekhof said. "I'm not going to remove it."

The income tax rollback passed by the Senate helped to garner some Republican votes for the meat of the legislation that seeks, in part, a gas tax hike. The Senate plan is complicated, only allowing a reduction in the tax if revenues grow and putting no bottom on how far the income tax rate could fall.

"The only dispute is, is it the rate of inflation or a little bit more than the rate of inflation?" Mr. Meekhof said of the rollback likely to be included in a final deal on road funding. "But it's the same mechanics."

Asked if he felt as though Mr. Greimel's concerns were "coming out of nowhere," Mr. Meekhof said the first he had heard of such a concern came Tuesday. But he said the Senate stands ready and willing to work on a plan.

"We sent over a plan with an income tax rollback, specifically protecting the things we think are important, and dedicating money towards roads. I think that was a good plan," he said.

Mr. Meekhof said Mr. Greimel ought to "find a way to compromise with Speaker Cotter and get it done."

But Mr. Meekhof wouldn't go so far as to say that if a roads solution doesn't get done soon that it would be solely Mr. Greimel's fault. Pointing fingers, he said, doesn't solve the problem.

"We're trying to solve the problem, and throwing mud around isn't going to make it better or give us a better opportunity to do it," he said.

Greimel spokesperson Katie Carey said Mr. Greimel was disappointed when the governor canceled the quadrant meeting originally scheduled for Wednesday.

On Mr. Meekhof's comments, Ms. Carey said: "We respectfully disagree with the Senate majority leader. We were always concerned with the hit to the General Fund."

Ms. Carey noted public schools, safety and other Democratic priorities are funded through the General Fund.

She also said an income tax cut is going to help the wealthier residents of the state.

"It is not going to help low-income Michiganders," she said.

She also said the Democrats are trying to find a roads solution that focuses mostly on roads.

"We want something that is more concrete that will be a long-term financially sustainable solution to fix the roads," she said.

Cotter spokesperson Gideon D'Assandro said Mr. Cotter and Mr. Snyder met Wednesday and discussed goals on the issue moving forward. Mr. Cotter remains hopeful talks will resume, Mr. D'Assandro said.

House Approves Nearly $10M For Flint Water

The House unanimously voted Wednesday evening to approve $9.35 million to return Flint to the Detroit water system and pay for additional state staff in the city's schools to gauge exposure to lead, handle evaluation and protocols on drinking water and to assist with plumbing engineers.

HB 4102 passed the House 105-0.

Senate Minority Leader Jim Ananich (D-Flint) said in a statement he attended House session Wednesday and told them the importance of passing the legislation.

"The people of Flint have the same right to clean, safe drinking water as residents in every district," he said. "I appreciate my colleagues on both sides of the aisle recognizing this and moving swiftly to secure resources. This is an important step necessary to fix the current crisis, and once this is complete, it's important that our next priority is getting to the bottom of how this happened. We need to make sure this never happens again."

Governor Rick Snyder last week called for state funds to be used return to drawing water from the Detroit system and ending a disastrous move to pull water for the city from the Flint River and to pay for additional state staffers from the Department of Health and Human Services, the Department of Environmental Quality and the Department of Licensing and Regulatory Affairs working in the city.

The supplemental appropriations allocates $6 million to get the city back on Detroit's water system; $300,000 for DEQ's drinking water and environmental health services; $1 million for DEQ's laboratory services; $1 million for DHHS emergency services to purchase and distribute water to Flint residents; $850,000 for follow up services for children, including testing lead levels and care for those with abnormal levels; and $200,000 for plumbing inspections.

Of the $9.35 million allocated, $7.15 million is from the General Fund.

Rep. Al Pscholka, chair of the House Appropriations Committee, said he was pleased to see a unanimous vote for the bill.

"There is a time in this Legislature that we have to have statesmanship and stateswomanship and this was one of those times. This is a public health emergency in Flint," he said.

Mr. Pscholka said some members speculated whether the funds should come from the Budget Stabilization Fund, but said that was not necessary.

"We are in a fiscal position in order to handle something like this," he said.

Insufficient corrosion controls for water drawn from the river, which is inherently more corrosive than water drawn from Lake Huron, where the Detroit system draws its water, caused lead from the city's old service lines to leach into the water, leading to lead levels in the water exceeding the federal standard to trigger remediation and to elevated lead levels in the blood of some Flint children.

The $6 million will go toward a contract between the city and the Detroit system to pay for water service until next summer when a new regional pipeline to Lake Huron is expected to be completed. The Mott Foundation is putting up $4 million and the city of Flint the remaining $2 million.

PRESCRIPTION DRUGS: The House unanimously passed HB 4843 Wednesday, which would protect minors seeking medical treatment, or helping a minor seek medical treatment, for an overdose or other drug-related illness or injury from possession charges.

Rep. Al Pscholka (R-Stevensville) introduced the bill in response to the loss of Mason Mizwicki, a Watervliet teenager whose mother, Lori Mizwicki, has been an advocate for greater awareness of the prescription drug problem.

"Even taking up the legislation has helped to start much-needed conversations about the problem," he said in a statement. "It's not isolated to one town or one portion of the state. This can happen to any teen, anywhere. We have to keep a spotlight on the issue."

The bill now goes to the Senate for consideration.

Third Grade Reading Bill Delayed In House With Votes Short

The House spent nearly 7 hours Wednesday attempting to gather enough votes to pass a bill designed to get third grade students reading proficiently, but eventually called it quits with a positive outlook on the bill's chances Thursday.

"Very definitely," said Rep. Amanda Price (R-Park Township), sponsor of HB 4822 when asked if she thought the bill would pass Thursday.

"We're working really hard and a lot of our members had questions today, so we are in the process of answering a lot of those tomorrow," she told reporters after the long session.

Indeed, Gideon D'Assandro, spokesperson for House Speaker Kevin Cotter (R-Mount Pleasant), had earlier told reporters the questions coming from members were overwhelming and needed more time to be properly answered.

Both Democratic and Republican House members were in and out of the chamber on Wednesday, clearly attempting to come to some kind of agreement on the bill.

At about 7:30 p.m. the Democrats went into caucus, when they returned to session the House voted on the Flint water fix and then adjourned shortly after.

Ms. Price said it is hard to say what kind of changes might be made to the bill before final passage.

She said members didn't understand how much interaction there would be with the child once they have been identified as having a reading deficiency.

Ms. Price also said some members were concerned because students who were making progress in reading should be promoted from third grade.

"But if you are in third grade and you're still reading at first grade level and you've made progress since the beginning of first grade, is that enough progress?" She said. "You still need to, when you get into fourth grade, be able to read to learn. And if you're not there yet, it's going to be more difficult."

Katie Carey, spokesperson for House Democrats, agreed that there are a lot of questions and concerns from members. She said she is hopeful the chamber can come up with the votes to pass the bill Thursday.

Ms. Carey said Democratic members are looking for some changes in the retention piece of the bill and parental involvement.

"In the end we all have the same goal for this legislation. It's just a matter of how do you get there and what those look like," she said.

The bill, as reported form committee, would retain some third-graders who are reading more than a grade level behind, but it also provides for many intervention services before the third grade assessment and outlines "good cause" exemptions.

Similar legislation was controversial last term and was never able to be voted on by the full House.

Kosowski Proposes Sports Gambling For Road Funding

Rep. Robert Kosowski on Wednesday told the House Regulatory Reform Committee one way to get more funding for the state's roads and bridges is to legalize sports gambling and simulcasting horse races at casinos in the state.

HB 4469 and HB 4470 would allow casinos to accept wagers on sporting events, remove the current prohibition on televising simulcast horse races at casinos and allow for wagers on the races as well.

Mr. Kosowski (D-Westland) said he would be open to expanding the bill to horse racing tracks in the state.

To actually become law, the bills have several obstacles to overcome. First, a two-thirds majority is needed from both chambers and would need voter approval during the general election. Additionally, a federal court found that New Jersey's efforts to legalize sports betting violated federal law.

But Mr. Kosowski said the court is going to re-hear the case and there is a chance the original decision would be overturned.

"There are bookies everywhere. We all know this. Why not regulate it?" Mr. Kosowski said.

Originally, Mr. Kosowski intended to use the legislation to get more road funding. But he said as he has done more research, he would like some of the revenue generated to go to the race tracks in the state, and some funds to go to gambling addiction treatment and prevention.

Rep. Ray Franz (R-Onekama), chair of the committee, asked Mr. Kosowski what kind of support he had for the bill, noting that he didn't have any co-sponsors. Mr. Kosowski said he doesn't ask for co-sponsors and he believes the support is there.

Joe Asher, CEO of William Hill U.S., a bookmaking company, told the committee regulating the business is best.

Mr. Asher said suspicious activity can be reported and investigated in real time. And, he said, since it is the company's money being used there is incentive to call and report such activity.

"Oversight and protection do not occur in Michigan, however, because the illegal operators ...exist, and are not regulated," he said.

Mr. Asher said if casinos outsource the bookmaking there is little risk to them because companies such as his often front the cost.

He also said there may be losing days or weeks in the business, but there are very few losing months.

George Kutlenios, president of the Michigan Horseman's Benevolent and Protective Association, told the committee in June 2014 that Michigan thoroughbred horses returned to the Hazel Park raceway and saw 10,000 fans. He said attendance on regular days has consistently averaged 6,000 people.

Mr. Kutlenios said he appreciates the bill but would like to see a provision creating a relationship between any venue wishing to simulcast thoroughbred racing and a licensed state track to "ensure sustainability and quality of Michigan thoroughbred racing, and the resulting support to the state's agricultural industry can continue."

MMA AND BOXING REGULATIONS: The committee did report SB 152 and SB 154 regulating professional boxing, professional or amateur mixed martial arts or similar "unarmed combat."

The responsibilities of the Michigan Unarmed Combat Commission are outlined in SB 152, and that commission, alongside the Department of Licensing and Regulatory Affairs, would have jurisdiction over all boxing or MMA contests. The legislation also revises and establishes new regulations concerning the conduct of the events, as well as revises fee amounts for licenses to have such events.

Among the regulations are ensuring a contestant has been drug tested and having an on-site inspector. Women would also be required to submit a negative pregnancy test before competitions.

Michigan Chamber, Which Backed Peabody In 2014, Endorses Howell In 82nd

The Michigan Chamber announced on Wednesday its endorsement of Republicans Mary Whiteford in the 80th House District and Gary Howell in the 82nd House District, where former Reps. Cindy Gamrat and Todd Courser are running for re-election, respectively.

Mary Whiteford of Casco Township lost to Ms. Gamrat (R-Plainwell) in the 2014 Republican primary for the seat. Ms. Gamrat was expelled from the House last month but has said the voters deserve a voice in the process and is attempting to win her job back.

"Mary Whiteford will be a strong supporter of job creation and economic growth and we are pleased to endorse her in this special election," said Michigan Chamber President and CEO Rich Studley, in a statement. "The residents of Allegan County deserve better representation. We believe Whiteford possesses the experience and strength of character necessary to serve the 80th House District well."

Ms. Whiteford also has the endorsement of the Great Lakes Education Project and the Grand Rapids Chamber of Commerce political action committee.

Mr. Howell of North Branch is the Lapeer County Intermediate School District president and is taking on 11 other candidates in the 82nd District primary, including Mr. Courser (R-Lapeer), who resigned before he was able to be expelled from the House.

"Gary Howell understands the importance of pursuing policies based on individual freedom, incentive and opportunity to keep Michigan moving forward," said Jim Holcomb, senior vice president and general counsel for the Michigan Chamber, in a statement. "If elected, Howell will provide the residents of Lapeer County with the effective representation they deserve."

Endorsements in the 82nd District are split up more than in the 80th District. Former Rep. Kevin Daley has endorsed Chris Tuski of Lapeer, who is a farmer and volunteer firefighter. And GLEP has endorsed Jan Peabody of Lapeer, who lost in the 2014 primary to Mr. Courser.

In the 2014 Republican primary, the state Chamber endorsed Ms. Peabody. It did not endorse in the 80th.

The November 3 special election primary comes as Ms. Gamrat and Mr. Courser were participating in an extramarital affair together while serving in the House. An internal House Business Office investigation then found the two were misusing state resources to attempt personal and political gains.

Revenue From Increased Hunting, Licensing Fees Less Than Expected

Revenue generated from the increase in hunting and fishing license fees is about $5 million less than expected, Department of Natural Resources Director Keith Creagh told the House Appropriations Committee on Wednesday.

Mr. Creagh said the department expected $18 million from the change in fees in the 2014-15 fiscal year, but only saw $13 million. And in the 2013-14 fiscal year, which included seven months of the new fee structure, the department expected $11.8 million in new revenue, but only received $7.8 million.

Austin Scott, the House Fiscal Agency analyst for the DNR, said he expects to receive more revenue numbers for the fiscal year that ended two weeks ago.

Mr. Creagh said the changes in fees also changed buying patterns, as the licenses are shorter term rather than annual. He also said the increase in the out-of-state licenses has affected those hunters coming into the state.

A non-resident hunter must purchase a $150 base license and then purchase additional licenses for the species they wish to hunt, which range from $8 to $25. Out-of-state fishing licenses also increased from $42 to $67.

But, Mr. Creagh told the committee, the state is not out of line in its fees compared to neighboring states, and the fees are a bargain compared to states out west.

Rep. Michael McCready (R-Bloomfield Hills) said many groups encouraged the increase in fees when the Legislature began considering them and noted it may simply take time for the increases to set in.

LANDFILL ODOR VIOLATIONS: The committee reported HB 4783, which would increase penalties under Michigan's waste management laws for first and second violations of the law from $10,000 and $25,000 each day, to $25,000 and $75,000, respectively.

The bill cleared the committee 25-0, with Rep. Sam Singh (D-East Lansing) and Rep. Henry Yanez (D-Sterling Heights) abstaining.

Mr. Yanez said he abstained from voting because the Department of Environmental Quality is working on updating the waste management laws and an additional series of bills could come up.

And Rep. Al Pscholka (R-Stevensville), chair of the committee, said he looks forward to working with Mr. Yanez on the issue, because he does not believe the bill increasing the fees will be the last piece of legislation on the issue.

The Michigan Waste and Recycling Association was opposed to the bill, saying it would increase the fines for all firms and all violations, including compost facilities and municipal properties.

Mr. Pscholka, however, said the fines have not been increased since 1987.

"This is not out of the ordinary," he said. "This is something we should have been doing all along."

Mr. Pscholka introduced the bill in response to ongoing odor issues and a citation by the DEQ for inadequate daily cover by the Orchard Hill Landfill in Southwest Michigan.

"Let's go have a barbeque in one of these neighborhoods," he said in a statement. "You have to have a real sense of what it is like to have this in your backyard, for years. If you're not willing to put a little more pressure on these bad actors, you're saying you'd be willing to put a down payment on a house here."

Civil Rights Could Again Select Former Commissioner

The Department of Civil Rights could potentially have three of its four most recent directors also be members of the commission that heads it.

Among the three candidates to be interviewed to succeed retiring Director Matt Wesaw is Agustin Arbulu, who succeeded Mr. Wesaw on the commission in January 2013. He left the commission earlier this month and has yet to be replaced.

Mr. Arbulu is president of Metro Care Services, which provides health care and legal consulting in the Detroit area.

The other Michigan candidate is Portia Roberson, who is group executive for ethics and civil rights for the city of Detroit. Ms. Roberson was among those interviewed when Mr. Wesaw was hired and was discussed as a Democratic candidate for attorney general for the 2014 election.

And Akia Haynes is deputy director and general counsel for the Indiana Civil Rights Commission, where she has served since January 2013. She has also served as a deputy attorney general for the state, as well as a private practice attorney.

Mr. Wesaw had been a member of the commission, and so had been Kelvin Scott, who served as director from February 2009 to February 2010 when he died. Both had served as chair of the commission.

House Panel Considering Regulation Of Charity Bins

What Rep. Lee Chatfield, chair of the House Local Government Committee, had thought would be a brief discussion turned contentious as local government groups raised concerns over his legislation to regulate charity donation bins.

All agreed the 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals was clear that the bins could not be prohibited (the court found they were charity speech and so protected under the First Amendment), but locals wanted to retain the right to oversee their location and maintenance.

Mr. Chatfield (R-Levering) said the goal of his bills (HB 4862 and HB 4863) is to unify regulation of the bins, which allow people to leave clothing, books and other materials for the charity listed on the side.

Local governments had tried to ban the bins, arguing, as some still did Wednesday, that they attract not only legitimate donations but also trash dumping.

Suzanne Schultz, managing director of design, development and community engagement for the city of Grand Rapids, brought pictures of bins overflowing with various materials.

Ms. Schultz said allowing cities to control the locations through zoning would help, but she said communities needed to be able to issue civil infractions for bins that become a nuisance.

"Courts are not going to take this up if it's misdemeanors," she said, echoing others who had argued the penalties as laid out in the legislation would be too costly to enforce.

But Judy Allen with the Michigan Townships Association said limiting the location regulation to zoning would limit townships' ability to regulate the locations because of their lesser planning powers, and it could potentially leave some bins unregulated.

"Everyone who has a bin, they would be grandfathered in and be a nonconforming use," she said.

She also joined others in urging against a cap on the annual licensing fee. The bill provides for no more than $75, but since local governments cannot charge more than their costs anyway, she said taxpayers would have to subsidize the system if costs rise above that cap.

Mr. Chatfield said his goal with the bill was to create a system and uniformity across the state. But he also said the bills would allow communities to do some of the things their representatives had asked.

"If the bill doesn't prohibit it, there will be more things locals will be able to do," he said.

Officials with Planet Aid, which had been the defendant in the federal lawsuit, said the bill would allow their operations but would help to weed out those not caring for their bins.

Kai Nelson said his group checks its bins once a week and has systems in place to allow response within 24 hours if there is a problem reported.

But he said local government groups' call for agreements between the charity and the property owner are not necessarily workable. He said in many cases the properties where the group places collection boxes have absentee or corporate owners and a local property manager is the right person to make the agreement.

Mr. Nelson said the company would be open to provisions that would require even its existing boxes to be licensed and, if they do not meet siting requirements, moved. He said the company has already done that in some locales that have adopted regulatory ordinances.

Mr. Chatfield said he would continue to work with all of the parties to meet their concerns in the legislation.

TAX CAPTURE: In what was intended to be the primary focus of the meeting, libraries said any changes to tax increment financing authority laws have to allow them more say in captured taxes.

And Eric Lupher with the Citizens Research Council said the state needs to place more limits on the authorities.

"Libraries are having to return for more millages in the future when their revenues are being captured by tax increment finance authorities," Lance Werner with the Kent District Library, speaking for the Michigan Library Association, said. "We're living within our means but our means are being siphoned away."

He noted, for instance, that the Litchfield library loses 47 percent of its funds to tax capture.

Mr. Werner said the libraries did not object to all tax capture authorities, but they should be given more power to choose which ones are appropriate to get library revenue. Current law, he said, allows them to accept all or reject all.

"We want to work with the tax captures ... so we can explain to our investors where our money is going," he said.

He said libraries should also be permitted to opt-in for all authorities. He said some provide for library revenue to automatically be captured and require the libraries to opt out.

Mr. Lupher said future authorities need to be given a limited time to operate. While courts have ruled that tax capture for economic development is constitutional, he said TIFAs have morphed into something that might not be.

"They're being used for police and fire; they're being used for street fairs," he said.

And he said they are being routinely renewed instead of expiring when an intended project is completed.

"There should be some finality to this," he said, adding that in many cases there is also less accountability for the funds.

"Those revenues have just been pushed off budget and you don't hear about it," he said.

Mr. Lupher, pointing to issues raised with recent millages to support the Detroit Zoo and Detroit Institute of Arts, said existing authorities also should be limited to capturing the taxes that are in existence when the authority is created. To capture any new taxes should require creation of a new authority, he said.

REWARDS: The committee also began discussions on HB 4292, which would allow county commissions to approve up to $20,000 for rewards leading to arrests for certain crimes.

Rep. Tom Cochran (R-Mason), sponsor of the bill, said in a recent incident where an Ingham County sheriff deputy was killed during a chase, the county was limited to offering $2,000 for information on the suspect, who had fled.

He said that limit was set in 1948.

"This money falls more in line with what the value of money is today," Mr. Cochran said of the bill. "This is a little more enticing to have people come forward."

Mr. Chatfield questioned whether the bill, which addresses only counties, should be expanded to cover other local governments under the same theory.

Senate Ends Deadline To Petition For DNA Test, Trial

The Senate voted unanimously Wednesday to eliminate the deadline in the law for a defendant convicted of a felony at trial, serving prison for that felony, to petition the court for DNA testing of biological material identified during an investigation that led to his or her conviction.

Those convicted of felonies may also request a new trial based on the results of that testing under SB 151. Currently, such a petition must be filed by January 1, 2016.

Only Michigan and Louisiana currently have sunsets on such provisions.

FIREFIGHTER CERTIFICATION: The Senate also approved SB 372, which provides firefighter certification reciprocity with states that have the same certification as Michigan. The bill requires the state fire marshal to extend reciprocity certification to a firefighter from another state who seeks to work as a firefighter in Michigan as long as the individual was certified in another state after completing a program that meets or exceeds Michigan's standards.

"I have heard from many fire chiefs and local officials about how difficult and expensive it is to recruit and retain firemen in our local fire departments," Sen. Dale Zorn (R-Ida), sponsor of the bill, said in a statement. "Part of the problem is that Michigan currently does not recognize out-of-state firefighter certification. This legislation will improve our local fire departments ability to protect families and staff their departments at appropriate levels."

State Unemployment Rate Falls Below National Rate For First Time Since 2000

News that Michigan's unemployment rate fell to 5 percent in September, putting it below the national unemployment rate for the first time in 15 years, brought plenty of cheers Wednesday.

The national unemployment rate in September was 5.1 percent.

"We need to stay focused on our goal, but it also is important to look back to see how far we've come. Michigan's unemployment rate was once the worst in the United States," Governor Rick Snyder said in a statement. "Today we are below the national average for the first time since August 2000. This means more people in Michigan are able to use their skills and are finding fulfilling jobs to support themselves and their families, making our cities and our communities stronger in a variety of ways."

Mr. Snyder posted a photo of him from 2000 on his Twitter feed with much less gray hair and a beard to commemorate the occasion.

Employment rose for the month by 10,000, and the labor force was up, too, by 3,000.

In the past year, the unemployment rate has fallen from 6.7 percent, and employment is up by 68,000.

"Since early 2015, several key labor market indicators have shown improvement in Michigan and in the nation," Jason Palmer, director of the Bureau of Labor Market Information and Strategic Initiatives, said in a statement. "Monthly unemployment rates in the state and nation have been comparable, as have over-the-year payroll job growth rates."

Bridge Authority Has 6 Potential Bidders

The Windsor-Detroit Bridge Authority announced Wednesday that six companies had responded to its request for qualifications to build the Gordie Howe International Bridge.

The authority is now submitting the qualifications to a review panel of authority members and experts to determine the three most qualified potential bidders.

"The private sector has shown a vibrant interest in working on the Gordie Howe International Bridge project, between this RFP, the responses we received to our recent RFP for early works, as well as the recently-held Industry Days," Mark McQueen, chair of the authority's board of directors, said in a statement. "Although site preparation has already begun for the eventual construction of the new Canadian Customs plaza, businesses and travelers on both sides of the border understand that the completion of the new bridge is dependent upon the successful conclusion of the pending RFP process."

Committee Roundup

SENATE APPROPRIATIONS: The Senate Appropriations Committee on Wednesday began taking testimony on reviewing boilerplate language that requires reports of agencies that spend more than $500,000 in new or expanded programs.

The first programs up for review were making Michigan a no-wait state for senior home-delivered meals and in-home services; child welfare performance-based funding; and the Ok2Say school safety hotline.

"This is harder work than passing budgets, is going back and checking and seeing if we're delivering on our promises," Sen. Mike Shirkey (R-Clarklake), whose idea it was to conduct such reviews, said in committee. "The intent of this is not necessarily to review why we did something. The intent is to review whether what we said we were going to accomplish is actually occurring."

By and large, Mr. Shirkey and other members of the committee requested more specific and detailed metrics, especially identifiable metrics like number comparisons, of all of the programs reviewed Wednesday. The committee expects to review another three programs next week, and chair Sen. Dave Hildenbrand (R-Lowell) recommended that members consider the practice for their own subcommittees when and where possible.

Capital Notebook

DEADLINE THURSDAY FOR LOCALS TO APPLY FOR GRANTS PROGRAM: Municipalities have until 11:59 p.m. Thursday to apply for the Financially Distressed Cities, Villages, and Townships grant program. Any city, village or township experiencing one or more conditions of "probable financial distress," under PA 436 of 2012, the Local Financial Stability and Choice Act, is eligible to apply.

STATE CHRISTMAS TREE HAILS FROM WAKEFIELD: A 66-foot spruce from Wakefield in the Upper Peninsula will serve as the state's Christmas tree this year.

Florence Daniels is donating the tree to the state in memory of her husband, Jim Daniels, a former teacher and youth sports coach.

The tree will arrive October 31, and as per longtime tradition, be illuminated at the annual Silver Bells in the City celebration that Lansing holds to kick off the holiday season Friday, November 20.

MACMHB ANNOUNCES CEO: The executive board of the Michigan Association of Community Mental Health Boards has announced Robert Sheehan will lead the organization as chief executive officer effective immediately. Prior to his new role, he served for 18 years at the CEO of the Community Mental Health Authority of Clinton, Eaton and Ingham Counties.

Mr. Sheehan replaces Michael Vizena as CEO of MACMHB. Mr. Vizena is retiring.

"Behavioral health issues and intellectual/developmental disabilities affect so many of Michigan's residents, and are central to overall health, yet are often overlooked or stigmatized in the public eye," Mr. Sheehan said in a statement. "I look forward to the opportunity to work alongside the Association's members - hundreds of innovative provider and healthcare management organizations across the state - as they serve those in our communities with behavioral health issues and intellectual/developmental disabilities and their families."

LAND LEASES: The Department of Transportation will be leasing 17 parcels of land around the state for agricultural use only.

The lease sale is scheduled for November 4 at 10 a.m. (doors open at 9 a.m.) at the Office of Aeronautics Auditorium at Capital City Airport, 2700 Port Lansing Road in Lansing.

Those interested in bidding must attend and provide a sealed bid for each parcel.

CASINO REVENUE: Two of the three Detroit casinos saw revenue increase both for the month of September and for the third quarter, the Gaming Control Board announced Wednesday.

MotorCity Casino saw the most growth, with the $35.7 million it collected in September representing a 7.5 percent increase over the same month in 2014. For third quarter, its revenue was up 3.6 percent over the same period in 2014.

MGM Grand Detroit was up 4.6 percent in September to $45.2 million and up 0.5 percent for the quarter.

Greektown Casino saw revenue decline 0.1 percent for the month to $26.6 million and 2.4 percent for the quarter.

Flint Water Funds Head To Snyder

The Senate wasted no time in approving today more than $9 million to help pay for temporarily returning the city of Flint to the Detroit water system and fund additional staffing in the city's schools to gauge the exposure to lead.

The fix came with unanimous passage of HB 4102, a supplemental appropriations bill the House passed late Wednesday.

The bill allocates $6 million to get the city back on Detroit's water system; $300,000 for the Department of Environmental Quality's drinking water and environmental health services; $1 million for the department's laboratory services; $1 million for Department of Health and Human Services emergency services to purchase and distribute water to Flint residents; $850,000 for follow-up services for children, including lead testing and care for those with abnormal levels; and $200,000 for plumbing inspections.

Senate Minority Leader Jim Ananich (D-Flint) expressed thanks for his colleagues' support in the matter. The move to pump water for the city from the Flint River without proper corrosion controls allowed lead in service lines and welds to leach into the drinking water at levels beyond those requiring remediation.

Gongwer News Service will have more on this story in Thursday's Michigan Report.

Volume #54, Report #205 -- Thursday, October 15, 2015

Most Dems Drop Support As Third Grade Reading Bill Passes

While Democrats were hopeful after a late session Wednesday they would be able to support a bill designed to get elementary students reading proficiently before entering fourth grade, in the end, House Republicans passed the bill Thursday with only three Democratic lawmakers in support.

The bill, HB 4822, cleared the chamber 57-48. Immediately after the bill's passage, both Rep. Adam Zemke (D-Ann Arbor) and House Minority Leader Tim Greimel (D-Auburn Hills) requested they be removed as co-sponsors.

Under the bill, students could be retained in the third grade if they do not test proficiently in reading. The bill does outline multiple reading intervention programs in an effort to get students reading at grade level before retention is necessary. There are also "good cause exemptions" outlined in the legislation.

Additionally, in a change adopted Thursday, the retention portion of the bill would not go into effect until the 2019-20 school year, a two year delay from what was in the reported version of the bill.

Democrats speaking on the House floor said they were concerned about the lack of parental involvement in the retention process, the negative impacts of retention and the possibility that the funding in the current year budget for literacy programs would not actually cover the costs to schools.

Mr. Zemke, who had been working with fellow Democrats and the bill's sponsor, Rep. Amanda Price (R-Park Township), on an agreement, said in his opposition speech he still considered Ms. Price a friend, though she might not feel the same.

Mr. Zemke said he was voting no because an amendment he offered, which would allow a student who has been working on an individualized reading plan since the end of second grade, but was still not proficient in reading by the end of third grade, to move on to the next grade level while still working the individualized plan, was not adopted.

"I am not going to remove the hope of a 9-year-old. Period," he said on the House floor. "You want to see what's going to happen when you paint that picture. ... They're working hard, they're playing by the rules, they're doing everything right. ... And then you take it away. What do you think they're going to do for the rest of their educational career? They're not going to try. Because they played by the rules and they got screwed anyway."

Ms. Price said she was disappointed to lose Mr. Zemke's support, but said his proposed amendment watered down the retention provisions in the bill to a point where she was no longer comfortable.

"I understand what he was saying," she said. "But right from the get-go, the line in the sand has been for people to say, 'No, you need to read.' And we can't keep promoting kids because we're not getting them where they need to be."

Ms. Price said the reason the House worked so hard to get the bill passed this week rather than working longer behind the scenes is she wanted to get it done before the Legislature finds itself in an election year and before other education policy debates, like Detroit Public Schools, come up.

According to the House Fiscal Agency analysis, in the 2013-14 school year as many as 39 percent or 42,500 third grade students did not test proficiently in reading under the Michigan Educational Assessment Program.

With the "more rigorous" National Assessment of Educational Progress test, in 2013, 69 percent of fourth-graders did not reach proficient reading levels.

Rep. Lisa Posthumus Lyons (R-Alto) said the bill is not a reactive, retention-focused measure. She said it includes many intervention programs that work to help students improve their reading.

"It is not acceptable to allow our kids to not be able to read and yet send them along their way," she said.

Rep. Harvey Santana (D-Detroit), one of the three Democrats who voted for the bill, said there is a 47 percent illiteracy rate in Detroit. He said current policies tell children in Detroit, "It's okay to be a failure."

He criticized comments from other members saying retention would emotionally impact children.

"How emotionally affected is that third-grader going to be when they grow up to be an adult with kids of their own who they cannot take care of because the system failed them?" he said.

The Great Lakes Education Project praised the passage of the bill, saying it was "a great day for school children in Michigan."

"We extend our deep appreciation to Rep. Amanda Price, the chair of the House Education Committee and the bill's primary sponsor, as well as to House leadership and those 57 members who voted to help kids today," GLEP Executive Director Gary Naeyaert said in a statement. "As the leading advocacy organization supporting this bill, we are confident Senator Phil Pavlov and the Senate Education Committee will schedule hearings soon so this common sense policy can be evaluated and passed in the Senate and then sent to the governor for his signature."

The bill outlines intervention programs for children before they go into the third grade. Students are allowed to be taught other subjects that they are proficient in - like reading and math - in a fourth grade setting, while still receiving reading interventions at the third grade level. There are also good-cause exemptions to retention outlined in the bill.

The Department of Education would be required to approve at least three reliable reading assessment systems and recommend or create a reading/literacy coach model. The reading/literacy coach would be required to undertake 11 tasks, including working with teachers to diagnose and address reading deficiency.

The bill would increase the costs for the department, but the 2015-16 fiscal year budget included $900,000 to implement the early literacy initiatives. The school aid budget also included additional funding for a portion of the implementation costs for schools.

Beginning in the 2016-17 school year, school boards and charter school boards of directors would be required to select one of the reading assessments from the MDE and provide any student with a reading deficiency at any time with a reading improvement plan and provide notice to parents about the student's reading deficiency.

Reading intervention programs for those students showing a deficiency would need to include a screening of progress at least three times per year; provide a highly effective core reading instruction; and take place during regular school hours. Parents would also receive a "read at home" plan.

Educator Evaluations Appear Finally Set As House OKs Bill

The House on Thursday passed a bill outlining teacher and administrator evaluations in the state, and the bill appears to have an easy path through the Senate and onto Governor Rick Snyder's desk.

The bill, SB 103[redacted], passed 97-8 after four months of debate in the House and many changes - following a tough debate during the 2013-14 term. The bill was initially controversial, as Sen. Phil Pavlov (R-St. Clair), chair of Senate Education Committee, took a different approach from the House versions of the legislation drafted during the last term.

Mr. Pavlov, after the bill passed Thursday, said he was comfortable where the House went with the legislation.

"They're protecting my key tenants, and that is that, one, any money that goes to the department is dedicated toward actual training," he said. "The second thing I wanted to make sure happened was it didn't water down the historic reforms we got on tenure. Thirdly, the important concept was locals would have the ability to form and choose a model that best fits their situation."

The House-passed version of the bill establishes both training requirements and options for school districts and public school academies to develop their own teacher evaluation tool or make modifications to an existing tool. Changes added Thursday stipulated the funding for training must come from the Educator Evaluation Reserve Fund

Since the bill originated in the Senate, the chamber has to concur in the House changes to send it to Governor Rick Snyder's desk.

Rep. Daniela Garcia (R-Holland), the vice chair of the House Education Committee, said the bill avoids a "one-size-fits-all" evaluation system.

"Under this legislation, school districts will have the flexibility to decide on their own evaluation standards to meet that goal," she said in a statement. "The House has included additional language that will make certain teachers, principals and superintendents are all familiar with and trained in their district's evaluation methods."

Under the bill, the Department of Education would have to establish and maintain a list of teacher and administrator evaluation tools, and the list would have to, at the very least, include the tools recommended by the Michigan Council on Educator Effectiveness in 2013. Districts do not have to use the same tool for teachers and administrators.

For teachers, beginning in the 2018-19 school year, 40 percent of the year-end evaluation would be based on student growth, with half coming from the state assessment and half coming from a local assessment.

For administrators, beginning immediately, 25 percent of the annual evaluation would be based on student growth and assessment data. The data is an aggregate of student growth data used in teacher evaluations in the district where the administrator works.

Training for teachers and administrators on evaluation tools is also required. School districts and PSAs could create a consortium to conduct the trainings. All evaluators and observers would also be required to receive training from a person who has expertise in the training tool.

A school district or public school academy could also develop its own tool, and the department would promulgate rules for how a district would submit its tool for placement on the list. Also required under the bill is for the district or PSA to publish on its website a variety of information about the evaluation tool and the evaluation process beginning in the 2016-17 school year.

Ananich On Flint Water Funds: 'This Is By No Means Over'

Senate Minority Leader Jim Ananich was both heartened and relieved Thursday to have a supplemental appropriations bill unanimously approved in the Senate to provide $9.35 million to help his city of Flint get better water faster, but it was a cautious optimism as there is much left to do, he said.

Of the money, $6 million will go toward switching from the Flint River as the city's source for drinking water back to the Detroit system. Insufficient corrosion control for the river water caused lead in the service lines and pipes to leach into the water, leading to led levels above federal standards for remediation and rising levels of lead in Flint children's blood.

"As soon as we switch over to Detroit, we're not going to automatically have clean, drinkable water. We're still going to have to use the filters, still going to have to make sure they take precautions, because it takes a while to rebuild the corrosion controls against the pipes," Mr. Ananich (D-Flint) told the press after session. "I'm not an expert by any means, but it could be a few months.

"The one benefit I do think we have going forward is Flint will probably be the most tested water anywhere in the world over the next six months, as it should be, to make sure we rebuild that trust," he said.

The Senate decided quickly to take up HB 4102[redacted], as the House sent it over Wednesday evening after a unanimous vote among representatives as well.

And within hours, Governor Rick Snyder signed the bill into law, becoming PA 143 of 2015 with immediate effect.

"This funding is a coordinated response to a serious problem and I'm pleased so many parties came together to help deliver safe drinking water to the city of Flint," Mr. Snyder said in a statement. "Reconnecting to the Great Lakes Water Authority is only the first step, as the state will continue testing and inspections to ensure Flint families and children have clean water in their homes and schools."

A week ago, Mr. Snyder called on the Legislature to provide funding to the city to help it in its efforts to switch back to the Detroit water system and have staff from both the Department of Environmental Quality and the Department of Health and Human Services. During that time, and even before, there had been a lot of finger-pointing about who ought to ultimately be responsible for the crisis that has caused Flint to go on high alert due to elevated levels of lead in its water.

And many of those questions of accountability remain, Mr. Ananich said.

"(The switch) was during the period of an emergency manager, and there wasn't many decisions allowed to be made by local elected officials. I can't speak about whether they were part of the conversations or not," he said. "It was the decision of the emergency manager to switch over, a decision by a different emergency manager to stay on it, and a third emergency manager denied the request to go back.

"It definitely needs to be looked at, the emergency manager laws, make sure there's some accountability on the back-end before they leave. They shouldn't be leaving cities with such crises when they leave," Mr. Ananich said.

But the other question is who should look at what and how. Mr. Ananich said he wasn't sure yet whether the state should investigate itself (effectively), a commission should review the situation, the Legislature should make changes to existing laws or create new ones, or more.

"All those questions need to be looked at," he said. "I'm not 100 percent sure exactly what method it should be, but I think it's warranted to have a further look at what happened, what mistakes were made, and how to make sure it doesn't ever happen again in cities like Flint but also across the state.

"This isn't a victory for my community. This is a fix to a problem that never should've happened," he said.

The supplemental appropriations allocates $6 million to get the city back on Detroit's water system; $300,000 for DEQ's drinking water and environmental health services; $1 million for DEQ's laboratory services; $1 million for DHHS emergency services to purchase and distribute water to Flint residents; $850,000 for follow up services for children, including testing lead levels and care for those with abnormal levels; and $200,000 for plumbing inspections.

Of the $9.35 million allocated, $7.15 million is from the General Fund.

Driskell Leads Walberg In Third Quarter Fundraising, Gilbert Tops $200,000

The highly touted challengers to U.S. Rep. Mike Bishop and U.S. Rep. Tim Walberg posted strong fundraising totals in the third quarter, based on campaign finance reports filed Thursday.

The reports showed their Democratic challengers, Rep. Gretchen Driskell (D-Saline) and former "Little House on the Prairie" star Melissa Gilbert, with strong hauls.

But the reports also showed a number of candidates with steep hills to climb in their efforts to either be their party's nominee or to unseat the incumbent.

In what could be the closest funding race based on reports available at press time, Ms. Driskell, the latest Democrat to face off against Mr. Walberg (R-Tipton), raised $203,698 for the third quarter and $523,610 for the cycle, leaving $435,004 cash on hand.

"Working families, students, and seniors across the 7th District are standing behind our campaign, and we are really proud to be building grassroots momentum from a network of neighbors," Ms. Driskell said in a statement announcing her fundraising. "It's because of their enthusiasm and support that we'll continue to attract the resources necessary to win."

Mr. Walberg raised only $133,160 for the quarter. But he had raised $753,284 so far for the election cycle and had $922,034 in cash on hand.

In the 8th U.S. House District, Ms. Gilbert raised $200,372, all in the third quarter. She had $183,317 left in cash on hand. It was her first report since declaring her candidacy.

Mr. Bishop (R-Rochester) had not filed his reports as of press time. The deadline was 11:59 p.m. Thursday

In the 1st U.S. House District, Jerry Cannon, the Democratic nominee in 2014, appeared to have donors staying away in droves. His first report for his new committee showed he raised only $3,640 and spent nothing. Mr. Cannon created a new campaign committee for his second run and did not show the transfer of any funds from those coffers, having spent the full $1 million he raised.

Former Michigan Democratic Party Chair Lon Johnson, expected to be the frontrunner for the Democratic nomination, reported $350,977, all raised in the latest quarter. Of that, he had $293,265 left in cash.

U.S. Rep. Dan Benishek (R-Crystal Falls) is not seeking re-election and so far no Republicans have stepped up to replace him.

Sen. Tom Casperson (R-Escanaba), one of those named as a possible candidate, has retained an active campaign account from his prior run for the seat and reported raising a net $180 so far for the election cycle (he returned $2,700 in contributions). He showed $12,759 in cash on hand, but $22,570 in debt.

Paul Clements, so far the sole Democrat challenging U.S. Rep. Fred Upton (R-St. Joseph), had $135,374 in cash after raising $154,808 so far toward the election, $151,126 last quarter. He has spent $29,100 toward his second effort to unseat Mr. Upton.

Mr. Upton had not yet filed his reports, but historically has raised substantially more than Mr. Clements is reporting.

In the race to succeed U.S. Rep. Candice Miller (R-Harrison Township), former Sen. Alan Sanborn reported raising just $4,070 for the third quarter and $46,337 overall. That left him $25,851 cash on hand.

Sen. Phil Pavlov (R-Saint Clair), in contrast, raised $57,349 for the quarter and $164,729 total for the cycle toward his effort to succeed Ms. Miller. He reported $126,153 cash on hand.

Detroit City Clerk Janice Winfrey, who is challenging U.S. Rep. John Conyers Jr. (D-Detroit), now the longest-serving member in the U.S. House, brought in $18,840, all in the third quarter. She had $7,900 cash on hand. Ms. Winfrey formed her committee late in the quarter, on September 21, so had little time to raise money before the close of books on September 30.

Mr. Conyers did not report much of a war chest either, but it was still substantially larger at $40,588. He raised $42,997 for the third quarter and $193,322 for the cycle.

Pavlov Introduces Bills To Prohibit Sale Of Fetal Tissue, Parts

Sen. Phil Pavlov is leading the charge in the Senate to prohibit compensation for the distribution or transfer of any portion of an embryo, fetus or neonate obtained as the result of an elective abortion, introducing two bills on the matter on Thursday that were sent to the newly created Senate Oversight Committee.

The bills come amid a controversy over Planned Parenthood charging for the costs of acquiring such tissue.

"The key is we need to protect the unborn in the state of Michigan, and these bills do that," Mr. Pavlov (R-St. Clair) said of SB 564 and SB 565.

The first bill states "a person shall not knowingly financially benefit from or receive any type of compensation for the distribution or transfer of any portion of an embryo, fetus, or neonate including any organs, tissues, or cells that were obtained as the result of an elective abortion."

Senate Majority Leader Arlan Meekhof (R-West Olive), who is one of the 17 Republican co-sponsors to SB 564 and SB 565, the latter of which enacts sentencing guidelines for a violation of the prohibitions in SB 564, deferred questions on the bills to Mr. Pavlov, noting that he has been in numerous conversations with various members of the caucus on the matter.

Asked about that level of prioritization in the Senate Republican caucus, Mr. Pavlov said, "The leader saw it fit to create a special committee to examine the issues of the unborn and protecting the unborn in Michigan. This is all about taking away any financial motivation to sell or traffic these elective abortion procedures."

Planned Parenthood has said repeatedly it does not sell fetal tissue, but only seeks to compensation for the costs of obtaining the tissue, storing it and transporting it.

Indeed, the Senate Oversight Committee where the bills were sent, was created in mid-September, with Sen. Peter MacGregor (R-Rockford) as chair and Senate Majority Floor Leader Mike Kowall (R-White Lake Township) as majority vice chair (See Gongwer Michigan Report, September 17, 2015).

Sen. Tonya Schuitmaker (R-Lawton) and Sen. Jim Stamas (R-Midland) are also on the committee, as well as named co-sponsors to the bills. Sen. Vincent Gregory (D-Southfield) was designated as the lone Democratic member of the committee.

Mr. Pavlov said he could not speak to specific instances of such things happening in Michigan, but pointed to the national controversy related to Planned Parenthood that he said prompted the desire to draft some kind of legislation.

The controversy, of course, happened over the summer when The Center for Medical Progress, an anti-abortion organization, secretly recorded and edited a video of Planned Parenthood's senior director of medical research, Deborah Nucatola, talking about procedural techniques to preserve certain organs that can later be donated for research purposes, which is legal. It would be illegal to sell any tissue.

She also says in the video Planned Parenthood is sensitive about being seen as gaining a profit from these donations, and will charge for shipping and other costs the clinic takes on in the course of making donations.

Planned Parenthood has denied selling organs and charged that the video was heavily edited to give a false impression.

Additionally, earlier this week, Planned Parenthood announced it would no longer accept any reimbursement as part of its fetal tissue donation program, Lori Carpentier, president and CEO of Planned Parenthood for mid and south Michigan, said Thursday.

"So it doesn't change anything that will happen for us," Ms. Carpentier said. "In order to take this off the table as a sticking point for our opponents, we're not going to take reimbursement. And to the extent we have any, we'll find ways to cover those costs ourselves."

More important to her and her organization at this point, she said, is the hope that Mr. Pavlov's legislation doesn't have any effects on the "important medical research that comes as a result of fetal tissue donation."

"I think my concern about this is the Legislature may be dinking around in areas where they are unfamiliar with," she said. "As is commonly the case, legislators put these things together ... don't create specifics and often create limbo positions."

But Mr. Pavlov said he is not sold on someone's word.

"When someone tells you you're not doing something, you require them to prove a negative," he said. "Partial birth abortion has been banned, but we just saw through a series of videos that it's still taking place. We're going to make sure we put an end to it and protect the unborn child."

Asked how the language might affect stem cell research or in vitro fertilization procedures, Mr. Pavlov said he did not think it would affect either.

"I think it's pretty clear. Part of the strength of the bill is its simplicity," he said. How it is proven that a person "knowingly" did so is not defined in the bill, however.

Mr. MacGregor did not immediately return a request for comment on when his committee might take up Mr. Pavlov's legislation, but Mr. Pavlov said he just had a conversation with Mr. MacGregor about the matter on Wednesday when the bill was still on Mr. Pavlov's desk.

Domestic Violence Package Clears House

A father who was found by "clear and convincing" evidence to have raped the mother would be denied visitation or custody under bills passed Thursday by the House that create "sensible" protections for the victims of domestic violence.

The lead bill, HB 4481, passed 101-4, would allow a court, after a fact-finding hearing where evidence presented was deemed clear and convincing, to deny custody and visitation with the child to the father.

"Michigan needs to send a message that we stand with the victims and survivors of domestic violence and rape," Rep. Lisa Posthumus Lyons (R-Alto), sponsor of the bill, said in a statement. "Too often in cases of sexual assault and domestic violence, a rapist will use the threat of seeking custody of the child to intimidate pregnant victims into not pressing criminal charges of the attack. It is unthinkable that we would allow this to occur when we have the ability to provide victims with the protection and peace of mind they need in order to heal."

The other bills in the package passed Thursday were HB 4476 and HB 4477, which passed 104-1 and would revise the service of process in actions appealed to the Supreme Court or Court of Appeals if a court order has been issued to prohibit release of the address of the party being served and make changes to the mediation process if domestic violence was involved, respectively.

HB 4478 passed 96-9 and would allow a personal protection order to include a pet. And HB 4479 passed 103-2 and would treat an assault against a pregnant woman the same as domestic violence in terms of repeated offenses.

EAA Official Pleads To Tax Evasion In Corruption Probe

The Education Achievement Authority has been added to the list of Detroit institutions subject to a Federal Bureau of Investigation corruption inquiry with the guilty plea Thursday of former Mumford High School Principal Kenyetta Wilbourn-Snapp.

The Detroit News reported Thursday that investigators had been looking into the relationship between Ms. Wilbourn-Snapp and at least one of the district's contractors.

The district, designed as part of the Snyder administration's efforts to improve school performance, has been the subject of criticism both for its efforts in that direction and for its administrative operations.

The Detroit Free Press reported Thursday afternoon that Ms. Wilbourn-Snapp had accepted a plea in relation to an investigation into kick-backs she received. The paper said documents showed a possible relationship with Allstate Sales and For-Most Educational Consulting and Training Group.

Sara Wurfel, spokesperson for the Snyder administration, declined to comment on the investigation beyond noting, as did a statement from the EAA, that it was an internal review that uncovered financial discrepancies that pointed to the alleged corruption. State and EAA officials had forwarded that information to federal law enforcement.

"Our office was in full coordination in reporting and bringing to light with appropriate state and federal law enforcement agencies," Ms. Wurfel said in an email response.

The district, created through an interlocal agreement between Detroit Public Schools and Eastern Michigan University, was intended to receive struggling schools from around the state but so far has only 15 Detroit schools.

Former Superintendent of Public Instruction Mike Flanagan had canceled the contract with the EAA to be the sole recipient for any schools taken over by the state for poor performance, in part over concerns raised that the tactics the EAA was employing were not actually improving student achievement.

The district was also slammed for spending on furnishings and travel under its initial chancellor, John Covington.

EAA supporters have been working since early in the last legislative session to codify the EAA to be clear that it had the authority to oversee schools other than in Detroit, but so far have come up short in that effort.

Dems Plan Legislation With Minimum Nurse Staffing Standards

The Michigan Nurses Association on Thursday said a poll commissioned by the group shows 80 percent of voters support having minimum staffing standards for nurses working in the state.

Currently there is no law, but Rep. Jon Hoadley (D-Kalamazoo) and Sen. Rebekah Warren (D-Ann Arbor) are planning to introduce legislation in their respective chambers.

"Michigan residents are saying loud and clear that our registered nurses are being forced to care for too many patients at once," Mr. Hoadley said. "Chronic nurse understaffing jeopardizes the care and safety of people in our hospitals every day. The only real solution is to pass a law that gives nurses enough time to spend with each patient and provide individualized care."

The Safe Patient Care Act the lawmakers plan to introduce includes implementing a staffing plan specific to each unit that adheres to minimum nurse-to-patient ratios based on research and national professional standards; limiting mandatory registered nurse overtime to instances of genuine emergencies; disclosing actual registered nurse staffing levels; and informing patients how to report potential violations of the law.

Rep. Larry Inman (R-Williamsburg) said it is time for a public policy conversation on staffing levels for nurses in the state.

"It's just plain wrong that when you go into the hospital, your nurse could have far too many patients to be safe," he said. "A nurse's workload can literally be a matter of life or death for you or your loved one. This is a case where the government needs to enact reasonable standards to protect all its citizens, and I'm glad to see bipartisan movement toward achieving that."

The poll commissioned by the group also showed 77 percent of voters agree that "the quality of patient care in MI hospitals is suffering because registered nurses are being assigned too many patients per shift." And 44 percent of households with an overnight hospital stay in the past two years believe the quality of care suffered due to nurses having too many patients at one time.

The statewide survey of 600 Michigan voters was commissioned by the Michigan Nurses Association and conducted by telephone (landlines and cell phones) September 8-14 and had a margin of error of plus or minus 4 percentage points, a statement said.

Anderson Robbins Research, a Boston firm, conducted the survey and was chosen because it has worked with both nursing and hospital organizations and Democratic and Republican clients, the group said.

Revenues Mostly Steady In September

State revenues were $30.8 million better than expected in September, but entirely because of a $42.6 million reimbursement the state received from the federal government in home heating credit refunds, a Senate Fiscal Agency report released Thursday showed.

Revenues to the School Aid Fund were $38.3 million more than forecast in May, while revenues to the General Fund were $8 million less than expected.

Through September, revenues to the General Fund are $25.9 million below the May Consensus Revenue Estimating Conference forecast and revenues to the School Aid Fund are $66.9 million below expectations.

September was the first month since January that sales tax revenues exceeded the year-over-year figure for the month from the previous year.

Net income tax revenues were up 11.6 percent from September 2014. Also up from the previous year was the sales tax (3.3 percent), the state education property tax (13 percent) and the Real Estate Transfer Tax (3.1 percent).

Declining from year-ago levels were the Corporate Income Tax (-14.7 percent), the insurance tax (-95.4 percent) and the oil and gas severance tax (-48.5 percent).

Committee Roundup

PROMISE ZONES: The maximum number of eligible entities that may be certified by the Department of Treasury to establish educational promise zones assisting in affording a postsecondary education would increase from 10 to 15 under legislation reported by the Senate Economic Development and International Investment Committee Thursday.

SB 539 and SB 540 would also require a promise zone development plan to include provisions regarding the assessment and reporting of student performance, as well as allow Treasury to adjust the calculation of captured State Education Tax revenue if the boundaries of a promise zone were changed by a merger or other circumstance.

The bill also requires the property and assets of a dissolved promise zone authority to be used solely for the purposes of promoting access to postsecondary education, but the committee adopted an S-

2 substitute to SB 539 that includes "trigger language" regarding such dissolutions, one legislative aide told the committee. In it, a Promise Zone Development Plan must be submitted to Treasury within five years of a municipality deciding to have such a zone, and once that zone is granted by the state, the municipality must begin awarding scholarships within two years.

Language was also added to ensure Promise Zones include in their development plans how they'll track data on students.

The bills were unanimously reported to the full Senate for consideration.

Capital Notebook: Former President Clinton To Speak At MSU

Former President Bill Clinton is the first recipient of the Spartan Statesmanship Award for Distinguished Public Service and will be the keynote speaker at the Governor Jim Blanchard Public Service Forum on November 18 at Michigan State University.

Mr. Blanchard and his wife, Janet, donated $1 million for the program.

"The goal of this lecture series is to provide generations of students, faculty and people in the MSU community with the opportunity to hear and learn from national and international political leaders and others," Mr. Blanchard said in a statement. "(Mr. Clinton's) public service in politics, followed by his excellent work through the Clinton Foundation, is exactly the type of dedication and inspiring story we hoped to bring through the Blanchard Forum."

Mr. Blanchard was one of Mr. Clinton's most enthusiastic supporters when the then-Arkansas governor ran for president in 1992. After Mr. Clinton won, he named Mr. Blanchard the U.S. ambassador to Canada.

The Department of Political Science in MSU's College of Social Science administers the Blanchard Forum and statesmanship award.

The event will be held at the Kellogg Hotel and Conference Center and will serve as a fundraiser for the program, MSU said in a statement, with proceeds paying for student attendance at this event and future ones.

DEBANO DEPARTS RESTAURANTS ASSOCIATION: Brian DeBano, the president and CEO of the Michigan Restaurants Association, is leaving the organization after four years. A statement from the association said he was leaving to pursue future ventures but did not specify what those would be. Justin Winslow, the association's vice president of government affairs, will serve as interim president and CEO.

"Brian has left the MRA in great shape and for that we sincerely thank him," MRA Board of Directors Chairman Ken Miller said in a statement. "Under his leadership, the association is financially and operationally sound and our strong reputation remains intact. I have no doubt he will be successful in his future ventures."

TALBOT GETS FULL TERM AS CHIEF APPELLATE JUDGE: Court of Appeals Chief Judge Michael Talbot will keep the chief judge title through 2016, under a Supreme Court order released this week. The court named Mr. Talbot to the post in January to fill the remaining year of the term begun by then-Chief Judge William Murphy.

GROUP SUPPORTING ENERGY LEGISLATION STARTS COUNTDOWN CLOCK: Citizens for Michigan's Energy Future, a group that supports energy legislation backed by the chairs of the House and Senate energy committees, has started a "countdown clock" to mark when some coal-fired plants will be shuttered next year. The site also is designed to let visitors urge legislators to support SB 437 and SB 438 as well as HB 4297 and HB 4298.

"To account for growing capacity concerns, Michigan must responsibly replace the power we will lose due to these plant closures," said Kelly Rossman-McKinney, spokeswoman for Citizens for Michigan's Energy Future.

WORKFORCE DEVELOPMENT AGENCY DIRECTOR LEAVING: Michigan Workforce Development Agency Director Christine Quinn is resigning from her position to become regional administrator of the U.S. Department of Labor, Employment and Training, the state's Talent Investment Agency announced Thursday.

She will be headquartered at the federal department's regional office in Chicago and assumes her new duties on November 30.

Ms. Quinn will manage a team that oversees a 10-state region including Michigan. The regional office ensures that employment and training programs at the state level reflect the political and socio-economic conditions that impact state and local economies.

"Michigan has been fortunate to have someone of Christine's caliber spearheading these critical workforce development initiatives," said TIA Director Stephanie Comai, in a statement. "She has a genuine passion for helping workers to succeed in this changing economy and for helping employers to meet their talent needs. On behalf of our entire agency, I wish her all the best."

Stephanie Beckhorn, who currently serves as director of programs for the Workforce Development Agency, was named acting director.

COLBECK, HERTEL TO DEBATE ROAD FUNDING: After issuing a challenge to his fellow legislators in either chamber to debate him on why a tax increase is necessary to help pay for the state's ailing infrastructure, Sen. Patrick Colbeck (R-Canton Township) has found acceptance to such an invitation from Sen. Curtis Hertel Jr. (D-East Lansing).

The debate is to take place on Tuesday, October 20, between 1:45 and 2:45 p.m., the location to be determined but for sure in Lansing, according to a statement from Mr. Colbeck's office.

Doors are to open at 1:30 p.m., Mr. Colbeck's office said.

Newsmaker Friday: Price Says Third Grade Reading Took Over Her Heart

The process leading up to the vote on two separate bills related to education policy was "intense," Rep. Amanda Price, who led the charge on legislation to get third-graders reading at grade level and another outlining educator evaluations in the state, told Gongwer News Service.

"I think maybe I can sleep now," Ms. Price said Friday. The House voted Thursday HB 4822, which would set up interventions for students struggling with reading in their early elementary grades and would also retain students if they are not reading proficiently at the end of third grade.

The bill was more controversial than SB 103, outlining educator evaluations, and it took two long session days this week before the third-grade reading bill had enough votes to eventually pass the House 57-48.

"It was a heavy lift," Ms. Price said.

Though a similar bill did come up last term on reading proficiency, it never got enough traction for the full House to bring it up on the floor.

But this term, Governor Rick Snyder also made it a priority. A work group was put together with various lawmakers and stakeholders who met for three hours every Thursday during the summer, Ms. Price said.

"That process was very intense," Ms. Price said.

Ms. Price, during her floor speech on the bill Thursday, said she wouldn't consider herself "fire-y," but when talking with stakeholders on the third grade reading bill, she said it wasn't difficult for her to hold her ground on ideas she thought would harm the legislation.

"It's hard for me not to get fired up about this though," she said. "Every so often there is one piece of legislation that takes over your heart. For me it is this bill. I think it is likely because I love to read so much and I don't want any child to be deprived of that ability."

Ms. Price said her passion originated with hearing the statistics of how many students in the state were not reading proficiently before entering the fourth grade. Using the state assessment, it's 30 percent of kids, she said. But when looking at a more rigorous national assessment, it's almost 70 percent.

Ms. Price said she used to have conversations with former Rep. Joe Haveman about how the state could decrease its prison population, and both agreed it started at early childhood.

"If you start giving children a better education ... then they will have more options in life," she said.

The bill began as a bipartisan effort with Democrats involved in the work group and Rep. Adam Zemke (D-Ann Arbor), the minority vice chair on the Education Committee, and House Minority Leader Tim Greimel (D-Auburn Hills) co-sponsors on the bill.

However, Democrats ended up offering a variety of amendments that were not adopted to the bill, and the bill passed with only three Democrats voting in support. Mr. Zemke and Mr. Greimel removed their names from the bill.

"I will just be honest," Ms. Price said of losing the Democratic support. "I was very disappointed."

Ms. Price said it is not a partisan issue, but there was a disagreement on how to get increased reading proficiency in the state.

"I don't think anyone disagrees our children's reading scores are too low," she said.

Ms. Price said the retention portion of the bill got too much attention. She said the intervention pieces in the bill are the key. But last term, instead of being in a single bill, the legislation was a package of two. One held the retention portion and the other held the interventions.

Ms. Price said she believes that led to a focus on the retention last term and this one.

"Truly, I do not want to retain any kids," she said.

On the Senate side, Ms. Price said she believes Sen. Phil Pavlov (R-St. Clair), chair of the Senate Education Committee, is on board with the bill. She said he was on the work group as well.

"I have every reason to believe it will pass in the Senate," she said.

Another bill that passed this week, SB 103, which outlines educator evaluations in the state, began dramatically but eventually passed with relative ease in the House.

"If you had asked me about that three months ago, I would have (been surprised)," Ms. Price said of the bill passing drama-free.

But Ms. Price said the committee worked hard with stakeholders to get a final product out of committee.

"We were pretty confident when it came out of the committee it would move forward easily," she said.

On what's next for the Education Committee, Ms. Price said Mr. Zemke and Rep. Daniela Garcia (R-Holland), the vice chair of the committee, have been working in a group discussing teacher preparedness.

She also said a debate on how to move forward with Detroit Public Schools is also coming to the committee.

Mr. Snyder has advocated getting state funds help pay off DPS debt and developing a new district in the city.

Ms. Price said she understands where the governor is coming from with his proposal, but also knows her caucus will be hesitant because of the money involved.

She also said she wants something sustainable put in place.

"I am very concerned that whatever is put in place is sustainable and in 10 years we won't be right back here," she said. "That means for me financial stability and academic improvement."

Presumptive Parole Has Uphill Battle In Senate

Senate Majority Leader Arlan Meekhof was not shy earlier this week about the fact that his caucus has numerous concerns and questions about a bill allowing presumptive parole for inmates reaching their earliest release date, and responses from several members of that caucus on Friday only further illustrate the bill is in trouble in the chamber.

"I did not hear one person pushing this at all, and I think it's very telling this wasn't referred to Judiciary committee or the corrections budget (subcommittee) where it should be," Sen. Tonya Schuitmaker (R-Lawton) said of general caucus support or opposition to HB 4138.

Indeed, when the House passed the bill earlier this month, Mr. Meekhof sent it to the Senate Government Operations Committee, which tends to serve either as a bill graveyard or a place where very controversial legislation that needs a longer period of time to review goes.

Of the prospects of this bill in particular, Senate Majority Floor Leader Mike Kowall (R-White Lake Township) said it was likely the latter. Mr. Kowall said he does not himself have a position on the bill as it was sent over.

"Right now I'm listening to all sides," he said. "There's concerns, rightfully so, with prosecutors and sheriffs. It's a long way from being done."

Having run a small police department himself, Mr. Kowall said, he shares the concerns of some on whether those who would be paroled are still a danger to society and whether they were prior to being locked up.

"It's all the typical concerns over what type of parolees will be looked at to let out, the danger to society, (and) are we letting out people we're afraid of or people we're simply mad at," Mr. Kowall said. "It's all the same discussions that have been going on in the House and it's just going to take a while."

Sen. John Proos (R-St. Joseph), chair of the Senate Appropriations Corrections Subcommittee, said all the conversations are exactly what need to be had for meaningful reform, though. He said his colleagues have been interested in whether HB 4138 would indeed show savings to the cost of corrections, how much, and whether it begins to change the way the department operates "for the benefit of the taxpayers and public safety."

"I have a lot of questions as to what the intent of the bill is and whether or not the intent matches the goals and objectives. If the intent is to save us money, I'm not sure this gets us to the kind of savings we want," he said. "If the intent is to provide the kind of services necessary to reintegrate offenders into Michigan society after they've served their time, I'm not sure this accomplishes that goal either."

Mr. Meekhof (R-West Olive) earlier this week pointed to Mr. Proos as being one of the lead legislators on the matter as the Senate considers the legislation and other types of Corrections reform. When asked about those alternatives, Mr. Proos listed numerous options, including:

- Continuing investment in law enforcement as the deterrent and as the public safety factor;
- Continuing investment in things like the Swift and Sure program, as well as the pilot program Parole Sanction Certainty (which follow the same model as Swift and Sure on the probation side to ensure parolees are receiving the kind of services they need to prevent them from becoming repeat offenders, he said); and
- A continued effort to ensure the cost structure in the Department of Corrections is "closely aligned with private sector costs so as to get the best taxpayer value possible," he said.

In fact, those issues are so central to this matter, Mr. Proos said, that he expects to have a hearing to discuss prisoner education, the positives and negatives of that expenditure, and whether it's meeting present-day job needs in various communities.

"After all, every three-to-four years, we parole the entire population of the Department of Corrections," he said. "If the folks are not prepared for parole, the question should be asked, why aren't they?"

He continued, "You have to peel away all the misinformation that exists on all sides of the issues and try to get to the root cause and the root problem. This isn't just a discussion about finances, it's not just a discussion about criminals, it has to be a more comprehensive and broad conversation about corrections, the judiciary and law enforcement and our entire criminal justice system."

Of the House plan, he said it calls into question "the most salient question about parole" in that some offenders are not as ready as others to go before the Parole Board before their earliest release date.

But Ms. Schuitmaker, a member of the Senate Judiciary Committee who also served on the House committee during her time there, said the rate at which Michigan already paroles most of its prisoners is exactly why the legislation isn't necessary.

"We've done a lot in probation and swift and sure ... to try to rehabilitate people or hold them accountable to break the cycle of crime," she said. "I think the statistics don't bear it out and most people are let out within their first year of their earliest release date.

"I think also, we've had two reports from (Council of State Governments) come in and dispel the myth that we have all these people in prison that shouldn't be there," Ms. Schuitmaker said. "I think when you take a look at how we rank comparatively, we send fewer people initially to prison than surrounding states and that's why you see on the back-end that we keep more people. Michigan does a good job keeping people with substance abuse problems out of prison."

And the cost savings are "minimal" at best, she said.

As to the chance the bill might have in the Senate, especially in the immediate future, Mr. Proos said his hope is simply that the bill takes the time necessary for such a monumental change.

"We'll look at the positives and negatives of the House package and take that into account as it relates to comprehensive reform and criminal justice," he said. "I commend the House for working on a package that has opened the door to real conversations (about Corrections)."

EPA Creates Drinking Water Task Force For Flint

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency announced Friday it had developed a Flint Safe Drinking Water Task Force to provide technical assistance to the city and the Department of Environmental Quality as they work through the water issues in the city.

The task force will be led by Region 5 Deputy Regional Administrator Susan Hedman and will assist with developing and implementing a plan to secure water quality, including measures to optimize corrosion control, it said. Task force members will also be available for consultation purposes, as well as to coordinate, as necessary, with federal, state and local public health agencies to assist with protection of public health.

"EPA is committed to working with our state and local partners to ensure a safe and reliable drinking water supply for the residents of Flint, Michigan," Ms. Hedman said in a statement. "The formation of this task force continues our commitment to providing technical assistance to the city of Flint and the state of Michigan."

The task force is intended to provide technical guidance for both the coming switch back to the Detroit Water and Sewerage System and, once it is completed, to the new pipeline from Lake Huron by the Karegnondi Water Authority. The various officials and experts are intended to be available on-site in Flint.

Flint Mayor Dayne Walling said the switch back to Detroit water was expected to be completed by 5 p.m. Friday, earlier than expected.

The DEQ welcomed the additional assistance, spokesperson Brad Wurfel said. "We are glad to have the continued technical support and counsel from our federal partners," he said." We have been working closely with the U.S. EPA on the challenges in Flint, including its added presence on the city's technical advisory and the Governor's 10-point plan. This is welcome news and we anticipate it will help us implement the Governor's strategy."

Elected officials from the region also hailed the EPA's assistance.

U.S. Rep. Dan Kildee (D-Flint) said he had requested the EPA send in advisors.

"I welcome the EPA's announcement today that they'll be sending technical advisors to Flint to assist the city and MDEQ on site with ensuring the safety of Flint's water," Mr. Kildee said in a statement. "The task force is a result of letters and phone calls over the past week with Administrator McCarthy and the EPA. In those communications, I repeatedly requested that the EPA send technical advisors to Flint to help with the transition of water sources. I am pleased to see that within a week the EPA has responded positively to my request, and I'm hopeful that this announcement is a step forward for the future of Flint's water."

U.S. Sen. Gary Peters (D-Bloomfield Township) also took some credit for the additional assistance being lent to Flint.

"All Michiganders deserve access to safe and clean drinking water, and the increased lead levels found in the Flint water system are simply unacceptable. I personally raised this issue with EPA Administrator McCarthy and have called on the EPA to provide the necessary resources and technical expertise to help ensure the water system is safe for drinking, cooking and bathing," Mr. Peters said in a statement. "All levels of government need to work together to prevent this type of situation from ever happening again, and the Flint Safe Drinking Water Task Force is a good first step."

Senate Minority Leader Jim Ananich (D-Flint) was also pleased to hear the news.

"The EPA plays an important role in managing Flint's crisis recovery. We should work closely with them and consider whether they may be able to offer additional support," Senate Minority Leader Jim Ananich (D-Flint) said. "I also hope the EPA will be able to help us determine what happened and provide us with a solid oversight framework going forward. It's crucial that we take steps to ensure this never happens again."

The Task Force will be comprised of scientists and technical experts from the EPA Region 5 office in Chicago, the National Risk Management Research Lab in Cincinnati and the EPA drinking water program. In addition, EPA will ask Governor Rick Snyder to designate a DEQ official and the Mayor of Flint to designate a city official to serve as points of contact for the Task Force, the EPA said.

Bishop Shows Slight Lead Over Gilbert In Funds With All Reports In

U.S. Rep. Mike Bishop was able to outraise Democratic challenger Melissa Gilbert, but not by much, his quarterly campaign finance report showed.

Mr. Bishop (R-Rochester) raised $213,962 for the quarter compared to the $200,372 Ms. Gilbert raised (See Gongwer Michigan Report, October 15, 2015). But his $396,776 in cash gave him a substantial funding head start in the race. He has raised $529,352 total for the cycle. He also brought in $2,975 total for the cycle from other authorized funds.

He did, though, still have $31,872 in debt.

Paul Mitchell is leading the race to succeed U.S. Rep. Candice Miller (R-Harrison Township), at least based on funding, reporting $328,025 raised in his first quarter in the race. He had $363,758 cash on hand but also had a $250,000 loan from himself as part of those funds.

Ms. Miller, as she wound down her campaign, still had $739,721 in cash, though she raised nothing for the quarter and only $7,675 for the cycle.

Democrat Paul Clements does have a way to go to catch U.S. Rep. Fred Upton (R-St. Joseph) on fundraising. Mr. Upton reported collecting $235,000 for the quarter and $1.28 million so far for the cycle. He had $829,168 in cash.

Among his total funding, Mr. Upton had $67,493 for the quarter and $89,790 for the cycle from other authorized committees.

U.S. Rep. Dan Benishek (R-Crystal Falls), had he chosen to run, would have been substantially behind his likely Democratic challenger, at least in current fundraising. Mr. Benishek reported raising $119,903 for the quarter and $633,467 for the cycle. He showed $446,341 cash on hand, which was more than Lon Johnson, but still had outstanding debts of $89,500.

SUBSCRIBERS PLEASE NOTE: U.S. Rep. Tim Walberg (R-Tipton) slightly outraised challenger Rep. Gretchen Driskell (D-Saline) for the quarter. In addition to the $133,160 his campaign raised in contributions for the quarter, his leadership fund, the Walberg Victory Fund, transferred $77,970 to his campaign committee. That fund provided him $93,844 in total for the cycle. Those receipts were included in his $922,034 in cash on hand reported Thursday.

Supreme Court Vacates Appellate Ruling On MCCA, FOIA

The Supreme Court in a unanimous order has vacated a Court of Appeals ruling holding that the Michigan Catastrophic Claims Association is not subject to the Freedom of Information Act and remanded the case to the appellate court for further action.

Specifically, the Supreme Court vacated the conclusion of the Court of Appeals that the establishment of the MCCA did not violate Article IV, Section 25 of the Constitution, which requires the section or sections of any act altered or amended by a bill to be re-enacted and published at length.

The MCCA statute specifically exempts the records of the association from being public, but the Legislature did not also amend the FOIA to exempt MCCA records.

In its order regarding CPAN v. Michigan Catastrophic Claims Association (SC Docket No. 150001), the Supreme Court said the Court of Appeals on remand should rule on an issue it left untouched in its first ruling - whether the MCCA is a public body. If it is a public body, then it should again decide whether the statute creating it violated the Constitution's requirement that all statutes amended should be re-enacted and published.

If it is not a public body, then the entire issue is moot because then the MCCA would not fall under the jurisdiction of the FOIA.

The Coalition Protecting Auto No-Fault and others have urged the opening up of MCCA records. Insurers, which run the MCCA, have resisted the change.

The Supreme Court held arguments Tuesday on whether to grant leave to appeal (See Gongwer Michigan Report, October 13, 2015).

Major points of discussion during those arguments were the question of whether the MCCA is a public body and whether the Legislature erred in not amending the Freedom of Information Act.

Attorneys for the two sides vigorously disagreed on whether the MCCA is a public body with CPAN contending it is and the MCCA arguing it is not.

In a statement, CPAN general counsel George Sinas said he expected CPAN to prevail on the question of whether the MCCA is a public body.

"When the Michigan Legislature publicly creates such entities through its legislative power, the entity created should be considered a 'public body' and therefore be subject to FOIA," he said. "This allows that all interested citizens who impacted by that entity will have the ability to learn the truth about the way it operates."

Snyder Names Task Force To Draft Special Education Changes

Governor Rick Snyder announced Friday a new task force to turn the comments Lt. Governor Brian Calley collected over the summer on special education into new policy recommendations on special education.

Mr. Calley started his listening tour on special education at about the same time the Department of Education was seeing substantial backlash to a package of administrative rules changes that opponents said would give more power to school districts to limit or deny services.

Among the key recommendations Mr. Calley collected from his public meetings and online surveys was stronger language controlling how districts use restraint and seclusion to control behavior.

He had asked the State Board of Education, when he presented his findings to that body (See Gongwer Michigan Report, September 8, 2015), for help developing a dispute resolution process.

Mr. Snyder is seeking quick work from the task force, asking for a final report before the end of the year.

"This group will help us remain focused on putting Michigan's special needs children and their families front-and-center when considering reforms to this vital component in our educational system," Mr. Snyder said.

In addition to Mr. Calley, who will chair the panel, the task force includes education board members Michelle Fecteau (D-Detroit) and Eileen Weiser (R-Ann Arbor).

Legislators on the panel include Sen. Phil Pavlov (R-Saint Clair), Sen. Hoon-Yung Hopgood (D-Taylor), Rep. Jim Tedder (R-Clarkston) and Rep. Frank Liberati (D-Allen Park).

Karen McPhee, Mr. Snyder's education adviser, as well as Walled Lake Schools elementary teacher Melody Arabo, who was Michigan Teacher of the Year for 2014-15 will also participate, as will Mary Bouwense, president of the Grand Rapids Education Association and a special education teacher; Elmer Cerano, executive director of Michigan Protection and Advocacy Service; Teri Chapman, director of the Department of Education Office of Special Education; Diane Heinzelman director of special education for Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District and chair of the Michigan Autism Council; Laura Jones, founder of Special Education Advocacy and Development; Scott Koenigsknecht, superintendent of the Ingham Intermediate School District; and Marcie Lipsitt, founder of Michigan Alliance for Special Education.

Appeals Court Upholds Registry For New Non-Sex Convictions

The requirement, added in 2011, that those who have a prior criminal sexual conduct conviction who commit a new felony have to register as sex offenders is a recidivist law and so is constitutional, the Court of Appeals said in a case released Friday.

Anthony Tucker, who was required to register after pleading guilty to felonious assault and domestic violence charges, argued the law was unconstitutional because it added to the penalty of his prior offense. He had been released from probation for a 1990 assault with intent to commit criminal sexual conduct conviction before the registry took effect in October 1995.

Mr. Tucker argued the new provision requiring him to register was an ex post facto addition to that earlier charge.

The court, in a per curiam published decision signed by Judge Joel Hoekstra, Judge Kathleen Jansen and Judge Patrick Meter (People v. Tucker, COA docket No. 322151), found the law met the standards for a recidivist statute.

"Defendant's registration was not required until he committed another felony in 2013," the court said. "His 1990 conviction was used to enhance the consequences of his 2013 felony, which was committed after the effective date of the statute."

To be considered ex post facto, the law would have had to require Mr. Tucker to register immediately on its effective date based on his prior conviction, the court said.

The court also rejected Mr. Tucker's argument that the prohibition on him being in school safety zones and the requirement that he register in person were cruel and unusual punishment. The court, citing a variety of prior cases, found the provisions were not punishment.

CONDOMINIUM OWNERS: Residents of a condominium are on their own land and so cannot sue for slip and fall injuries, the court said (Francescutti v. Fox Chase Condominium Association, COA docket No. 323111).

Michael Francescutti sued after such a fall, arguing the association was negligent for not keeping the snow and ice from the walks. The association countered that it was an open and obvious hazard.

Judge David Sawyer, joined by Judge Elizabeth Gleicher and Judge William Murphy, said the association owed Mr. Francescutti no duty as a lessor because it was not. He, as a unit owner, was a co-owner of the common area where he fell.

"Defendant is not leasing the common areas to plaintiff under a lease and, therefore, it is not a 'lessor'," Mr. Sawyer said.

Nor, because he is a co-owner, is he an invitee or a licensee owed any duty of care by the association, Mr. Sawyer said.

Campaign Notes

FARM BUREAU ENDORSES WHITEFORD: The Michigan Farm Bureau AgriPAC has endorsed Rep. Mary Whiteford of Allegan in the 80th House District special election.

Ms. Whiteford is up against seven other Republicans in the special election primary for the seat, which was vacated when former Rep. Cindy Gamrat was expelled. Ms. Gamrat is also running for re-election.

The Farm Bureau also endorsed Ms. Whiteford in her 2014 bid.

Capital Notebook: Court Again Continues Hearing In State, HP Case

Kent Circuit Judge Christopher Yates continued the hearing held Friday on the state's request for a preliminary injunction ordering Hewlett Packard to turn over the source code for the Business Application Modernization project for the Department of State and assist the department with an orderly transition following the state's termination of HP's contract.

Department spokesperson Gisgie Davila Gendreau said the two sides have agreed on a transition plan and that HP agreed to provide the source code by Monday until the judge rules on the state's request.

The hearing will continue November 2.

TOURISM SOCIAL MEDIA WORKSHOP RFP: Travel Michigan has issued a request for proposals for a contractor to create a series of regional workshops and materials to educate Michigan's travel industry on utilizing social media to promote their destinations and better engage with Pure Michigan.

The RFP seeks a contractor to educate members of the state's tourism industry on the latest social media strategies, trends and best practices; organize and host a series of regional, in-person workshops and develop a Social Media Tourism Toolkit; create and maintain a social media Resource Library and provide industry members with a self-assessment workbook that will allow them to audit their social media efforts and presence.

Application questions will be due via email by 3 p.m. Eastern Time on October 22, 2015, a q-and-a posted to the Michigan Economic Development Corporation website on October 28 and electronic proposal submissions due by 3 p.m. on November 4, 2015.

The complete RFP can be viewed online at http://www.michiganbusiness.org/public-notices-rfps/

BONE MARROW STANDARDS: The Certificate of Need Commission announced Friday that the members of its Bone Marrow Transplant Standards Advisory Committee had been posted on its website.

MIRS BREAKING NEWS: DEQ Staff 'Made A Mistake' In Dealing With Flint Water, Director Says -- 10:22 a.m.

http://www.mirsnews.com/alert.php?alert_id=2112

Michigan Department of Environmental Quality (DEQ) Director Dan WYANT today admitted staffers in his department mishandled the city of Flint's water situation, pointing to departmental issues with experience and protocol in corrosion control efforts.

Wyant said in a statement that staff used a federal protocol they believed was appropriate. Those testing steps "would have been correct for a city less than 50,000 people, but not for a city of nearly 100,000," he said.

In response to that finding, DEQ Chief Deputy Jim SYGO was named the interim chief of the department's Office of Drinking Water and Municipal Assistance.

Wyant said he was convinced the staff involved in the program believed they were doing their job right, and that the state took appropriate steps once it became clear there could be a health threat to Flint residents.

"We are now embarked on an unprecedented effort to safeguard Flint residents and families with near-term, intermediate and long-term actions to protect and educate city residents," he said. "We will learn from this. We will make necessary changes to see to it that our program becomes a national leader in public health protection."

In addition to the staffing change, Gov. Rick SNYDER has reportedly called for an independent, third party after-action review. The department is also working with the federal government and is "committed to being part of the U.S. EPA's effort to strengthen its Lead and Copper Rule," Wyant said.

"All who brought this issue to the department deserve credit for bringing it forward," he added. "Lead is a serious issue, particularly for young people, and we take it seriously."

DPS, Debt Rising, At Risk Of Default Without State Action, Snyder Says

It will take $715 million from the state over 10 years to extract public education in Detroit from the debt the Detroit Public Schools has piled up, as well as putting together a new governance structure, Governor Rick Snyder said Monday.

Mr. Snyder unveiled a slightly revised plan to overhaul K-12 public education in Detroit from the one he announced in April, and as was the case then, the proposal faces major challenges in clearing the Legislature. Mr. Snyder said he wants legislative approval by the end of the year to ensure the new structure is ready to launch with the start of the district's next fiscal year in July. He said he anticipated formal introduction of the legislation in about a week.

There were two big differences in the proposal: a voluntary instead of mandatory common enrollment system for both charter and traditional public schools in the city, and a bigger financial ask of the Legislature.

Pegged at $483 million in April, DPS debt is now at $515 million as a result of spending exceeding revenues. Mr. Snyder said the new Detroit district he would recommend to take over running DPS classrooms needs another $100 million for investments and working capital, and then another $100 million to cover operating losses once the district's 2016-17 fiscal year begins July 1, 2016, that are the result of declining enrollment and the need to find cost savings.

Under Mr. Snyder's plan, the district's $715 million in debt would stay with the old district and the 18-mill tax on all property other than principal residences in the district would go toward paying down the debt. The millage raises $70 million a year, so it would take 10 years to pay off the debt, Mr. Snyder said.

The catch is the 18 mills, like all school districts, goes to the state School Aid Fund, so the state would have to make up those funds.

Without state intervention, DPS could default on its debt as soon as February, Snyder press secretary Sara Wurfel said. Mr. Snyder said the state would have to cover Detroit Public Schools' debt and retiree benefits should the district fall into bankruptcy, and that would cost all school districts much more than $715 million, describing that burden as "billions."

Mr. Snyder said he hoped the Legislature could come together to support the plan much as it did to bring the city of Detroit's government out of bankruptcy.

"Isn't this important to help the kids of Detroit? We're all Michiganders," he said. "Just like we did with the Grand Bargain, we recognized that there's benefit in helping one another when someone has issues. Look at the benefit to the city of Detroit today, how it's helping the whole state of Michigan by its comeback in terms of perception and business development."

The major components of the plan are the same as what Mr. Snyder proposed in April.

A Detroit Education Commission, appointed by the governor and Detroit mayor, would be established and in charge of hiring a chief education officer. That official would operate a common enrollment system encompassing DPS schools, charter schools and the Education Achievement Authority schools, but in the biggest change from the April plan, it would be voluntary to participate.

Charter schools had criticized the April plan's lumping them in with DPS.

The chief education officer would have the authority to close any school for low performance.

The current Detroit school board would remain with the old school district that only is in charge of paying down debt. A new school board would be created for the new district, jointly appointed by the governor and the mayor but eventually fully elected by Detroit voters by 2021.

In a new piece from the April plan, the city's Financial Review Commission, created as part of the Grand Bargain to bring the city out of bankruptcy, would oversee the district's finances until the debt is repaid. It would have a slightly different membership that does not include city government-specific appointees.

Despite the loss of $70 million a year for 10 years for the School Aid Fund, Mr. Snyder said projected growth in School Aid Fund revenues means that helping reconstruct public education in Detroit will not lead to cuts for other school districts' funding. He said he still anticipated increasing funding to all school districts.

"The amount of that could be somewhat less than it would be, but again, there will be no cuts," he said.

The final plan could look much different than what Mr. Snyder has outlined. He, and others, said bill drafting continues, and top Republicans said it would be a big lift. Additionally, Detroit Democrats raised concerns about returning control of the schools to an elected school board.

Detroit Public Schools has been run by a governor-appointed emergency manager since 2009, with its school board reduced to virtually no role.

Several Detroit Democrats, in a joint statement, said there were some positive aspects to the plan, but concerning pieces as well. They focused on the need for academic improvement and local control.

"The Detroit Caucus and I are committed to finding a solution to improve our Detroit Public Schools so that we can find solutions to improve Detroit's schools," said Rep. Brian Banks (D-Detroit), the Detroit Caucus chair. "The state has controlled DPS for many years, and it has been a failure. We have to find a better way, and we believe that way lies through local control. We look forward to working with all stakeholders to address all of the issues surrounding DPS."

LEGISLATIVE ACTION: The legislation is expected to start in the Senate. Sen. Goeff Hansen (R-Hart), the chair of the Senate K-12, School Aid and Education Appropriations Subcommittee, said he will sponsor some components of the package.

Mr. Hansen said he did not want to discuss specifics in the plan because work continues to develop the legislation, even on the question of whether $715 million is the amount of money the state needs to address. As to Mr. Snyder's goal of passing the legislation before the end of the year, Mr. Hansen hesitated.

"We need to make sure it gets done right," he said. "I'm not going to set an artificial timetable."

But Mr. Hansen also said completing the legislation by the end of the year would be good "because of the complexity of it and the time it would need to get instituted."

Amber McCann, spokesperson for Senate Majority Leader Arlan Meekhof (R-West Olive), said the Senate Republican Caucus is eager to review the details of the plan. The $70 million a year for 10 years is "going to be quite a lift," Ms. McCann said.

"It's a big commitment. It's a long-term commitment," she said.

As to the end of the year timetable, Ms. McCann said it is ambitious, but not out of the question.

Rep. Tim Kelly (R-Saginaw Township), the House Appropriations K-12 School Aid Subcommittee chair who called Mr. Snyder's April plan inadequate, sounded the same message Monday.

"I think this is just something that's going to require a little more imagination and a lot more boldness than this," he said. "I think the whole idea of replacing one command and control edifice for another isn't going to get the job done."

Gideon D'Assandro, spokesperson for House Speaker Kevin Cotter (R-Mount Pleasant), said Mr. Cotter's comments on the April plan still stand.

In those comments, Mr. Cotter called for "no raids" on the School Aid Fund. He said that fund exists to pay for education for all Michigan pupils, not to pay off the legacy debt of one district.

Until bills are introduced, it is not possible to say whether the Legislature could complete action on them this year, Mr. D'Assandro said.

As to how House Republicans would react to the $715 million figure, Mr. D'Assandro said, "I think everybody knew there was a big problem there and everybody knew it was going to be a pretty substantial fix that was needed."

TEPID REACTIONS: Like the first plan, reaction was tepid. The American Federation of Teachers-Michigan, which represents Detroit teachers, said the plan tends toward too much state control.

Charter school groups had a mixed reaction.

"Based on what we've seen, we have concerns with any plan that takes decisions out of the hands of parents and puts them in the hands of a single, politically appointed person," Dan Quisenberry, president of the Michigan Association of Public School Academies, said in a statement. "We need to raise student achievement in Detroit and solve DPS's financial situation, and from what we've seen and heard, this proposal does neither. We look forward to seeing the legislation that comes out of this, and having the charter school community continue being an active part of the discussion."

Jared Burkhart, executive director of the Michigan Council of Charter School Authorizers, said only that the organization was happy to see Mr. Snyder's interest in a system of "robust accountability" in Detroit and looked forward to working with the governor and legislators on the issue.

Mistakes In Flint Water Change Mean Leadership Change At DEQ

Department of Environmental Quality officials failed to follow proper treatment and testing protocols when Flint moved from the Detroit water system to drawing from the Flint River and took too long to fix the problem once they discovered their error.

Environmental Quality Director Dan Wyant said his staff in the Office of Drinking Water and Municipal Assistance thought they were using the right protocols in testing Flint water, but he removed the head of that office in the wake of Governor Rick Snyder calling for an independent review of the state's actions in the situation.

But legislators from the region, and a water quality expert who has helped to test some of the Flint water, chastised state and federal regulators involved for trying only to preserve their own reputations when trouble with the water system began to emerge.

Mr. Wyant said DEQ staff made honest mistakes in how they handled the water source switch.

"It recently has become clear that our drinking water program staff made a mistake while working with the city of Flint. Simply stated, staff employed a federal protocol they believed was appropriate, and it was not," Mr. Wyant said in a statement announcing he had appointed Jim Sygo as interim head of the drinking water office. "The water testing steps followed would have been correct for a city less than 50,000 people, but not for a city of nearly 100,000."

Liane Smith, the former head of the drinking water office, has been reassigned within the department.

"It's an issue of leadership going forward given that this is a very difficult issue, and it's an issue of experience with corrosion controls and a recognition that we needed stronger leadership in that role to address both of those," Mr. Wyant told Gongwer News Service.

"Jim has more leadership experience - and this issue is going to require leadership - and we will identify corrosion control expertise that we will bring to the table," he said.

Mr. Wyant said Ms. Smith would remain with the department and be given other duties "as assigned", but also that her long-term duties in the department could depend on the outcome of the third-party after-action review.

Mr. Sygo will lead the office temporarily, with a national search planned to find a new director.

Mr. Wyant said he would also be reviewing his own connections with his management staff.

"I do have to look at my own policies to be sure I've got a mechanism to identify these issues and flag them sooner," he said.

But he said the issue in Flint is being addressed now. "We feel we have an action plan in place that addresses lead exposure both the long term, intermediate and short term," he said.

Mr. Wyant said his staff apparently did not have the experience with corrosion control needed to know how to properly monitor the system, but he also put some of the fault on the federal standards.

"I'm coming to the conclusion there needs to be some changes to the federal rule to allow us to be more protective of public health," he said.

Marc Edwards, a professor at Virginia Tech and an expert in drinking water corrosion controls, said documents he obtained through the Freedom of Information Act showed state officials should have known the city had to implement corrosion controls and instead worked to cover up the issue.

He pointed out several emails from earlier this year where officials said a corrosion study on the system was warranted but should not be started because the city would again change its water source before the study is completed.

"I think it started innocently enough. ... It's possible that they didn't understand the federal rule," Mr. Edwards told Gongwer News Service. "By early 2015, this problem became too big to ignore. ...

Even if they did not understand the rule, they should have taken much more aggressive steps to get this problem fixed."

To Mr. Wyant's offer to work with federal officials to improve the rule, Mr. Edwards said there is room for such improvement, but the current rule should have prevented the issues faced in Flint.

"The rule in fact did require them to have corrosion control," he said. "The rule does require them to take samples and, if they had done that correctly, people would have been told much sooner there was a problem."

Mr. Edwards said he had talked to Mr. Wyant on Monday and had agreed to Mr. Wyant's request for assistance.

"I will do whatever I can to make sure this doesn't happen again," he said.

Senate Minority Leader Jim Ananich (D-Flint) said recent documents indicate state and federal officials were working more to back up their earlier findings than to ensure the water was safe.

"The latest developments in the Flint water crisis raise more troubling questions. It is clear from several now available documents that certain DEQ and EPA staff chose to put their reputations ahead of the safety and health of Flint citizens," Mr. Ananich said in a statement. "We do not know whether the misapplication of federal rules was intentional or due to negligence. That's why the Legislature needs to have a robust role in any investigation, and in ensuring those responsible for Flint's water crisis are held accountable."

Michigan Democratic Party Chair Brandon Dillon called for Mr. Wyant to be replaced.

"This was not an issue of experience and protocol. It is a question of competency and judgment. DEQ employees were not provided with the leadership and training necessary to do their jobs in this situation, and Mr. Wyant clearly lacks the judgment needed to do his," Mr. Dillon said in a statement. "You don't get to learn on the job when it comes to the well-being of Michigan's children and families. You may be able to fix the problem of Flint's drinking water going forward, but the damage done to the health of thousands of Flint's children is irreversible."

Spokespersons for Mr. Snyder could be reached, but The Detroit News reported that Mr. Snyder told its newspaper's editorial board that Mr. Wyant is doing a "great job" responding to the situation and that the initial focus is on the staff who personally handled the issue.

James Clift with the Michigan Environmental Council said his group has concerns over how much autonomy cities have in conducting the water testing. "Financially, the city has an incentive to not find a problem," he said, even though the protocols call for trying to test the likely worst homes.

Mr. Clift said cities also need to be required to let residents know that they could be at risk. "To the extent that people have these lead leads in their homes, do they know it," he said. The records of those connections should be computerized, he said.

HFA Report: Medicaid Will Need More GF To Meet Match

When the state has to contribute funds to finance the Healthy Michigan Medicaid Expansion program, it will need to use more General Funds, or find another source of revenues, a report by the House Fiscal Agency said.

But if the Healthy Michigan plan is discontinued, then the Legislature will also have to find more money from GF to cover annual savings Healthy Michigan provides the state now and to cover the loss of funds generate by the Health Insurance Claims Assessment as well as the use tax charged against Medicaid managed care organizations.

In addition, the HFA report said, the Legislature will need to make some fixes to the act that created Healthy Michigan because "the current statutory formula doesn't work mathematically."

With the addition of Healthy Michigan, which covers about 600,000 people whose incomes are up to 133 percent of the federal poverty level, Medicaid provides health insurance to nearly 20 percent of the state's residents, the report said.

Approving Healthy Michigan was one of the most contentious issues of 2013, and in approving the program, the Legislature chose not to create a reserve program - that Governor Rick Snyder had proposed - that could help the state cover the federal cut in funding beginning in the 2016-17 fiscal year.

In addition, the legislative approval created two conditions under which Healthy Michigan could be ended: if the federal Centers for Medicare and Medicaid does not approve a new waiver the state has submitted by December 31 and if the costs of meeting the federal match exceed savings for the program.

Under the call for states to expand Medicaid enrollment to low-income individuals and families, in the federal Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act, the federal government promised to pay 100 percent of the cost of the additional coverage for the first three years. The federal match will then be set at 95 percent in calendar year 2017, and be phased down to 90 percent by 2021-22.

In terms of simple cash payments, the General Fund amount needed to meet the match will start at $137 million in 2016-17 to $356 million in 2020-21.

However, including the offset of the some $235 million in net savings, the state will not actually see an expenditure until the 2018-19 fiscal year, a total of $55 million, the House Fiscal Agency report said. By 2021-22, the expenditure would be an estimated $89 million.

That means the Legislature would have to pull more money out of the General Fund to cover the program, unless an alternate revenue source were found.

But there are other technical factors that could affect the overall savings and costs, especially in terms of when the Healthy Michigan costs exceed its savings (the report did not guess at a time when that might happen).

One of the most significant factors is how the level of state retainer savings will be set under the hospital provider assessment the state now charges. The current formula doesn't work mathematically, the HFA said, so the Legislature will need to change that in law, and when it does, it could set those savings at higher levels than currently forecast. The state also had not yet calculated the savings it is seeing by reducing the amount of uncompensated care it was paying for individuals who were uninsured, needed treatment and were unable to pay their expenses, the report said.

Veterans, Businesses Tout Support For Prevailing Wage

Two groups on Monday held separate press conferences opposing repeal of the prevailing wage, calling on legislators to support the policy because it's good for veterans and the state's small businesses.

"When I got out of the military, I looked at a lot of different jobs, but going into the trades is what suited me. Veterans will be hurt more than any other group (by a repeal)," said Jesse Stevens, a veteran of the U.S. Marine Corps and member of the Bricklayers and Allied Craftworkers.

Citizens Protecting Michigan Taxpayers, a group seeking to repeal the prevailing wage law, has submitted some 391,000 signatures in support of its efforts. It awaits a recommendation from the Bureau of Elections as to the validity of those petitions.

Presuming the Board of State Canvassers determines sufficient signatures of registered voters, then the Legislature has 40 days to pass the proposal, which would make a repeal law. Or it could take no action and let the proposal go to the November 2016 ballot. The former is widely expected, but backers of prevailing wage are trying to stop that scenario.

Dave Waymire, spokesperson for Michigan Prevails, a group in support of maintaining the prevailing wage law, estimated that of the 568,000 veterans in the state, about 10 percent were working construction and skilled trades.

Repealing prevailing wage could also hurt the sustainability of the skilled trades at a time when Governor Rick Snyder is seeking to invest even more in those fields to fill the demand for such jobs, one veteran said.

"Our Local 252 (International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers) spends over $1 million a year to train apprentices," said Matthew Charles, an Army veteran who is currently a first-year electrician in an apprenticeship program. "I appreciate people saying, 'Thank you for your service,' but now we have politicians who say they want to thank me for my service by ending prevailing wage. This will cut opportunity, pay and benefits for construction workers who are veterans in Michigan, and that's not right."

Repealing the prevailing wage is also a slight to local businesses that have weathered the Michigan economic storms, said Jim Judd, owner of Master Craft Carpet Services in Plymouth.

"Michigan is coming back from a decades-long decline and this attempted repeal of the prevailing wage does nothing to help our comeback," he said in a press call separate from the veteran's event, both held on Monday. "(It) rewards out-of-state businesses that often don't provide jobs for our friends, family and neighbors."

Another business owner, Donna Pardonnet from Architectural Contractors Trade Association, said she has had first-hand experience that tells her Michigan contractors would face "unfair" competition from out-of-state corporations "that avoid paying taxes by paying workers under the table."

"They will be forced to compete with operations that promote unsafe worksites and with operations that replace skilled Michigan tradespeople with unskilled workers from out of state," she said.

Mr. Judd and Ms. Pardonnet are among dozens of business owners who signed and sent a letter to the Legislature urging lawmakers to protect Michigan's prevailing wage laws.

Both groups argued that an earlier suspension of the law in the 1990s did not lead to cost savings, as fewer contractors bid on public projects.

But Chris Fisher, president of Associated Builders and Contractors of Michigan, said prevailing wage is "decidedly anti-taxpayer."

"Most credible studies prove that prevailing wage kills jobs and wastes tax dollars because it isn't hard to figure out that when you let unions rig the bidding process, prices will go up," he said. "Michigan's one of just six states where prevailing wage is based exclusively on union agreements. It's time to put taxpayers in charge instead of giving big labor a blank check with our tax dollars."

Hospital Report Says Improved Practices Netted Savings, Improved Lives

A report by the Michigan Health and Hospital Association said Monday that ongoing improvements in overall patient care has both saved money and improved overall outcomes for patients, including saving lives.

Significantly, the improvements include a 34 percent cut in deaths from septic shock from 2011 to 2014, the report said.

And in 2014 alone, hospitals saved more than $100 million in overall costs by reducing the number of readmissions by more than 10,000 cases.

The report said from 2010 to 2014, hospitals were able to reduce early elective births by 60 percent, which meant healthier mothers and babies. Approximately 2,900 births were affected.

And from 2012 to 2014, state hospitals were able to cut the use of catheters by 27 percent, which reduced the risk of overall infection.

Campaign Notes

PAC TAUNTS COURSER, GAMRAT WITH BUMPER STICKERS: The Progress Michigan Action Fund is selling bumper stickers in the 80th and 82nd House Districts where special elections are taking place to replace expelled former Rep. Cindy Gamrat and resigned former Rep. Todd Courser. In Ms. Gamrat's district, the bumper sticker says, "Todd's Girlfriend, Republican for State Representative," and in Mr. Courser's district, the bumper sticker says, "Cindy's Boyfriend, Republican for State Representative."

SBAM ENDORSES WHITEFORD; SPLITS ON 82ND DISTRICT: The Small Business Association of Michigan's political action committee has endorsed Republican Mary Whiteford of Casco Township in the special election in the 80th House District where former Rep. Cindy Gamrat was expelled. In the 2014 primary, Ms. Whiteford received the PAC's seal of approval.

In the 82nd District, where former Rep. Todd Courser resigned, the group said it had given stamps of approval to both Republican Jan Peabody of Lapeer and Republican Gary Howell of Lapeer.

GILBERT DONATIONS: Republicans used recent campaign finance filings to again hit Melissa Gilbert, candidate for the 8th U.S. House District as well as former television star, with her tax problems.

Ms. Gilbert has said in prior statements that she is working with the Internal Revenue Service and California tax officials to repay tax debts, but Michigan Republican Party Chairman Ronna Romney McDaniel said she should use at least one of her campaign contributions toward that end: the $5,400 she received from actor husband Timothy Busfield.

Volume #54, Report #208 -- Tuesday, October 20, 2015

Cotter, Meekhof Now Tangling On Roads

Efforts to find a way to generate $1.2 billion more for the state's roads further devolved Tuesday when Senate Majority Leader Arlan Meekhof and House Speaker Kevin Cotter disagreed, publicly and privately, about the next step to take to break the stalemate on the issue.

Governor Rick Snyder, Mr. Cotter (R-Mount Pleasant) and Mr. Meekhof (R-West Olive) met in Mr. Meekhof's office for a little less than an hour Tuesday with staff, other legislators and Lt. Governor Brian Calley. The meeting began about a half-hour after Mr. Meekhof took the unusual step of publicly calling for the House to convene conference committees and put before the House the "deal" for a vote.

That "deal" is the 400-400-400 plan that relies upon $400 million in new revenue from raising the gasoline tax by 6.5 cents per gallon, $400 million from fees, largely through ending the depreciation in new vehicle registration fees and $400 million from the General Fund.

"There's other bells and whistles, but that's the base plan," Mr. Meekhof told reporters after session. "The drafts are completed, so no other work needs to be done. I have the drafts ready. A conference committee could meet. And I'm asking them to call the conference committee, put the last best deal we had on the table up for a vote, and go get the votes."

Mr. Cotter, exiting the leadership meeting later, asked if he could comment on the situation, simply said, "No."

Cotter spokesperson Gideon D'Assandro later dismissed Mr. Meekhof's request.

"Senate Majority Leader Meekhof abruptly left the last quadrant meeting early because Rep. Greimel changed his mind on an income tax cut, so he should know there is no deal," he said. "Speaker Cotter has been working with the governor on the issue since then, and he remains hopeful we can find reliable support for a permanent road funding solution."

Adding to the acrimony, later in the day, WOOD-TV, the NBC affiliate in Grand Rapids, aired a story in which House Minority Leader Tim Greimel (D-Auburn Hills) went further on the manner in which Mr. Meekhof allegedly left the last Legislative Quadrant meeting with the governor.

"I want to continue talking with the other quadrant leaders. I made that very clear last week when Arlan rushed out of the room like a child when he couldn't get his way," Mr. Greimel told WOOD-TV.

Meekhof spokesperson Amber McCann said Mr. Meekhof would not comment "on the actions of his colleagues" in quadrant meetings, saying those meetings are for frank conversations.

As to Mr. Cotter's rejection of Mr. Meekhof's request, she said, "I would find it surprising that the speaker and ... Representative Greimel aren't interested in moving the process forward."

Legislative sources, speaking on condition they not be named, said Mr. Cotter now plans to try to see if the House, using mainly Republican votes, can pass a new plan and essentially dare the Senate and Mr. Snyder to say no. Several sources said, at least initially, Mr. Cotter is considering another try at the 600-600 plan ($600 million in new revenue and $600 million dedicated from the General Fund).

The House took a stab at a 600-600 plan in August, but it faltered because House Republicans were short of the votes in their caucus, and Mr. Snyder declared $600 million from the General Fund was too much without addressing other pressures on it, such as the coming sunset of the Health Insurance Claims Tax, a key source of Medicaid funding.

A week ago, Mr. Snyder and Mr. Cotter declared an "impasse" in negotiations for a bipartisan deal for road funding. The main problem was that Mr. Greimel resisted the size of the income tax cut Republicans were seeking.

The quadrant has not met since that meeting.

"The House has this in their lap and they have the ability to act, and I'm asking them to act," Mr. Meekhof said. "I think to say it this way, the plan we put forward guarantees the road funding and gambles on the fact we'd have revenue for tax relief."

And Senate Minority Leader Jim Ananich (D-Flint) seemed to agree.

"There's a point in time where we do have to have some action," Mr. Ananich said. "I get the point he's talking about ... the House has kind of Charlie Brown-ed us a number of times on these roads deals."

Mr. Ananich said he has some concerns about the proposal by his Senate Republican colleagues because it does not account for a potential downturn in the economy.

"It's similar to Proposal A in that it only ever goes down, it doesn't go up. If there's a bad year or a series of bad years, that cut would compound the problem, and we've seen it's difficult to raise taxes," Mr. Ananich said. "So I'm hopeful we can have a conversation and figure out a plan that meets the need of tax relief but at the same time doesn't put the budget in a long-term sustainability issue."

Mr. Snyder, leaving the leadership meeting, said he appreciates where Mr. Meekhof is coming from with a call for the House to vote, but did not make the same request.

"There's an issue for the House and the Senate to have dialogue and discussion because it's a conference committee issue, but ... that last plan was a pretty reasonable compromise," he said.

Business Leaders for Michigan and the Michigan Municipal League issued a joint statement supporting Mr. Meekhof's call for the House to bring the 400-400-400 plan to a vote and also warning against any plan using more than $400 million from the General Fund for roads, saying it would jeopardize other key services.

Teacher, Administrator Evaluations Head To Snyder

Only two senators opposed supporting a revamped proposal that provides a framework for educator evaluations on Tuesday, sending the bill that had just been passed by the House last week to Governor Rick Snyder for his approval.

Sen. Rebekah Warren (D-Ann Arbor) and Sen. Coleman Young II (D-Detroit) voted in opposition to SB 103[redacted], and Sen. Mike Green (R-Mayville) was absent from session.

The bill has seen something of a wild ride in the Legislature, as it first passed the Senate back in May, but with much more dissent (See Gongwer Michigan Report, May 20, 2015). Among those who had first opposed to the bill's passage was Sen. Margaret O'Brien (R-Portage) who, when she served in the state House last term, worked alongside Rep. Adam Zemke (D-Ann Arbor) to craft a bill.

Ms. O'Brien supported the bill that passed the Senate 35-2 on Tuesday, saying she felt many stakeholders had been included in the process and were actually heard this time.

"It's focused on good, sound, education policy," Ms. O'Brien said of the final version Tuesday.

The House began taking up SB 103 in June, but before long it became clear there was too much distance between what the House Education Committee chair, Rep. Amanda Price (R-Park Township), envisioned for the bill and what Sen. Phil Pavlov (R-St. Clair), chair of the Senate Education Committee, had in mind. Making matters worse is that an adviser for Governor Rick Snyder in June told the House committee that Mr. Snyder did not support the bill in its current form (See Gongwer Michigan Report, June 18, 2015).

"I think the districts started realizing that if we don't make this happen now, they'll be under current law, and current law just wasn't going to be acceptable," Mr. Pavlov told reporters of what finally broke the log-jam on the matter. "So we wanted to make sure going into this school year that teachers, administrators and boards knew there was going to be a new policy in evaluating teachers that was better than current law, and I think that's what really started moving the discussion."

The bill heading to Mr. Snyder now establishes both training requirements and options for school districts and public school academies to develop their own teacher evaluation tool or make modifications to an existing tool. It also the funding for training must come from the Educator Evaluation Reserve Fund.

The Department of Education would also have to establish and maintain a list of teacher and administrator evaluation tools, and the list would have to, at the very least, include the tools recommended by the Michigan Council on Educator Effectiveness in 2013. Districts do not have to use the same tool for teachers and administrators.

For teachers, beginning in the 2018-19 school year, 40 percent of the year-end evaluation would be based on student growth, with half coming from the state assessment and half coming from a local assessment.

For administrators, beginning immediately, 25 percent of the annual evaluation would be based on student growth and assessment data. The data is an aggregate of student growth data used in teacher evaluations in the district where the administrator works.

Sen. David Knezek (D-Dearborn Heights) praised the bill on Tuesday as providing "clearly defined evaluation expectations to help create a system of effective teacher evaluation accountability," as well as allows for more local decision-making.

"This bill as amended will help us hold our educators accountable and ensure our students are receiving a quality education in the state of Michigan," Mr. Knezek said.

SB 103 also provides $14.8 million for districts to train administrators and teachers on the use of new evaluation tools.

The bill was well-received by various education interests, especially those had been pushing for such reforms since the first report from the Michigan Council on Educator Effectiveness years ago.

"Although the legislation passed by the House and Senate does not contain all of the council's recommendations, it does change the focus of evaluations," Michigan Education Association President Steven Cook said in a statement. "Instead of punishment, the goal of evaluations is now aimed at improving classroom instruction. In creating the Ball Commission and using its report as a guide, the Legislature acknowledged that experts in the field are invaluable in guiding education reform forward. That too is a change for the better."

Others were pleased to see the bill's final passage but looked to the Department of Education for leadership going forward.

"Michigan has not invested in nor developed new systems to better train and support Michigan's existing teachers. "We've done even less for school leaders," said Amber Arellano, executive director of The Education Trust-Midwest, in a statement. "Now the Department of Education can change that. It will need to play an unprecedented leadership role in systems change, oversight and ensuring the new system is providing sophisticated feedback to teachers, improving instruction across all districts and dramatically raising student achievement. Combined with the state's new college- and career-ready standards for teaching and learning, this is a huge opportunity for Michigan students."

The Tri-County Alliance for Public Education, which includes superintendents from Wayne, Oakland and Macomb counties, also applauded the vote by the Senate.

"Effective teachers and administrators can make all the difference in the world when it comes to educating our kids, and constructive evaluation will strengthen teaching in our classrooms," said Russel Pickell, superintendent of Riverview Community Schools.

"We commend Senator Pavlov and the Michigan Legislature for working in good faith with educators on this legislation," said Mark Burton, executive director of the Alliance. "His leadership on this issue should be held up as an example of how legislators can learn from those on the frontlines of education to achieve our common goals and ensure our kids are prepared for college and a career."

And officials with the Michigan Association of Secondary School Principals said passing the bill in its H-8 form was "an important milestone" for the state's principals, but more work still needs to be done.

"Educators finally have a clear target: implementing improvement-focused evaluations and growing the quality of all educators. Today's vote validates the work of the schools that have already begun the hard job of implementing quality evaluation systems and will support those districts that still need to make the transition," the group said in a statement. "Regardless, there is still plenty of difficult work ahead to implement this new law, improve our collective performance and ensure that every student benefits from the expertise of skillful educators. The Department of Education also has a significant role to play moving forward in providing guidance for schools and allocating the funding appropriated to support these systems."

Ananich: 'Troubling' Finds On Flint Water Crisis

Senate Minority Leader Jim Ananich said Tuesday it is "really troubling" that individuals within the Drinking Water Division of the Department of Environmental Quality spent more time protecting their reputation than they did protecting citizens, but he wouldn't go so far as to call for DEQ Director Dan Wyant to resign or be fired.

"I think we need to have a thorough investigation before we make any decisions about who should be fired or anything like that. I think it's clear he sees the gravity of the problem in his department, and I think he's learning that every day," Mr. Ananich told reporters after session. "But we have to get the bottom of how folks in the Drinking Water Division could so blatantly do everything they can in their power to hide the truth from the public, and that's pretty clearly what they did. "

The Flint Journal recently reported that emails exchanged among several DEQ and U.S. Environmental Protection Agency officials show flags had been raised about lead possibly leaching into Flint's water system some seven months ago.

Mr. Ananich said he's had some preliminary conversations with Senate Majority Leader Arlan Meekhof (R-West Olive) about next steps the Legislature could take to ensure accountability and help the citizens of his hometown regain trust in their water, their elected officials and their government. But Mr. Ananich said the two need to have more formal discussion about a course of action.

Mr. Ananich said he was also in the process of sending a request to the state's auditor general, who happens to be auditing the drinking water division, to add a few questions about the process and procedures in place in the event that a situation like has happened in Flint were to break out.

"When you get an email from somebody on your personal account, four or five people, and none of them have the self-respect for my community to say, 'hmm, maybe I shouldn't do this, maybe I should take this to the next level,' that's a problem," Mr. Ananich said. "That's a cultural problem that people would be more concerned about hiding something than telling the public the truth, and it's really troubling."

He said he felt there ought to be an investigation, though he wasn't immediately sure the form that could take. He hoped it would be independent, he said, and that "if things come out that people were negligent or purposeful in their actions, I think there needs to be some very serious consequences."

He also suggested a possible avenue is through the recently-created Senate Oversight Committee, especially because the House has a committee of the same name too.

"But I think with a department that's got such a heavy responsibility and one division in particular has shown that for the last 18 months they've failed, that warrants our involvement," Mr. Ananich said. "We have to get to the bottom of it. Every day more and more information comes out and it just gets worse."

Pavlov Taking Time On DPS Plan, Third Grade Reading Bill

Sen. Phil Pavlov may have cleared one major hurdle on Tuesday when the Senate passed a bill outlining a framework for the evaluation of teachers and administrators, but more work is still in front of him when it comes to potentially leading in the Senate on Governor Rick Snyder's recently announced plan for Detroit Public Schools, as well as a bill on third-grade reading proficiency that passed the House last week.

Mr. Pavlov (R-St. Clair), chair of the Senate Education Committee, said he is reviewing the proposal by Governor Rick Snyder on how to revamp Detroit Public Schools and pay down its debts without harming education for the students enrolled in the district (See Gongwer Michigan Report, October 19, 2015).

"We've been meeting with the leaders and the coalition over the last several months. I think it's got a long way to go, but I think again, there's a need there," he told reporters after session. "There's a crisis looming. So we'll work through that just like we have with any other issue."

Mr. Pavlov said one of his preliminary concerns about the plan is school of choice, and the ability of parents and students to have "unfettered choice to educational opportunities" without be penalized, he said.

But he's also concerned about the amount of funding that Mr. Snyder is requesting for the Legislature, "because you're taking that from all other students in the state of Michigan," Mr. Pavlov said.

Although some believe the plan could start over in the Senate, Mr. Pavlov said he was not immediately sure himself, but the Senate GOP caucus has a great deal of interest in the proposal.

As to whether he could personally support something like what Mr. Snyder is asking, especially given how much money and effort has already been given to Detroit, Mr. Pavlov said, "I'm not convinced anybody is willing to go and reward bad behavior, but we do have a problem and that is that these kids need to be educated. So there's got to be a balance there."

He said he thought it to be "a big ask" to try to get the deal on DPS done by the end of the year, seeming a little more open to a timeframe that is before the beginning of the next school year.

"I think some of these issues are going to work themselves out over time, and to put a timeframe and predict when that would happen is going to be very difficult from where we are today," Mr. Pavlov said.

READING PROFICIENCY: Mr. Pavlov's committee was also assigned the task Tuesday of reviewing HB 4822, a bill designed to get elementary students reading proficiently before entering fourth grade. The bill cleared the House last week with only three Democratic lawmakers in support - although it had cleared committee with support from the Democrats (See Gongwer Michigan Report, October 15, 2015).

Mr. Pavlov said he has no specific timeframe on the bill, admitting he hadn't really followed the issue very closely in the House until this point.

"I think we've clearly identified there's a problem here in this state. There's a number of issues I'm concerned about," he said. "We've made the largest investment in the country on early childhood education. We're asking the questions - when are those results going to start showing up? Why are kids still getting into third grade with all this additional support and still not having the highest proficiencies in reading. We're not just looking at third grade reading, we need to look at the Great Start program all the way through third grade."

'Kevin's Law' Update Clears House

Family and friends would be permitted to get mental health treatment for a person close to them before an unfortunate incident under legislation passed by the House Tuesday.

In 2004, former Governor Jennifer Granholm signed "Kevin's Law" in honor of Kevin Heisinger, who was beaten to death in a Kalamazoo bus/train station by a man with schizophrenia who stopped taking his medication.

Current law allows judges to order involuntary assisted outpatient treatment, but only after a major incident occurs.

Under HB 4674, which passed 103-2, sponsored by Rep. Tom Leonard III (R-DeWitt Township), a family member or friend would be allowed to petition the court and allow judges to order outpatient treatment for those who have had their mental illness confirmed by a physician, all without a crime being committed.

"This reform is sorely needed because current law makes it very difficult for people who might not recognize the severity of their situation to obtain the treatment they need," Mr. Leonard said in a statement. "In the same vein, we must guarantee individuals' due process rights are protected by providing legal counsel to guide them through the court process if they believe AOT is not necessary. This protects both the public safety and the privileges of the individual."

Supporters have said under current law (passed about a decade ago), a crisis needed to occur before intervention could happen, and communities have been confused by the complexity of "Kevin's Law" and it hasn't been used much.

"We must make public safety - including the well-being of the individual in need of care - a priority in this type of situation, but also ensure that their rights remain protected. This legislation strikes that delicate balance." Mr. Leonard said. "I want to thank Lt. Gov. Calley for bringing this issue to my attention, and for the strong leadership he has shown working to protect our state's most vulnerable citizens."

HB 4674 does the following:

- Offers early intervention, since current law requires a serious incident that might endanger public safety to occur before AOT may be requested;
- Simplifies the process of seeking court-appointed treatment; and
- Allows a judge to order AOT before an incident has occurred that could cause injury to the prospective patient or a member of the public.

Hertel, Colbeck Debate On Roads Drifts Into Other Issues

A debate between two sitting senators that was supposed to be on the fundamental question over whether a tax increase is a necessary component of a final road funding solution went a bit off topic Tuesday as other issues such as the cost of health care, maintaining prevailing wage and fewer taxes on the middle class found their way into the hour-long back-and-forth.

Sen. Patrick Colbeck (R-Canton Township) was pleased last week when Sen. Curtis Hertel Jr. (D-East Lansing) took him up on a challenge Mr. Colbeck had earlier raised to his colleagues about having a public debate on the necessity of a tax increase as a component for a road funding solution. But what began as a fairly civil disagreement on whether the objective was to raise $1.2 billion or to fix the roads in a manner that made them more sustainable eventually turned into a debate about the philosophical differences between Democrats and Republicans.

Mr. Colbeck began the discussion, saying he hoped to obtain an agreement that he and Mr. Hertel were trying to solve the same problem - a search that would come back perhaps in a manner he hadn't expected to, which is, not at all. Mr. Colbeck said beyond that key point, he wanted to debate his proposal, which in brief was to reprioritize existing funds, reduce expenses on fixing roads, leverage existing resources, and, if none of those were amicable, talk a tax increase.

Mr. Hertel took his opening statement in a completely different direction, saying that while he agreed funding Michigan's roads is the single-most important issue facing the state today, "I think people are frustrated because under this governor and this Legislature, they're paying more in taxes and they're not getting much out of it," he said. "I think people are frustrated with the massive tax cuts that have gone to corporations and have not gone to helping people in their everyday lives."

And he called Mr. Colbeck's proposal "a math problem" that focused more on logistics than it did on creating a long-term, sustainable funding solution for the state's roads and bridges.

"You believe the objective is to find $1.2 billion. I believe the objective is to find a way to fix roads faster than they degrade," Mr. Colbeck shot back.

Mr. Hertel returned, "$1.2 billion is the number the experts have come up with, not me. That's to maintain our current road system. I think we should invest more money into research and development to build longer lasting roads, but that's not been talked about in the Legislature."

The disagreement on the $1.2 billion number would continue, as Mr. Colbeck argued the problem could be smaller at about $700 million if the state would invest more into roads materials that were more sustainable, such as those being developed at the University of Michigan. Mr. Colbeck would raise other examples, but Mr. Hertel said his research into such materials and their companies is that they hadn't been tested in a practical manner, such as serving as a highway instead of a driveway, yet.

"I believe it's fiscally irresponsible," Mr. Hertel said of Mr. Colbeck's proposal, which, after some time, had finally revealed itself to involve a look at, and use of, restricted funds (which Mr. Hertel said was unconstitutional), as well as possibly using money associated with the Michigan Strategic Fund and the Budget Stabilization Fund.

Mr. Colbeck said fixing the roads ought to be considered economic development, and so the use of MSF funds would be warranted. And there is an excess of money in the BSF, so at least some of that could be directed toward roads, he said.

But Mr. Hertel ripped both as one-time solutions (though Mr. Colbeck later argued that funds from the BSF could be made into ongoing funds). He also pointed to some of the details in Mr. Colbeck's proposal, which Mr. Hertel alleged included taking money away from sexual assault prevention funds for university campuses and newborn screenings.

"I just don't understand. You can't play a legislative shell game. People pay these fees because they expect a service," Mr. Hertel said of Mr. Colbeck's proposal.

"All I'm saying is let's look into and make sure the actual funds are meeting the needs," Mr. Colbeck shot back.

Before long, the debate slid into an argument over whether to keep the state's prevailing wage and what the cost of the federal Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act has to the state, though it would eventually return to point when questions from the audience were asked, the first of which questioned whether the Department of Transportation ought to be investing more into research and development projects on roads.

"They have (the) equivalent of sand box. The problem is, we never seem to convert those projects, those sandbox items into changes of how we fix those roads. I think we need to do a better job," Mr. Colbeck said of MDOT. "We're not getting the bang for our buck we deserve."

Mr. Hertel defended MDOT, saying like other parts of the state budget, theirs has been cut "to the bone."

"I'm all for doing more for less but you can't expect that to routinely work forever," Mr. Hertel said. "If you had a plan that was sustainable, don't you think Rick Snyder would jump on it?"

Both had different takeaways from the defeat of Proposal 1, but both also had concerns about an income tax rollback.

"I'm always for a tax rollback, but I'm cautioned by the fact that one of the first things we did when I came into the Legislature was to stop a rollback," Mr. Colbeck said. "I'm not convinced it would go all the way down, because people are still fixated on raising taxes."

"It's fiscally irresponsible," Mr. Hertel said of the rollback. "It scares me to roll it down in good times but have no time to go up in bad."

Bills Would Increase Motorcycle Safety Course Fee

The maximum fee for a motorcycle safety course would increase from $25 to $50 under legislation discussed in the House Transportation and Infrastructure Committee on Tuesday.

HB 4853 and HB 4854, introduced by Rep. Jim Tedder (R-Clarkston), would increase the fee and require the Department of State to waive the written knowledge test, road signal test and driving skills test for an applicant who had successfully passed a private or public motorcycle safety course.

Under the first bill, government agencies offering the motorcycle safety courses would be allowed to charge up to $50, but could charge less if they chose.

Mr. Tedder said the fee not been increased since 1982. He said $25 does not come close to covering the cost of the class. He also said the fee is so low, some sign up for the class but then do not show up.

Under the current program, the public entities providing the classes submit a grant request to the department for reimbursement. Mr. Tedder said because the fee is low and the Motorcycle Safety Fund has shrunk, they are not always reimbursed for the full amount spent.

"Several institutions have voiced concerns over their ability to maintain hosting the class because they are quite frankly losing money," Mr. Tedder said. "This is an opportunity to make these whole so they can continue hosting these classes."

Mr. Tedder said he took one of the courses a couple months ago, and took a class from 8 a.m. until 6 p.m.

He said at the class booklets were provided, and six hours were spent out on the course and a motorcycle was provided during the class at no additional costs.

"For $25 I received nearly nine hours of quality instruction and at the end of that experience successfully completed a secretary of state approved test," he said.

Rep. Jeff Farrington (R-Utica) questioned why the increase was so large. "I am thrown back a little bit by a 100 percent increase in fees," he said.

Mr. Tedder said the fees were artificially maintained at a low level.

And Rep. David Rutledge (D-Ypsilanti) said he thought the fee should be $100. "The fee has been $25 for 30 years," he said.

American Bikers Aiming Toward Education also supports the legislation. The committee did not act on the bills.

MDOT PRESENTATION: Department of Transportation Director Kirk Steudle also spoke to the committee Tuesday on various efficiencies within the department and projects it's working on this year.

Mr. Steudle said the department has reduced staff by 15 percent during the last three years and combined with other efficiencies has saved $316 million during that time.

In 2015, he said, the department has saved $13.5 million by partnering with private entities to provide more street lights in Detroit, and saved $22 million through bond refinancing.

Mr. Steudle said during the next five years, the department will invest $503 million annually to repair and rebuild roads.

He said $168 million will be invested annually to repair bridges.

The committee ran out of time and Mr. Steudle was only able to take a couple questions from committee members but will return at the request of Rep. Peter Pettalia (R-Presque Isle), the committee chair.

Senate Panel Approves Ban On Marketing To Students

Companies that provide electronic services to schools would be prohibited from targeted marketing to students under legislation reported Tuesday from the Senate Education Committee.

The bill (SB 510), as reported, would ban advertising to students based on information the company collected on them as well as prohibit sale of any of that information.

The student or his or her parents would be permitted to request disclosure of any of the collected data, but the company would also be required to delete any or all of that data if the school district requests that.

The bill was reported unanimously with an S-2 substitute.

SHARED TIME: The committee also began discussions on bills (HB 4594 and HB 4790) that would allow kindergarten students to be eligible for shared time.

Current law allows students in first grade and above who are home schooled or attend a private school to take some classes at their local public school, with the school being reimbursed based on the amount of time the student spends at the public school.

Rep. Ed McBroom (R-Vulcan), sponsor of the bill, said the current law was written when kindergarten was generally part-time and so did not lend itself to shared time programs.

"Half-day kindergarten is pretty much not the rule anymore," he said. "This allows both home schoolers and private schools to work together with the public schools."

Mr. McBroom said there would need to be conflict substitutes approved when the committee moves the bills, which appeared to have general support from Republicans, to accommodate recent School Aid Act changes.

Snyder Signs Civil Asset Forfeiture Bills

Legislation putting new limits on civil asset forfeiture, one of the few major issues in recent years that largely united both conservative and liberal legislators, was signed into law Tuesday by Governor Rick Snyder.

The package of bills sets new reporting requirements for governments and police agencies on property seized, as well as setting new stricter standards governments must follow before seizing property.

"These new reporting requirements will raise the bar so that a fair balance is struck between private property rights and law enforcement's effective ability to do their job in pursuing criminal activity," Mr. Snyder said in a statement about the seven-bill package.

The main measure, HB 4504 (PA 148) requires all government entities to report any and all property seizures and forfeitures to the State Police. The State Police will then compile a report on those seizures which will be given to the Legislature and posted on the department's website.

HB 4499 (PA 153) raises the threshold to "clear and convincing evidence" to seize property in nuisance abatements. And HB 4505 (PA 154) the plaintiff in a controlled substance case has to show the seizing property was a violation again by the clear and convincing standard.

Also signed were HB 4500 (PA 149) HB 4503 (PA 150, HB 4506 (PA 151) and HB 4507 (PA 152) which amend different statutes to comport with the new standards.

Mr. Snyder also signed a package of Senate-House bills to help ensure individuals who rely on service animals have greater access to public facilities. The bills were created after a number of incidents where individuals were prevented entrance to some public places because they had a service animal, most commonly a dog, with them.

SB 298 (PA 144) makes it a crime to deny access to someone with a service animal, or to attack a service animal. SB 299 (PA 145) exempts service animals from licensing fees if they are assisting a person with a disability or a veteran with a service-related disability.

HB 4521 (PA 146) requires the Department of Civil Rights to offer voluntary identification for service animals, and HB 4527 (PA 147) makes it a misdemeanor to falsely identify a service animal.

Other bills signed by Mr. Snyder were:

SB 64, PA 155	PATIENT CARE POLICIES (Hansen) Requires establishment of patient care policies and compliance procedures based on nationally recognized guidelines or best-practice resources, and provides other general amendments.

Signed: October 19, 2015; Effective: January 18, 2016

SB 65, PA 156	HEALTH PROFESSIONALS (Hansen) Allows employment of or contracting with health professional to provide medical treatment to nursing home patients regardless of business entity status of nursing home.

Signed: October 20, 2015; Effective: January 18, 2016

SB 66, PA 157	LIMITED LIABILITY COMPANIES (Hansen) Clarifies application of definition of learned profession to certain health professionals.

Signed: October 19, 2015; Effective: January 18, 2016

SB 67, PA 158 — BUSINESS CORPORATIONS (Hansen) Clarifies application of definition of learned profession to certain health professionals.

Signed: October 19, 2015; Effective: January 18, 2016

SB 358, PA 159 — TEACHER CERTIFICATES (Hansen) Revises requirements for professional teaching certificate and requirements for alternative teaching certificate process.

Signed: October 20, 2015; Effective: January 18, 2016

Snyder Names Two To Oakland Circuit Court

Governor Rick Snyder on Tuesday named two people to the Oakland Circuit Court, one of which was Hala Jarbou to succeed new Court of Appeals Judge Colleen O'Brien.

Also named was Jerry Matis to succeed Judge Rudy Nichols (who served in the House for two years and then was elected to the Senate in 1984 succeeding the recalled Sen. Phil Mastin. He was elected to the court in 1990).

Ms. Jarbou is currently with the U.S. Department of Justice as an assistance U.S. attorney in the Drug Task Force. She must run for full term as judge in 2016.

Mr. Matis is in private practice and is also the vice chair of the Oakland County Board of Commissioners. He previously had been on the Rochester City Council. He must run in 2016 to complete the term which will end in 2020.

Committee Roundup

HOUSE NATURAL RESOURCES: The committee began discussions Tuesday on legislation (HB 4908) to remove the sunset date on authority for the Natural Resources Commission to set regulations for recreational feeding of deer and elk.

Supporters said it was important for the commission to retain that authority as part of the effort to combat chronic wasting disease and other communicable diseases.

But Rep. Ken Goike (R-Ray Township) and Rep. Ed McBroom (R-Vulcan) argued for extending the sunset three years.

Mr. Goike said he was happy with the commission's work now, but said that could change. "Why give it away and then have to do legislation to get the power back," he said of legislative control over the commission's actions.

Rep. John Kivela (D-Marquette), sponsor of the legislation, said the legislative process takes too long. "Three years from now, chronic wasting disease is going to be more of a threat, not less," he said.

Amy Trotter with the Michigan United Conservation Clubs said it would be a waste of time to keep a sunset on the authority given the small likelihood any of the parties would reverse their support for the commission's work.

Mr. McBroom noted there was nothing that would prevent the governor from taking the authority from the commission and giving it to the director, as former Governor Jennifer Granholm had done with oversight of invasive species.

Campaign Notes

GILBERT ENDORSEMENT: The United Food and Commercial Workers Local 951 has endorsed Democrat Melissa Gilbert in her run for the 8th U.S. House District.

"Melissa has a proven track record of protecting workers' rights and supporting unions, which strengthen the voices of American workers," John Cakmakci, president of the local, said in a statement. "I am confident that she will fight for Michigan's working families in Congress."

Capital Notebook

SIMON TO CHAIR AMERICAN UNIVERSITIES: Michigan State University President Lou Anna Simon will serve as chair of the Association of American Universities for the next year. Ms. Simon was elected to the post by the association's board on Tuesday.

The association includes 62 of the top research universities in the United States and Canada, and both promotes university research and the relationship between the United States government and university research.

As chair, Ms. Simon will act as the spokesperson for the association, especially on issue that directly concern research universities.

GORZ JOINS MAC: Elizabeth Gorz has joined the Michigan Association of Counties as the organization's governmental affairs associate. Before joining the counties organization, she was a lobbyist at Capitol Affairs, and had been a staffer for former Senate Majority Leader and now U.S. Rep. Mike Bishop (R-Rochester), and an aide to former Sen., now U.S. Rep. John Moolenaar (R-Midland) and to Sen. Tory Rocca (R-Sterling Heights).

House Republicans Go It Alone, Pass Road Funding Plan

House Republicans on Wednesday found the votes, mostly within their own caucus, to pass a $1.2 billion road funding plan with no guarantees of support from Senate Majority Leader Arlan Meekhof or Governor Rick Snyder.

The plan involved $600 million in new revenue through a gas tax increase and registration fee increases and $600 million from existing sources. An income tax rollback and an expansion of the Homestead Property Tax credit are also included.

Business groups were also split in their reception of the plan with some seeing it as a breakthrough and others as fiscally irresponsible (see separate story).

"I think that this is a very good plan," House Speaker Kevin Cotter (R-Mount Pleasant) said after the bills passed. "We are going to be working with our partners. This is a huge step forward. I think this is a good grand compromise plan."

But House Democrats tore the plan apart as irresponsible and said the only reason the House Republicans wanted to vote on a plan this week is because Mr. Meekhof (R-West Olive) "challenged" Mr. Cotter to take a vote on a plan the quadrant leaders had been discussing.

"Let's just set the record straight here for everyone," said Rep. Marilyn Lane (D-Fraser), the minority vice chair of the House Transportation and Infrastructure Committee. "This is a knee-jerk reaction plan simply to match egos with our counterparts in the Senate."

Those talks fell apart last week, with House Minority Leader Tim Greimel (D-Auburn Hills) concerned about an income tax rollback.

Mr. Meekhof called for Mr. Cotter to hold a vote on the plan anyway. Mr. Cotter refused. At that point, as Gongwer News Service first reported Tuesday, Mr. Cotter began attempting to put together support for a 600/600 plan that could pass with Republican support only.

And about 9 p.m. Wednesday, he did.

It was seen as a retort both to Mr. Meekhof and Mr. Greimel.

"This plan is an embarrassment to the Legislature and it has managed to combine most of the worst aspects of the terrible plans we have seen over the course of the last year," Mr. Greimel said.

The plan would include a 3.3-cent increase effective in 2018 in the overall fuel tax, as well as an additional 4 cents for diesel to bring it up to the gas tax level effective in 2017.

The plan would increase registration fees by $400 million total, averaging $55 additional per vehicle for both passenger and commercial vehicles ($40 for passenger vehicles).

To offset the tax increases, the plan would increase the amount of homestead property tax credit available by both increasing the amount of income affected, to 3.5 percent from 3.4 percent, and increasing the income cap to $60,000, with the phase-out of the credit starting at $51,000. That is a $10,000 increase from the current caps.

The phase-in of the plan would provide $400 million for fiscal year 2016-17 and increase to $1.2 billion by FY 2020-21. Part of the increase is General Fund, which would increase from $150 million in FY 2018-19 to $600 million the final year.

The tax credit offset would start with $40 million in FY 2017-18 and increase to $200 million in FY 2020-21.

The plan also includes a proposed income tax roll-back beginning in 2019 if general fund revenue outpaces inflation.

Democrats criticized the income tax rollback for not having a floor and said it could severely strain the General Fund.

"It's a fiscal time bomb," said Rep. Jim Townsend (D-Royal Oak)."And I don't know if anybody on this floor knows just how explosive it could be."

But Mr. Cotter said the income tax rollback was a crucial feature of the final plan in terms of getting votes.

SB 414, the income tax rollback bill, is not tie-barred to the other bills in the package.

The bills passed with varying support, with 54 votes needed for passage, some bills passed narrowly: The gasoline tax increase passed 56-50 (HB 4614, HB 4616 and HB 4738); HB 4736 boosting vehicle registration fees passed 55-51; The competitive bidding bills (HB 4610 and HB 4611) and the expansion of the Homestead Property Tax Credit (HB 4370) passed 62-44; the income tax rollback passed 61-45 and HB 4737 concerning warranties passed 101-5.

Rep. Harvey Santana (D-Detroit) was the only Democrat to vote for many of the bills other than the legislation regarding warranties.

Rep. Jeff Farrington (R-Utica) said the plan would "literally" pave our roads.

"Today we vote for investing in our future," he said. "We vote for tax relief for seniors, and families. ... We are choosing to govern. Today the residents of Michigan have a good roads solution."

Now the question is what the Senate and Mr. Snyder will do. The speculation was rife Wednesday night that Mr. Snyder could relent on his concerns about the impact to the General Fund.

"Forward progress is a good thing, though (the) governor does have some concerns," Snyder press secretary Sara Wurfel said, saying any solution must be "fiscally responsible."

Said Mr. Meekhof in a statement: "I am happy the House sent over an idea for the Senate to consider. I look forward to talking with the governor and legislative leaders about the proposal. I have not had an opportunity to review the legislation, yet. The next step is for my fellow caucus members and I to review the details."

Business Groups Divided On Road Funding Plan

Business Leaders for Michigan came out strongly against the plan, saying it relies too heavily on the General Fund.

"We believe this is unsustainable and fiscally irresponsible," the group said in a statement. "The state General Fund has not grown in real terms since 1999. Redirecting $600 million from the General Fund to roads means fewer dollars would be available to make college more affordable, train Michigan workers and incent job creation. All are important to our state's future. We should not have to choose between them. The plan adopted by the House would fix one problem but create another."

The group called for the Senate to pass a plan that fixes roads without putting other important priorities at risk.

Also voicing concern, prior to the vote, was the Detroit Regional Chamber, at least on the idea of going beyond $400 million from the General Fund for roads. While the chamber urged the Legislature to act, it warned, "further dedication of the General Fund beyond the $400 million ... would be short-sighted and run counter to Michigan's best interests."

But the Michigan Chamber of Commerce hailed the House vote.

"We commend Speaker Cotter and the House GOP for taking action this evening to pass a comprehensive plan to fix Michigan's roads," said Michigan Chamber President and CEO Rich Studley in a statement. "Breaking the impasse on this key issue is an important and positive step forward."

And the National Federation of Independent Business-Michigan praised the lower reliance on higher taxes and fees than other plans.

"Speaker Cotter and House Republicans deserve credit for listening to what the voters said with the Proposal 1 defeat - more prioritization of spending and less reliance on funding roads with across the board tax hikes," said NFIB State Director Charlie Owens in a statement. "The House plan attempts to look at existing resources and balance any tax increases with cuts in other taxes."

Snyder Names Flint Water Task Force

With controversy growing over how the state handled the water crisis in Flint, Governor Rick Snyder on Wednesday named a five-member independent advisory task force to investigate actions by the state involving water use and testing in the city.

As Mr. Snyder made the announcement, U.S. Rep. Dan Kildee (D-Flint) and Senate Minority Leader Jim Ananich (D-Flint) called for the federal Environmental Protection Agency to investigate the controversy and its handling by the Department of Environmental Quality.

Mr. Snyder's announcement and the separate calls by Mr. Kildee and Mr. Ananich come as revelations of some internal emails from the DEQ brought into question how seriously some officials viewed the problem.

When the state announced earlier this month it would push for Flint to be reconnected to the Detroit Water and Sewerage System - the city's emergency manager decided in 2014 to draw water from the Flint River while the city prepared to join a pipeline drawing water from Lake Huron after no agreement could be reached on a short-term contract with the Detroit system - Mr. Snyder said he would create the independent body.

Along with looking into how the state handled the crisis, which after more than a year of complaints about water taste and smell broke wide open this past summer when tests showed elevated levels of lead in the water, the task force is to make recommendations to the state for "future guidelines to protect the health and safety of all state residents."

Co-chairing the task force will be former Senate Majority Leader Ken Sikkema, now with Public Sector Consultants, and former Democratic Rep. Chris Kolb, now with the Michigan Environmental Council.

Also named to the task force is Matthew Davis of the University of Michigan Health System, Eric Rothstein of the Galardi Rothstein Group and Lawrence Reynolds of Mott Children's Health Center of Flint.

Mr. Snyder said he wanted an "unbiased report" that looked at past actions affecting the Flint water situation and recommendations to help ensure that all state residents have access to safe drinking water. He said administration officials would cooperate fully with the task force.

There was no time frame set on when the task force would issue a report.

Mr. Ananich on Wednesday, meanwhile, released a letter to the U.S. EPA asking for a formal review of the DEQ's handling of the Flint water situation, emphasizing that the public needed to know if "the misapplication of federal water testing rules was intentional or due to negligence.

"Our citizens deserve answers," Mr. Ananich said.

And Mr. Kildee also wrote to the EPA, saying to ensure failures like that with the Flint system does not occur again, an investigation into how the crisis occurred is necessary.

"Unfortunately, the citizens of Flint are the victims in this situation. They deserve a thorough investigation and answers to these questions," Mr. Kildee said in his letter.

Snyder: Plan Could Mean More Students In Detroit Schools

One of the structural issues facing Detroit Public Schools is loss of students, but Governor Rick Snyder said his plan to restructure the district could reverse that.

The plan Mr. Snyder outlined this week (See Gongwer Michigan Report, October 19, 2015) would, among other things, split the district, with educational functions moving to a new entity (new co) and historical debt remaining with the current district (old co).

"By leaving the debt with old co, you can see improved performance and hopefully that will lead parents to say they want to see their children go to DPS," Mr. Snyder said Wednesday on Detroit Public Television's MiWeek.

Mr. Snyder said his plan is also designed to balance the needs of the district with the desire of those outside Detroit to have control of the funds funneled there.

Under the plan, the old district would remain under the current elected board, but the new entity would be headed by a board appointed in part by the governor and in part by the mayor. That board would, over six years, move to an elected body.

Mr. Snyder said he had comments from Detroit residents and officials that they would like to see the district remain under elected control, or at least move back to that more quickly.

"I tried to propose a balance because I got comments from the rest of the state that if the state's making a huge investment, they should have some control," he said.

As to the state funds headed to Detroit under Mr. Snyder's plan, he said it was not substantially different from what the state has done on school pensions since he took office.

"The $70 million compared to what we've been helping districts with MPSERS is actually a smaller obligation," he said of the state funds that have gone directly to the Michigan Public School Employees Retirement System.

And he said not assisting the district could mean more dire consequences.

"If it's not done in this fashion, it's ultimately going to end up in court, not necessarily in bankruptcy, but in court," he said.

Action also needs to come soon, he said. His proposal would have the changes in place before schools start their new fiscal year in July.

"The longer we wait, the better chance we have of having an uncontrolled financial default," he said.

Meekhof: Problems With DPS Plan; Wyant Should Not Be Fired

Senate Majority Leader Arlan Meekhof said Wednesday his caucus has a number of concerns with a plan floated by Governor Rick Snyder earlier this week to reform Detroit Public Schools which includes providing $715 million over 10 years to get the district out of debt out of debt.

"There's some things in there to like and a lot of things we have concern over. My concern, and my caucus' concern, has been getting an educational experience in front of these kids that gives them the best opportunity to be successful," Mr. Meekhof (R-West Olive) told reporters after session. "We have all these great, new, innovative and cool jobs coming to Detroit, and it would be a shame if we couldn't put an educational experience in front of these kids that gives them the ability to be eligible for those jobs."

He said he hasn't even talked about the money aspect of the proposal with his caucus given how new it is, but there are general concerns there too.

"We want to do the best by all taxpayers, but again, the effort is to try to get performance improvement for those kids so they can get those great jobs in Detroit," he said.

Asked whether he thought the proposal and the money associated with it would be a tough sell to his caucus, Mr. Meekhof said "almost everything" is a tough sell at this point.

"We've done some very innovative and creative things over the last four or five years, very successful, and now we're at some really tough stuff that we have to solve, but that's why people sent us here. And we're going to do it," he said.

FLINT WATER: Mr. Meekhof said he hasn't talked with Senate Minority Leader Jim Ananich (D-Flint) on whether a legislative hearing could be had to review the actions taken - or not - by varying authorities when it comes to the Flint water crisis, but Mr. Meekhof did not believe Department of Environmental Quality Director Dan Wyant need be fired over it.

"I support Dan. I think he's done a terrific job on a lot of other issues. This one is difficult for a host of reasons because a couple of local governments couldn't get their act together for some period of time," Mr. Meekhof said. "Decisions were made because they thought they needed to make those decisions separately, and the results weren't very good. There's a whole lot of blame to go around, but at this point we've fixed the problem."

Indeed, as Mr. Ananich has previously pointed out, the decision to switch the city's water source and then later deny a request to return to water from the Detroit system had gone through three state-appointed emergency managers. But Mr. Meekhof skirted on whether those people ought to be held responsible either.

"I don't know that the state knew that," he said to a question about the state needing to react if it in fact knew a public health crisis was growing. "If I'm understanding what's happening, they tested at the source, when they bring it in, and that was their only requirement. So after that, I'm not sure what their culpability would be."

Asked if the Legislature had the ability to hold emergency managers responsible for their actions while serving, Mr. Meekhof said he thought that to be the case but would also be interested in seeing "alternate opinions on that."

"I think Director Wyant and folks are doing an after-action and are concerned, and I want to see what their after-action reports are," he said.

Large School Bond Proposals, Road Millages Highlight November Ballot

Thirty-seven proposals for school bonds and nine proposals for new or increased local millages to fund road maintenance are among the many measures voters will see on their local ballots November 3.

Two cities - Keego Harbor in Oakland County and Portage in Kalamazoo County - will vote on whether to decriminalize possession of up to one ounce of marijuana on private property for those 21 and older.

Two other communities - Lathrup Village in Oakland County and Mount Pleasant - will decide on term limits for local elected officials.

Twenty-four school districts will vote on whether to renew their 18-mill property tax on all commercial and non-principal residences. Seven school districts will decide on passing sinking fund property taxes for infrastructure needs, and nine municipalities will vote on tax increases to fund public safety.

Several cities also will elect local elected officials. Among those generating interest at the Capitol are those for the Lansing and East Lansing city councils, as well as the Flint mayor's race, where Mayor Dayne Walling is trying to win re-election amid that city's water crisis.

A Gongwer News Service analysis of ballots in the communities that will hold elections showed 169 separate ballot proposals in school districts, municipalities and other voting jurisdictions.

The largest bond initiatives in school districts for infrastructure improvements:

- $185 million for Rochester schools
- $175 million for the Grand Rapids schools
- $128 million for the Portage schools and a separate bond for $16 million
- $67.5 million for the Saline schools

- $64.86 million for Kentwood schools
- $57.4 million for Woodhaven-Brownstown schools
- $55.24 million for the Kenowa Hills schools
- $49.55 million for the Owosso schools
- $44.6 million for the Hastings schools
- $32.6 million for the Grand Blanc schools
- $27 million and $10.2 million for the Dowagiac schools

Voting on new or increased road millages: Allen Park, Boston Township in Ionia County, Charleston Township in Kalamazoo County, Crystal Lake Township in Benzie County, Clare, Harbor Springs, Lapeer, Meade Township in Huron County and Pipestone Township in Berrien County. Grosse Ile Township in Wayne County also has an $18.8 million bond proposal to fund road and water needs.

Another six municipalities have road millage renewal questions in front of voters.

A complete chart of all local ballot proposals is available via the Gongwer website. Subscribers can sort the chart by voting jurisdiction, county and type of proposal.

Lower Fuel Prices Should Permit Savings On Winter Bills, State Says

The Michigan Agency for Energy released its energy appraisal for the upcoming winter on Wednesday, expecting residents to save big on their heating bills "thanks to lower fuel prices and predicted warmer-than-normal temperatures," the agency said.

Michigan's energy market is also expected to have adequate reserves and lower prices, the agency said in a statement. With the expectation of a return to normal winter weather, consumption of home heating fuels such as natural gas, propane and distillate will fall, it said, while demand for motor fuels such as gasoline and diesel will rise.

The National Weather Service projects Michigan to have a 40-to-60 percent chance of a warmer than normal winter, as well as a 40 percent chance of a drier than normal winter.

Michigan's total electricity sales in 2015 are expected to decrease by 0.2 percent from 2014 sales, assuming normal weather for the rest of the year, the agency determined. The projected decrease is driven by the industrial sector, whose usage is expected to fall by 4.4 percent, while residential demand is projected to decrease by 0.5 percent. The commercial sector expected to increase by 3.6 percent, it said.

Total natural gas sales are projected to increase by 2.1 percent in 2015 to 859.5 billion cubic feet assuming normal winter weather for the remainder of the year, the agency found. The increase is primarily due to consumption in the electric generation sector, it said.

"In recent years, the electric power industry has begun a shift toward natural gas generation, in part to reduce air pollutants and in part to take advantage of lower fuel costs," the agency said. "With an expected return to normal winter weather, natural gas consumption for the residential and commercial sectors should fall below 2014 levels."

The average residential winter natural gas bill for the four largest utilities in Michigan is expected to average $512, an 18 percent reduction from last year.

Michigan propane usage is projected to decrease by 5.8 percent in 2015 assuming normal winter weather for the remainder of the year. Colder than normal temperatures and a concerted effort to promote early fills caused propane use to increase 15 percent in 2014. Propane prices this winter should be the lowest Michigan has seen in many years, the agency said.

U.S. crude oil production averaged 8.7 million barrels per day in 2014, the highest production levels seen in decades. Continued growth is expected through the 2015 calendar year, reaching 9.2 million barrels per day in 2015, but is expected to retreat in 2016 as new investments are reduced in light of current crude oil prices.

Finally, gas sales in Michigan are projected to increase by 2.1 percent in 2015, marking the third-straight year of increased demand. Consumption increases in 2015 are likely due to significant decreases in the retail cost of gasoline that resulted from lower crude oil prices.

In fact, the AAA Fuel Report determined the average price of unleaded gasoline in Michigan was $2.48 on October 1, 2015, down 26 percent from the same time last year when it averaged $3.36.

Johnson: County Treasurer's Office Needs Relationship With Legislature, Governor

Sen. Bert Johnson is one of several candidates who have recently thrown their hat in the ring to be the next Wayne County Treasurer, and he said Wednesday his qualifications and relationships in the legislative and executive branch could make him a good candidate.

The Detroit Free Press reported that eight applications had been received for the position in the wake of the decision by current County Treasurer Raymond Wojtowicz to retire. Mr. Johnson (D-Highland Park) is said to be up against former Rep. Phil Cavanagh, a Democrat from Redford Township, as well as Etta Wilcoxon, who had previously run for Detroit city clerk and mayor; David Szymanski, who retired in September as former chief deputy county treasurer; Richard Hathaway, chief assistant to Prosecutor Kym Worthy; Beverly Kindle-Walker, who has run for county treasurer numerous times; James Williams IV, a former Wayne County Commission candidate; and George "Jerry" Paffendorf, who heads Detroit data firm Loveland Technologies.

"Michigan probably needs to undertake a very comprehensive rewrite of our property tax rules and our codes. It's how we fund our cities, how we fund our schools. I think it's a broken system," Mr. Johnson told Gongwer News Service Wednesday. "I think a lot of that begins with stabilization of what it means to be the Wayne County Treasurer's Office and the property tax ordinances down there that govern the area. Wayne County is centrally important to not just Southeast Michigan but Michigan as a whole because when Wayne County is broken, the entire state does not work."

Mr. Johnson said the county is losing so much money in property as vacant or abandoned lots continue to go up for auction, and he's interested in changing that.

"I actually think, from the perspective that Wayne County has been a leader over the years in county government, that that office is as important as the work the Wayne County Executive has to do, if it can ever get right," he said. "I think part of getting right is having a legislative relationship here with both the legislative and the executive. I think then Michigan becomes a better place for people to live, work, play and pray."

The Free Press said a three-person committee made up of Wayne County Clerk Cathy Garrett, Chief Probate Judge Freddie Burton Jr. and Ms. Worthy are expected to meet at 2 p.m. Thursday in room 700A of the Coleman A. Young Municipal Center to discuss applicants - a meeting that is open to the public.

Mr. Johnson said interviews are currently slated for early November, though it remains unclear if every candidate will be interviewed or just a select few the committee determines are the best fit.

Pavlov Announces Hearings On Academically Failing Schools

Sen. Phil Pavlov on Wednesday announced his Senate Education Committee will conduct a series of hearings, beginning November 4, on Michigan's academically failing schools.

The hearings will involve the committee and State Superintendent of Public Instruction Brian Whiston, Department of Education staff, Richard McLellan and former Oakland Schools Superintendent Vickie Markavitch. Invited guests also include State School Reform Officer Natasha Baker and Governor Rick Snyder's Senior Advisor for Education, Karen McPhee.

The hearings are slated to begin at 8:30 a.m., a statement from Mr. Pavlov's (R-St. Clair) office indicated, and official public notices will still be posted for each hearing as the meetings approach.

The purpose, Mr. Pavlov's office indicated, is to continue the conversation on the fiscal health of the state's public schools, especially in light of Mr. Snyder's recent proposal for Detroit Public Schools (See Gongwer Michigan Report, October 19, 2015) and work the Legislature completed earlier this year on an "early warning system" for financially distressed schools.

"The academic health of our schools is equally important, and given the Legislature's purview over elementary and secondary education provided for in the Michigan Constitution, it is appropriate that the Senate Education Committee should lead this discussion," the statement said.

Large-Scale Dog Breeder Regulations Clear Committee

A bill regulating large-scale dog breeding kennels with 15 intact female dogs used for breeding in the state would be required to pay a $500 fee under the H-3 version reported from the House Appropriations Committee Wednesday.

HB 4898, under its original version, would have required a $25 fee to be paid by the kennels.

The bill was sent to the full House 24-2, with Rep. Tim Kelly (R-Saginaw Township) and Rep. Jeff Irwin (D-Ann Arbor) voting no. Rep. Sarah Roberts (D-Saint Clair Shores) abstained.

Under the bill, the Department of Agriculture and Rural Development would receive $10,000 to implement the requirements.

However, the department would not perform regular inspections of the kennels and would largely rely on complaints and local animal control for kennel inspections.

The department would be required, 18 months after the bill is enacted and annually for four years after, to submit a report on:

- the number of registrations,
- the approximate number of animals housed at each registered location,

- the number of inspections performed,
- the number of complaints received,
- the number of penalties arising from complaints, and
- recommendations regarding staffing levels and best practices for working with partners.

Kennels found in violation of the regulations would be subject to a $5,000 fine.

Ms. Roberts offered two amendments on the bill but neither was adopted. The first would require the department to do unannounced inspections of at least 50 percent of the kennels.

"I feel the intent of the bill is good, and looking at some of these regulations they're a step in the direction. I just feel that there need to be inspections," she said.

The second amendment would have codified the amount of space that is in a dog enclosure.

In a statement from Rep. Al Pscholka (R-Stevensville), the chair of the committee, it said other Midwest states have regulations in place to prevent the establishment of "'puppy mills."

"I'm proud to vote on behalf of these animals," he said. "It's not often that this committee is in a position to take a first step on a moral or ethical issue. I'm thankful to Rep. McCready and the other advocates who brought the issue before us."

The bill establishes requirements for importation and sale of or resale of a dog, as well as vaccination and health certification requirements.

Committee Ties Homestead Credit To Inflation

Seniors and low-income residents would see more money back each year from the Homestead Property Tax Credit under legislation approved Wednesday by the House Tax Policy Committee.

The bill (HB 4871) would index the credit to inflation. The caps on property value and income would also increase with inflation under the plan.

The program provides a credit for property taxes exceeding 3.5 percent of household income, with seniors able to claim all of that and low-income families 60 percent. But current law caps the credit at $1,200, the property taxable value at $135,000 and income at $50,000 (those with incomes more than $40,000 lose 10 percent of the credit for each additional $1,000).

As reported from committee, the changes would begin with the 2016 tax year. The bill also makes clear that the Consumer Price Index would apply to total household resources.

Though the committee did not take testimony on the issue Wednesday, the Michigan Catholic Conference praised movement on the bill.

"This is good tax policy that addresses the economic reality for Michigan's low-income families and senior citizens," Michigan Catholic Conference Vice President for Public Policy and Advocacy Tom Hickson said in a statement. "Each year people see their day to day costs rise due to inflation; this policy addresses those increases and provides relief for those who experience daily the hardships of a strained family budget. House Bill 4871 is a welcome step toward recognizing the dignity of lower-income residents and seniors."

The committee also reported SB 349, moving up the date on which county treasurers can send delinquency notices; and SB 369 and SB 370, which exempt equipment used in producing alcoholic from sales and use taxes as industrial processing equipment.

Bill Would Allow More Residential Maintenance Work Without License

The House Regulatory Reform Committee on Wednesday took up a bill that would increase the current threshold for when licensure is required for performance of residential improvement work from $600 to $4,000.

Currently, a license is not needed by a person working on one project by one or more contracts if the aggregate contract price for labor, material and any other item is less than $600. HB 4282 increases that to $4,000.

And HB 4281 would modify how the funds in the Builders Enforcement Fund could be used. Under the bill, not more than 30 percent could be used for enforcement purposes and not more than 70 percent to issue grants to a statewide residential building and trade association for workforce development and outreach programs related to the residential building industry.

"This allows for those who do handyman work to not go through the entire licensing process for basically a handyman businesses," said Rep. Ray Franz (R-Onekama), the chair of the committee and sponsor of the bills.

Mr. Franz said the bill originally increased the dollar amount to $10,000, but after negotiations with the Department of Licensing and Regulatory Affairs agreed on $4,000.

Rep. Marilyn Lane (D-Fraser) said she would be more comfortable with a figure around $1,500. She said for $4,000, a significant amount of work can be done to a home. And without the license, the department would not be held accountable if something went wrong.

"It really takes away consumer protections," she said.

She also said she was concerned about the amount of funding the department would lose with the reduction of licensing fees.

Lee Schwartz, with the Home Builders Association of Michigan, spoke in support of the bill. He said when the legislation was introduced in previous sessions, the group was not in support, but the $600 threshold does not have many real-world applications.

ANIMAL SHELTERS: The committee also took up HB 4915, which would establish holding periods of animals for shelters in the state before other actions could be taken.

Rep. Mike McCready (R-Bloomfield Hills) said the intent of the bill was to allow local shelters to keep animals for longer than the holding period in the bill indicates. But the bill analysis said the holding period is a mandate and pre-empts local ordinances.

Mr. McCready said he would work with Rep. Andy Schor (D-Lansing), who asking about the holding period, to correct any issues.

Under the bill, for a dog that does not have current, traceable evidence of ownership and is not a candidate for adoption or a sterilization release program, the holding period would be four days. For dogs with traceable evidence of ownership, the period would be seven days.

For cats without current, traceable evidence of ownership, an animal control shelter or an animal protection shelter may observe a zero-day holding period for that cat if it is a candidate for adoption or a sterilization release program.

Amy Trotter with the Michigan United Conservation Clubs advocated for some changes to the bill. Ms. Trotter said the group would like to see the countdown of the holding period begin on the following business day from whenever an animal - particularly dog for her members - was found.

Ms. Trotter said when hunting with dogs, for example, sometimes the owner is not familiar with the area and doesn't immediately know what shelters to contact.

She also noted the group has seen those who oppose hunting with dogs take a collar off of a hunting dog before taking them to a shelter, which, under the bill, would reduce the holding period because the dog would not have traceable evidence of ownership.

Court To Coast Guard: Issue Bridge Permit Or Explain Why Not

The District of Columbia U.S. Court of Appeals has told the U.S. Coast Guard to either issue a navigation permit allowing construction of a second Ambassador Bridge span or explain why.

The order, issued Monday as part of a federal lawsuit the Detroit International Bridge Company has against Canada, requires the Coast Guard to issue a permit by January 4, 2016, or it and the litigants in the case shall explain why a permit has not been issued.

The order is the latest incident in the ongoing battle over new bridges between Detroit and Windsor. While the focus has been on getting final approvals and construction plans for development of the Gordie Howe International Bridge - promoted by Governor Rick Snyder, most Detroit-area business and the Canadian government - the owners and operators of the Ambassador Bridge have not given up efforts to build a second span to the 86-year old bridge.

This specific issue - various aspects of the controversy have been litigated - has to do with a navigation permit from the U.S. Coast Guard. Such a permit is needed before a bridge could be built.

In 2009, the Coast Guard issued a draft finding that construction of a second span would have no significant adverse environmental effects.

But it held off on issuing a navigation permit for regulatory reasons. A U.S. District Court found the Coast Guard was justified in delaying the permit.

Mickey Blashfield, spokesperson for the Detroit International Bridge Company, said in response to the order, "The 'delay game' has gone on long enough. We look forward to the Coast Guard's response to the court."

The permit would be an important step in gaining final approval for a new bridge, though a question of whether the Canadian government would permit the second span to proceed remains.

Senate OKs Blue Alert System

A "blue alert" system to broadcast information on attacks on police is heading to Governor Rick Snyder for final approval after getting final approval from the Senate Wednesday.

SB 336 saw unanimous approval to concur in a House substitute to the bill that includes a definition of "law enforcement officer" and includes language that a law enforcement agency investigating the incident had information identifying an individual as a suspect connected to the incident.

Under the bill, the Department of State Police would have to establish and maintain a Blue Alert Plan to disseminate information to radio and television stations when a law enforcement officer was killed or seriously injured by an offender who had presumably not yet been apprehended.

A House Fiscal Agency analysis of the bill determined the bill would have a "significant" fiscal impact on the department to the extent the State Police would encounter costs to develop and maintain such a system, estimated to include $10,000 to develop information technology systems, $10,000 for server storage and $300 a month to operate a plan in partnership with the Michigan Association of Broadcasters.

Various police organizations have spoken in support of the bill.

FAILURE TO YIELD: The chamber also passed by a margin of 36-2 legislation to prescribe a misdemeanor penalty for failure to yield to an approaching emergency vehicle (currently a civil infraction), as well as prescribe felony penalties for failure to yield to an emergency vehicle causing injury or death to emergency personnel (SB 421).

The misdemeanor would be punishable by a maximum fine of $500 and/or up to 90 days' imprisonment, while the felony for injury could be punishable by a maximum fine of $1,000 and/or up to two years' imprisonment and the felony for death could be punishable by a maximum fine of $7,500 and/or up to 15 years' imprisonment.

Its companion bill, SB 422, amends the Code of Criminal Procedure to add the felonies to sentencing guidelines.

Sen. Mike Shirkey (R-Clarklake) and Sen. Patrick Colbeck (R-Canton Township) voted in opposition to the bills.

MIOSHA Violations Cited in Ypsilanti, Holland

The Michigan Occupational Safety and Health Administration has issued citations for alleged violations of worker health provisions in two separate cases involving companies in Ypsilanti and Holland.

DMC Consultants, Inc., in Ypsilanti, is facing $265,200 in penalties after a health inspection at two duplexes in the city between July 8, 2015 and August 14, 2015 was conducted and found 14 alleged violations. Citations were issued for a total of seven willful/serious violations related to asbestos at 955 Madison Street, and another five for the same issue at 113 Bell Street.

The company has 15 working days from receipt of the citations to comply or contest the violations and penalties, MIOSHA, part of the Department of Licensing and Regulatory Affairs, said in a statement.

In Holland, Gates Electric, Inc. and Electrical Inspection Service, LLC face $357,000 in penalties. MIOSHA's Construction Safety and Health Division conducted a fatality inspection of the two companies at a Brink Warehouse between June 16, 2015 and August 19, 2015, during which time six alleged violations were identified.

Gates Electric was issued four willful and serious citations related to electrical installations while one willful citation was issued to Electric Inspection Service related to the General Duty Clause about following the National Electric Code and power being energized to work operation prior to the completion of installation.

Both companies also have 15 working days from receipt of the citations to respond.

Michigan In Top 15 For Energy Efficiency

Michigan is the 14th most energy efficient state in the nation, the American Council for an Energy-Efficient Economy said in its annual scorecard released Wednesday.

Michigan received 23.5 points out of a possible 50 points in the scorecard.

Among the highlights the group noted were the loan programs for small businesses for pollution prevention and energy efficiency. It also lauded the state for having energy efficiency standards for state buildings.

The group also praised the state for the energy efficiency measures included in PA 295 of 2008, which is currently under discussion for revision.

Among the areas where the state lagged was not having an energy efficiency standard for state fleets and adopting federal efficiency standards for both commercial and residential buildings.

But environmental interests raised issue with the rating though, noting that Michigan's ranking slipped from 12th place.

"Michigan's energy efficiency standard has saved families in Detroit and across the state billions of dollars on their energy bills and we must build upon this progress, not turn back the clock," said Guy Williams, president and CEO of Detroiters Working for Environmental Justice, in a statement. "Michigan families face the highest electricity costs in the Midwest and we must protect and expand our energy efficiency standard to rein in rising costs."

Committee Roundup

SENATE FAMILIES, SENIORS AND HUMAN SERVICES: The committee reported a package of bills (SB 517, SB 518, SB 519 and SB 520) that would amend various statutes related to child support, specifically that a Michigan tribunal issuing a spousal-support order consistent with state law have continuing, exclusive jurisdiction to modify that order throughout the existence of the support obligation. Similarly, a tribunal could not modify a spousal-support order issued by a tribunal of another state or foreign county having continuing, exclusive jurisdiction over that order.

The bills are to ensure the state is in compliance with current federal law on such matters or else risk losing about $175 million in child support funding for the current fiscal year. There is also a larger potential fiscal risk in that if the bills are not passed, the state may not be in compliance with policies governing the Temporary Assistance for Needy Families block grant, risking another $775 million in federal funding, a Senate Fiscal Agency analysis of the bills determined.

The bills were reported with unanimous approval and no amendments.

Campaign Notes

ROAD ASSOCIATION PAC ENDORSES HOWELL, STOREY: The County Road Association of Michigan RUSH-PAC announced its endorsements of candidates in the special election primary on Wednesday, choosing Republican Gary Howell of North Branch in the 82nd House District and Jim Storey of Holland in the 80th House District.

Mr. Howell is running to fill the vacancy caused by former Rep. Todd Courser's resignation and Mr. Storey is running to fill the vacancy caused by Rep. Cindy Gamrat's expulsion. The PAC also endorsed Democrat David LaGrand of Grand Rapids in the 75th House District.

Mr. LaGrand is running to fill the vacancy caused by former Rep. Brandon Dillon becoming chair of the Michigan Democratic Party.

"With legislators still unable to pass the type of road funding package needed in 2015, now more than ever RUSH-PAC recognizes the importance of supporting candidates who understand how important Michigan's local road system is to our economy and quality of life," said Denise Donohue, RUSH-PAC treasurer and director of the County Road Association of Michigan.

LASINSKI OFFICIALLY ANNOUNCES CAMPAIGN FOR 52ND: Democrat Donna Lasinski of Scio Township officially announced her campaign to run for the 52nd House District on Wednesday. Rep. Gretchen Driskell (D-Saline) currently holds the seat but is forgoing re-election to run for the 7th U.S. House District.

Ms. Lasinski currently serves as the Ann Arbor School Board treasurer and has a long career of education advocacy and volunteer service around Washtenaw County.

"I'm very excited to be running to serve you in Lansing. With a record of making positive change, I will bring a strong voice for our communities to Lansing," she said in a statement. "Together we can secure our kids' future and make sure everyone has access to the quality education they deserve."

Capital Notebook

PORTAGE BUSINESS EXPANSION: The Michigan Strategic Fund approved an $875,000 grant for Pro Services Inc., which provides skilled trades and maintenance technicians to a range of industries, as the company plans to construct a new Center of Excellence and corporate headquarters in Portage.

The project expects to generate a total capital investment of $3.9 million and create 175 jobs, the Michigan Economic Development Corporation said in a statement about the expansion.

MORENCI, ALLOUEZ TOWNSHIP COMMUNITY GRANTS: The Michigan Strategic Fund approved a $250,000 community development block grant fund for job training needed for a KAMCO Industries, Inc. expansion project that includes the acquisition of a building in Morenci. The project expects to generate $22.7 million in private investment and create 60 jobs. Michigan was chosen over other locations in the Midwest, the Michigan Economic Development Corporation noted.

And Keweenaw County was awarded a $20,000 community development block grant fund for the Keweenaw County Mountain Lodge Study Project located in Allouez Township. The project is a best-use study to consider possible change in ownership or operations, expecting to result in future job creation, the MEDC said.

MEDICAID IN THE CLOUD: The state has moved its Medicaid Management Information System to cloud-based servers, which officials said would both improve service delivery and cut costs.

"It's important for Michigan to look for more and better ways to take advantage of technology to improve services for our residents," Governor Rick Snyder said in a statement. "This is an innovative approach, allowing us to more efficiently share information and resources in real-time, helping residents get the health care they need."

The system allows real-time access to data and allows Michigan and Illinois, one of the partners in the project, to share information.

FLU SEASON: The state has confirmed the first three cases of influenza for the season, Department of Health and Human Services officials said in a release Wednesday calling for residents to be vaccinated.

Officials said there was one case of influenza A (H1N1) and three cases of influenza A (H3N2) found October 4-10. The release did not say where the cases were but said all were adults.

The first name of Oakland Circuit Judge Jeffrey Mattis was misspelled in Tuesday's report.

The initial version of Wednesday's House Activity Report incorrectly said HB 4268 had been enrolled. The enrolled bill was actually HB 4286. The final version of the House Activity Report has been corrected.

Volume #54, Report #241 -- Wednesday, December 9, 2015

House Eliminates Straight-Ticket Voting, Adds 'Secure' No-Reason Absentee

The House narrowly approved a bill to eliminate straight-ticket voting Wednesday and also cleared legislation establishing "secure" no-reason absentee voting with Democrats mostly in staunch opposition to both during a long and contentious session.

Seven hours passed with the House mostly at a standstill before it finally took up SB 13 to eliminate straight-ticket voting - a voter's ability to vote for a slate of candidates from one party by checking off a single box - and HB 4724, which would allow a voter to bring identification to their local clerk's office to receive an absentee ballot.

SB 13 passed with the bare minimum amount of votes needed, 54-51 (there are still three vacancies in the House). All Democrats voted no and Republicans Rep. John Bizon of Battle Creek, Rep. Ben Glardon of Owosso, Rep. Martin Howrylak of Troy, Rep. Dave Pagel of Berrien Springs and Rep. Phil Potvin of Cadillac also voted no.

HB 4724 fared a bit better, passing 59-46, with Democrats Rep. Jeff Irwin of Ann Arbor and Rep. Derek Miller of Warren voting yes with most Republicans and Republicans Rep. Thomas Hooker of Byron Center and Mr. Potvin voting no with the rest of the Democrats.

Democrats said the straight-ticket elimination would disenfranchise voters, particularly those of color in populous urban precincts, and the no-reason absentee bill requires a voter to go to their clerk's office before every election to get an absentee ballot.

Mr. Howrylak said he voted against SB 13 because it includes a $5 million appropriation, which makes it referendum proof. He said legislation passed should be able to stand on its own merits.

Rep. Pam Faris (D-Clio) offered amendments to SB 13 to strip the appropriations - a $1 million appropriation was originally in the bill but later removed through a Republican amendment - and then asked for a roll call vote.

Her request was denied and Minority Floor Leader Sam Singh (D-East Lansing) then called a point of order asking for a roll call vote. His motion was ruled not proper. Democrats said they were told he did not ask a question.

Mr. Singh said: "I am using this point of order to ask you to listen to one-fifth of the members here to demand a record roll call vote at the Constitution demands."

The House then went at ease while House Republicans and their staff huddled with House Clerk Gary Randall. Mr. Singh's request was not granted.

"They did this because they want the debate struck from the journal. Why strike Singh's point of order? They have the majority and can vote in favor of the chair's ruling," said Katie Carey, spokesperson for House Democrats of the Republicans.

The bill still includes a $5 million appropriation making it referendum proof. Voters rejected a similar law in 2002.

Rep. Leslie Love (D-Detroit) said barriers should not be put in front of those wanting to vote.

"I take this very personally, because one of the most proud moments I had when I turned 18 is when I went to register to vote. And I took that responsibility very seriously, because I understand the legacy and the history," she said of African-Americans fighting for the right to vote.

Mr. Irwin called the bill electioneering. He also said the bill would lead to longer wait lines at the polls on Election Day.

"If the average wait time is 22 minutes, and some of these folks aren't waiting at all, that means a whole of other folks are waiting a whole lot longer than 22 minutes," he said. "And who are these people? The people who are waiting are the people who live in crowded precincts. They live in crowded urban precincts with more voters, more voters per voting booth, more voters per poll worker and that is why they have to wait. ... Sometimes they wait hours to vote."

Mr. Singh said Republicans were backing the bill because they have not been able to win education board seats.

"If you can't win an election fair and square, let's steal the election. And that is what happening here today," he said.

But Rep. Al Pscholka (R-Stevensville) said straight-ticket voting is an antiquated practice from when "party bosses" actually created ballots.

"It is time for change. And it is time for choice," he said.

And Rep. Lisa Posthumus Lyons (R-Alto), sponsor of the House bill and chair of the House Elections Committee, said voters should choose candidates based on people, not parties. And she said the no-reason absentee measure would allow for more people to spend more time with their ballots if necessary.

"The simple truth is this is good policy. It's not pro-Democrat, it's not pro-Republican. It's pro-voter," Ms. Lyons said. "Together these bills are good policy. Together they are the right policy. They complement each other and I ask you for your vote on both."

Amendments adopted to HB 4724 would eliminate a provision that would have required the Election Day rule against campaigning within 100-feet of a polling location to apply to a clerk's office during the 45 days preceding the election.

Another amendment states it is the Legislature's intent that the law is invalid if a court finds it is invalid.

Democrats attempted to amend SB 13 at least 19 times, and all failed. Many of the amendments would have tie-barred the legislation to other elections reforms the Democrats support. One amendment would have allowed a person to use their concealed pistol license as voter identification and another would have allowed disabled persons or seniors to skip the lines at the polls.

Maturen Leading House Workgroup On 'Dark Stores'

Rep. Dave Maturen has begun heading up a workgroup on what to do, if anything, about how large retail stores' property is assessed with the goal of introducing legislation in the first quarter of 2016.

Mr. Maturen (R-Vicksburg) owns a real estate appraisal firm.

It underscores that one major issue of 2016 is likely to be whether state law should be changed to address "dark stores," the phenomenon in which large big box stores see lower than expected property valuations because the property is valued based on comparable sales of other properties instead of true cash value.

Rep. Jeff Farrington (R-Utica), chair of the House Tax Policy Committee, said Wednesday there is a problem. Local governments say the current method of valuing large retail store properties is eroding their tax base.

"Anyone with reasonable perspective understands there is an issue, the question is how we solve that problem?" Mr. Farrington said after his committee concluded a second hearing on the issue Wednesday.

Mr. Farrington does not think legislation previously introduced (HB 4909 and SB 524) adequately address the issue. Those bills would require assessing such properties at their highest and best use and bar the use of negative deed restrictions.

Local government advocates and officials told the Tax Policy Committee on Wednesday that without changes to the method of assessing large retail stores' property, they would have to either cut services or increase millages to maintain services.

Cities, counties, villages and townships have mounted a campaign to change state law on how local assessors value those properties following Michigan Tax Tribunal decisions requiring the comparable sale method to be used. Local governments say the reduced valuations are spreading to the point where revenues are falling everywhere.

Three Rivers Mayor Tom Lowry told the committee as Tax Tribunal decisions have been made, the city and its surrounding townships have had to give back money to big box stores, and some of the decisions have been retroactive.

He said the city is approaching 10 percent of its General Fund budget being used on the "dark store theory."

Steve Currie, with the Michigan Association of Counties, said the group would like to see a restoration of a "fair system" in assessing property.

"The dark store theory the Michigan Tax Tribunal has adopted has disrupted what is a fair system ...and extended special privileges to a sector of the market," he said.

MAC, which spoke to the committee alongside the Michigan Townships Association and the Michigan Municipal League, said the solution to the problem is to prevent deed restrictions that "distort" the market and require use of cost, sales and income assessment approaches based on the particular circumstances.

However, Tricia Kinley, with the Michigan Chamber of Commerce, said the big store taxpayers have challenged local governments on assessments and won. Also, on the deed restriction issue, she said the owner of a property could choose to sell or not sell to whomever they want.

"This has been characterized, or mischaracterized, as a new or dark store theory," she said. "But these taxpayers that are the focus of this discussion have legitimately challenged over assessments and the Michigan Tax Tribunal has repeatedly found that the assessment approach of valuing these retail operations by local governments over recent years is not valid."

But she also said if abuses are pointed out, the Chamber will consider the issue with an open mind.

HICA Extension Heads For Senate Floor

The Senate Appropriations Committee moved quickly on Wednesday to advance a bill extending the sunset on the Health Insurance Claims Assessment that generates matching federal funds for Medicaid.

The HICA tax has been a thorn in the side of legislators, especially Republicans, essentially since its inception. The assessment imposes a 1 percent tax on all claims paid on or after January 1, 2012, for health and medical services provided in Michigan to Michigan residents. It was created to provide funding for Medicaid, but the tax has long fell short of its anticipated revenue.

The House just passed HB 5105 on Tuesday to extend HICA into 2025 despite very vocal opposition from usual allies of the Republican majority like the Michigan Chamber of Commerce and the Michigan Manufacturers Association, the latter of which again testified in opposition to the bill in the Senate committee on Wednesday.

"HICA is a Michigan-only tax. It's in great contrast to the many strides that have been made in the past couple years that have positioned Michigan as a leader in the nation and the world," said Delaney McKinley of the Michigan Manufacturers Association. "Action now on the HICA tax is unnecessary and premature."

Ms. McKinley estimated the cost to employers yearly is about $250 million, and if the sunset is extended for another eight years, it would be an additional $2 billion for health care purchasers, she said.

The bill, a last-minute addition to the committee's agenda, was reported to the full Senate on a narrow 9-5 vote. Sen. Peter MacGregor (R-Rockford), Sen. John Proos (R-St. Joseph), Sen. Tonya Schuitmaker (R-Lawton), Sen. Mike Green (R-Mayville) and Sen. Mike Nofs (R-Battle Creek) voted in opposition, and Sen. Hoon-Yung Hopgood (D-Taylor) and Sen. David Knezek (D-Dearborn Heights) abstained from voting. Sen. Mike Shirkey (R-Clarklake) was absent from committee.

Rep. Al Pscholka (R-Stevensville), chair of the House Appropriations Committee and sponsor of the bill, said he has been disappointed in the stance the Chamber has taken.

"This is not a tax increase, this is a freeze in a fee," he told reporters on the House floor. "I don't know what lobby math can be used to try to make this look like an increase. I don't know if this is Washington, D.C., math. This is the same rate going into 2025."

Mr. Pscholka said there would be huge budget implications if the nearly $400 million raised in revenue through the fee no longer existed.

"This is the same organization that asks us to pass a 15-cent per gallon gas tax increase. And they want business tax credits for large manufacturers. They don't like a tax freeze and they don't like the Switch deal," Mr. Pscholka said. "This is really odd to me that the Chamber of Commerce is coming out for tax increases and against tax freezes and reductions. That is where they are on those four issues."

Sen. Dave Hildenbrand (R-Lowell), chair of the Senate Appropriations Committee, said there are members within the Senate Republican Caucus who have "a lot of concerns" about the bill, "but we wanted to move the process forward" and have a full conversation in caucus.

He said he was still optimistic that the bill could be out before the end of the calendar year but wanted to see where other members of his caucus were on the bill.

Asked if keeping the tax was the fiscally responsible thing to do, Mr. Hildenbrand said, "Everything can always be changed down the road. The sunset is set to expire December 2017, so we're kind of getting in front of that. But we can always turn a bill in down the road to change the rate, do a different set of things.

"So this is just the proposal that's out there right now that the governor is supporting as well, that we can get some certainty in the short-term and down the road we can change it if that's the will of those serving at that time," he said.

UNFUNDED ACCRUED LIABILITIES: The committee also approved a bill (SB 292) that would require the governor to include statements of annual required employer contributions toward total unfunded retiree health care and pension legacy costs for each department, and for the legislative and judicial branches as well, at the time the budget is provided to the Legislature and fiscal agencies.

Sen. John Proos (R-St. Joseph), sponsor of the bill, said he recognized that that has been provided already by the governor in at least the past two budget cycles, but wanted to put the requirement into statute for future governors.

"This governor has been great to put it in the budget. We'd like to see that going forward," he said of his bill. "I think this is responsible budgeting (and) will ensure future legislators have full knowledge about post-employment benefits and how we're going to pay those down."

The bill saw unanimous approval from the committee.

CAPITAL OUTLAY PROJECTS: Also seeing unanimous approval from the committee was HB 4095 to appropriate $400 for four $100 planning authorizations.

The governor's fiscal year 2014-15 capital outlay budget recommendation for the State Building Authority-financed projects include new capital outlay planning authorizations for Ferris State University (Swan Building annex renovations), Lake Michigan College (Napier Academic Building renovation and upgrade) and West Shore Community College (technical center renovation and addition).

On March 11, 2015, the Joint Capital Outlay Subcommittee approved fiscal year 2014-15 planning authorizations as recommended by the governor, but the House passed this bill earlier this month to change them to a supplemental appropriation for fiscal year 2015-16.

House Continues Work On Switch Tax Bills

The House continues to work with its members to get the votes needed to pass legislation that would provide sales, use and property tax exemptions for data centers in the state, something inspired by Switch, a Nevada-based center looking to move into West Michigan.

The House Tax Policy Committee on Wednesday reported the Senate bills (SB 616, SB 617 and SB 618) to join the House bills (HB 4074, HB 4075 and HB 4076) on the floor.

Changes to the Senate bills include extending the sunset to 2035 like the House bills, and other more technical changes. The first two bills were reported 8-5 with Rep. Pat Somerville (R-New Boston), Rep. Martin Howrylak (R-Troy), Rep. Gary Glenn (R-Midland), Rep. Lee Chatfield (R-Levering) and Rep. Jim Townsend (D-Royal Oak) voting no.

On the final bill, the same five members voted no, and Rep. Brandt Iden (R-Oshtemo Township) abstained.

The bills have not yet come up on the House floor and Rep. Jeff Farrington (R-Utica), chair of the Tax Policy Committee, said there are a variety of different issues for members. Those include making the bills "fair" for all data centers and answering whether the tax changes are a "carve-out" for one industry.

"My take on it is it is new tax policy for an industry that didn't exist 15 years ago," Mr. Farrington said. "And there's been discussion on why would you change this for one industry? And I retort back banks are taxed differently, service companies are taxed different, we have a complex tax code that makes a lot of changes based on what a company does."

Rep. Al Pscholka (R-Stevensville), chair of the House Appropriations Committee, said he is still waiting to see the hit to the General Fund the bills could create.

"I am hearing a number of $25 million, it gets my attention," he said. "Anything more than that and I start to get a little worried."

Mr. Pscholka said there are General Fund hits in other bills as well, like the aviation fuel legislation (SB 418, SB 425, SB 426, SB 612, SB 613 and SB 614) sitting on the House floor. Though he said that should have been done "years ago."

Still, "We've got to be careful," he said.

Mr. Farrington said he expects changes on the House floor to the bills.

The Michigan Data Center Alliance has been lobbying for a "fairness" amendment that would keep all current data centers in the state paying the same taxes as they are now, but allow new data centers going forward to get the exemptions.

Under the bills, to get the property tax exemptions, a local community would have to approve the center.

Mr. Farrington said the amendment is not bad policy, but local governments and the data centers are not coming to a compromise.

"At the end of the day, this isn't the state's money, this is the local's money," he said. "When we did PPT reform a couple of years ago, we reimbursed it all. We are not in this case. I think the best and more fair way to do it is to leave it up to the locals to decide if they want those jobs in their community or not."

But the alliance is calling for the House not to act on the property tax piece (SB 618 and HB 4076).

"We are deeply dismayed that members appear willing to give special treatment to an out of state company over those that have been paying taxes, creating jobs and playing by the rules here in Michigan for years," Yan Ness, spokesperson for the alliance, said in a statement. "We urge lawmakers in both parties to delay action on a flawed personal property tax bill that creates an uneven playing field. Lawmakers must recognize that ramming through bad policy in the frenzy to bring one company to Michigan could drive many other existing businesses out of our state."

Rep. Andy Schor (D-Lansing), sponsor of the personal property tax bill in the House, said the data center group is looking to strip the bill of the local control piece so the date centers won't have to pay property taxes on new investments. And, he said, the amendment they want to see would actually reimburse local governments for their property taxes through a formula.

"I think the personal property tax bill is going to be held back because there is more work that needs to be done on it to make everybody comfortable. You've got the locals, you've got the data centers, there's just a variety of questions," he said.

Mr. Schor said he is disappointed it is his bill that will not pass. But noted he is not in the majority so does not know for sure.

Bill Would Revise Sinking Fund Millages For Schools, Likely To Move In '16

The House Appropriations Committee on Wednesday discussed a bill that would allow local sinking fund millages to be used for security and technology purposes, and revise the amount of mills and time it could be authorized.

Rep. Al Pscholka (R-Stevensville), the chair of the committee, said he won't move HB 4388 this year, but it will likely move out of the committee in early 2016.

Currently schools are able to use sinking fund millages for school construction and repairs and to purchase real estate. Under current law, sinking fund millages can be authorized for 5 mills and a duration of 20 years.

Under HB 4388, sinking fund millages would also be able to cover security improvements and technology, and the fund could be authorized for up to 3 mills and 10 years.

Rep. Michael McCready (R-Bloomfield Hills), sponsor of the bill, said the legislation provides a needed update to the law.

Mr. Pscholka said the change fits with the spirit of Proposal A of 1994, and said the business community has come on board with the changes because it is good for property tax payers.

"As you look at the numbers, this is actually good for property tax payers, whether you are business payers or residential payers," he said. "What we are doing here by changing the terms, reducing the millage rate, but allowing for a couple of other uses, is actually good for property taxes."

Mr. McCready also said the change in the time frame of sinking funds would simply require schools to make the case to voters more frequently that the funds are needed.

The Detroit Regional Chamber supports the bill and the Michigan Chamber of Commerce is neutral.

Rep. Pam Faris (D-Clio) asked why buses, or transportation, are not a part of the expanded uses of sinking funds.

Mr. Pscholka said, practically, the bill would not pass if that were included.

"If you start adding a laundry list of items, you will lose votes and we won't be able to pass the bill," he said.

Chris Glass with the West Michigan Talent Triangle, representing Kent, Ottawa and Muskegon Intermediate School Districts, said there has been an increase in technology needs among school districts, and when using bonds to fund short term capital, like technology, schools and taxpayers end up paying more with interest and other fees.

Those opposed to the bill include the Great Lakes Education Project and the Michigan Association of Public School Academies. Charter schools do not have the authority to create sinking funds.

A House Fiscal Agency analysis shows currently 170 districts levy sinking funds, and 12 of those districts levy more than 3 mills. The analysis says if the revised cap were in effect now, it would have reduced revenue for those 12 districts by $2.8 million.

The analysis also says the reduction in the duration of the sinking fund would likely just make districts put the question on the ballot every 10 years instead of 20, instead of resulting in any real revenue reduction.

Senate Panel Hears No-Fault Proposal To Require Health Insurance To Pay First

Legislation that would require health insurance coverage to pay an injured motorist first before automotive no-fault insurance would pay was presented to the Senate Insurance Committee Wednesday and failed to get much support.

Also considered was legislation that would have the Department of State collect the fees paid to the Michigan Catastrophic Claims Association, which also got little support.

The committee took testimony only on SB 313, SB 412 and SB 413, all sponsored by Sen. Marty Knollenberg (R-Troy). The bills are the latest in an ongoing series of efforts to find some way to change Michigan's automotive no-fault insurance to reduce premium costs.

Mr. Knollenberg told the committee that, while most complaints on no-fault have focused on the MCCA, the real problem the system has is with personal injury protection coverage. When compared to PIP costs in other states, Mr. Knollenberg said, PIP in Michigan is two times to 10 times higher than those states.

SB 313 would require essentially a type of coordination of benefits, with an injured motorist having to have his or her health insurance pay for care before the PIP coverage pays for it. Mr. Knollenberg acknowledged the bill could cause some cost increases for health insurance, but said it would save money overall.

The legislation would not affect those whose health insurance is through Medicare or Medicaid, and it would not affect persons whose health insurance comes through self-insured plans.

Aside from auto insurance companies, however, the bill was opposed by most of the people attending the meeting, including automotive companies, consumers groups trying to preserve no-fault and health insurance companies.

Steve Sinas, legal counsel for the Coalition Protecting Auto No-Fault, said the bill would take away the option motorists now have to purchase coordinated coverage - which does require use first of health insurance before PIP covers an injury - or uncoordinated coverage, which draws from PIP for automotive injuries. That would rob customers of a choice they now have, he said.

Plus, for those legislators critical of the federal Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act, the legislation would in fact make the state more dependent on the controversial health care system, he said.

That brought a sharp retort from Sen. Margaret O'Brien (R-Portage), who said consumers cannot now effectively choose to use their health insurance, and that any attempt to tie the legislation to the ACA was "hypocritical."

Margaret Kroese with the Michigan Brain Injury Providers Council said the bill opens too many pitfalls to patients seeing interruptions in coverage they need. A health insurance company could decide to stop covering for an injury because in its view the treatment is no longer medically needed, but the auto insurance company could refuse to pick up coverage because not all the medical benefits have been used up.

And Mark Cook, vice president at Blue Cross Blue Shield of Michigan, said the bill could force a huge increase in the cost of health insurance that would be borne largely by companies.

But a large number of companies and individuals wouldn't even be affected if they are on self-insured plans or government-provided coverage. Mr. Cook said "north of 60 percent" of the more than 4.5 million people who have BCBSM insurance participate through self-insured plans.

Dominick Pallone with the Michigan Association of Health Plans also said the bill would force a big increase in health insurance premiums, but how large was unknown because the health insurance companies did not know what the actual costs of covering automotive injuries would be.

In terms of SB 412 and SB 413, Pete Kuhnmuench of the Insurance Institute of Michigan said his group opposed the bills because even if the payments are shifted, the insurance companies retain all the liability for a specific insurance claim.

The Department of State opposed the bills because of the difficulty of managing them. Registrations on some vehicles, particularly historic vehicles, are in place for 10 years. And some persons, such as disabled veterans, pay nothing for their registrations, the committee was told.

Conforme: EAA Has Made Changes Needed To Improve

The Education Achievement Authority has already moved three of its 15 schools out of the bottom 5 percent, and changes are in place to move the rest over the next five years, Chancellor Veronica Conforme told the Senate Education Committee on Wednesday.

Ms. Conforme acknowledged there were substantial problems with both academics and fiscal controls when the entity intended to be a statewide reform district launched in 2012, but she told the committee she has spent the last year implementing changes to correct those problems.

"There's no doubt the EAA has had its share of challenges since its inception," she said.

"Our mission is to turn the lowest performing schools into the highest performing schools," she said. "By working with the EAA, we expect them to be over the 50 percent line in five years."

To questions particularly from Sen. David Knezek (D-Dearborn Heights), Ms. Conforme acknowledged the district had lost students and had a substantial turnover of teachers and principals.

The loss of teachers and principals, she said, was a function of the locale.

All of Detroit's public schools have been losing students, she said. In addition to trying to improve educational outcomes to keep students, she said the district is working to improve safety at its schools. And a recent survey showed that effort was paying off.

"Retention is a challenge in all of Detroit and we have to continue to focus on that," she said of the struggle to keep teachers. In addition to offering a higher starting salary than Detroit Public Schools and many other districts in the region, she said the district is implementing programs to develop teacher leadership to make the job more attractive.

The efforts are starting to pay off, she said, with retention rates up to about 70 percent, a 10-point increase.

"So we have to think of more ways of supporting and rewarding them," she said.

But she said the principal changes were in part by design.

"Leaders we're hiring for a particular standard," she said. The district has been seeking new principals with experience turning a school around.

"This work is incredibly hard and learning on the job is really hard to do," she said.

Administrators also face more stringent standards under the district's evaluation system, she said. For teachers, 50 percent of their evaluation is based on student growth, but for administrators, it is 60 percent. The latter, she said, have more control over the environment that leads to education improvement.

Among other differences, principals in the district have full personnel control in their buildings, she said.

Ms. Confrome said the district was also taking efforts to reverse the trend Mr. Knezek pointed out that many of the EAA schools are showing little academic improvement.

Part of the problem, she said, was the computer system that had been the initial focus of the reform effort in the district.

The system had been designed to allow students to advance at their own pace, and original Chancellor John Covington had said the program was the key to pulling the schools out of the academic hole.

But Ms. Conforme said Mr. Covington had overstated its abilities and that the system, as implemented, actually detracted from education.

"There was an over reliance on technology, technology that was not properly set up," she said. "More focus should have been spent on developing and implementing a curriculum so the technology could have been used well."

Ms. Conforme said she has made those changes.

The district, she said, has been looking at best practices around the country and, to the extent possible, implementing those ideas.

For high school students, the district is also working to develop better career and technical education programs, she said.

"One of the things we need is a metric that tells us whether they're workforce ready and what does that mean," she said.

The district is working with a variety of partners, and looking for more, to develop both the programs and the measures, she said.

The district is working on a variety of efforts to get parents more involved, she said. Among those is having students run parent-teacher conferences, which she said gives the students more ownership over their progress.

Ms. Conforme also acknowledged the fiscal questions and allegations of criminal misconduct that are dogging the district.

"It is appalling that anyone entrusted with educating our children would use these resources for personal gain," she said.

In addition to cooperating with a FBI investigation into some former leaders at the district, Ms. Conforme said the district had implemented new purchasing processes, as well as controls over credit card use and travel, designed to reduce opportunities for impropriety.

"It's nice to see that we're trying to move forward in a productive way," Mr. Knezek said.

Senate OKs Independent Expenditure Committee Bill Amid Criticism

Senate Democrats slammed majority Republicans for their support of a bill that Republicans say merely codifies the U.S. Supreme Court's decision on First Amendment rights in its Citizens United decision in 2010, but Democrats said the bill goes further than even the high court intended.

Citizens United essentially asserted government could not restrict independent political expenditures by a nonprofit corporation, which has also been extended to for-profit corporations, labor unions and other associations. The bill by Sen. Dave Robertson (R-Grand Blanc), SB 638[redacted], creates independent expenditure committees within the Michigan Campaign Finance Act and allows those committees to make unlimited contributions to other such committees.

In doing so, the legislation merely codifies existing practice, some legal experts and supporters of the bill have both said (See Gongwer Michigan Report, December 8, 2015). But Senate Democrats on Wednesday said such a characterization was being disingenuous.

"Let's be very clear here. This has nothing to do with speech and everything to do with power, specifically the power of those who have it and are rigging the system against those who don't," Senate Minority Leader Jim Ananich (D-Flint) said in a no-vote explanation on the floor. "This legislation can be compared to seeing a building on fire and deciding that dousing it in gasoline is the best way to put it out.

"Everyday, regular folks already don't believe their government works for them. This bill will not help change that perception," he said.

Sen. Steve Bieda (D-Warren), in an impassioned speech against the bill, said codifying and expanding the reach of Citizens United "flies in the face of what Michigan citizens actually want."

"Michiganders do not want more money in politics. Michiganders do not want corporations interfering with elections. What they do want is something better than an F when it comes to transparency," Mr. Bieda said. "This bill firmly points Michigan in the wrong direction towards a future of dark money and convoluted electoral processes."

Sen. Curtis Hertel Jr. (D-East Lansing) said the bill would expand the loopholes of Michigan's already dated campaign finance laws, allowing Super PACs to get involved with referendums and ballot initiatives.

"No one outside of this chamber, and I mean no one, believes we need more special interest money in politics. Only those that are sitting here and benefit from it believe that is the case," Mr. Hertel said. "We talk a lot about accountability and metrics in this chamber. We talk a lot about reviewing things. We were ranked dead last in accountability. We're just going to make it worse with this bill."

Still, the bill was passed on a 25-13 vote and given immediate effect, the latter of which the Senate has largely refrained from doing this term in an effort to help state departments and agencies have time to prepare for any pending changes resulting from legislation.

Sen. Virgil Smith (D-Detroit) was the only Democrat to support the bill's passage while Sen. Tory Rocca (R-Sterling Heights), Sen. Margaret O'Brien (R-Portage) and Sen. Rick Jones (R-Grand Ledge) split from the majority of their party to oppose the bill's passage.

"It is not a power play by Republicans. It's a codification of free speech as defined by the Supreme Court," Amber McCann, spokesperson for Senate Majority Leader Arlan Meekhof (R-West Olive) responded to a question on such after session. "Democrats benefit from it just as much as we do ... It has been recognized as a form of free speech and participation in the democratic process. It's something that political parties both engage in, so why not make sure it's clear in state law so we don't have any issue going forward?"

The bill now heads to the House for consideration.

SEX OFFENDER REGISTRATION: The Senate also passed a bill, SB 581, revising the definition of loitering when it comes to sex offender registration. The bill came after a federal judge ruled that sex offenders could go back on school grounds because the state's previous language regarding the "1000-foot rule wasn't clear," Sen. Rick Jones (R-Grand Ledge), sponsor of the bill, explained.

Sen. Steve Bieda (D-Warren) said he would vote for the bill (which passed on a 37-1 vote with Sen. Rebekah Warren (D-Ann Arbor) voting in opposition) on the floor just as he had in the Senate Judiciary Committee, but he still had several concerns on some language in the bill. He said a potentially "detrimental" change to the bill is its very premise of revising the definition of loitering, noting that the definition lacks any standard of mens rea, or the intention or knowledge of wrongdoing that is part of a crime.

"I think it's something the House needs to take a look at," Mr. Bieda cautioned.

PRESCRIPTION DRUGS: The Senate also passed a bill originally by Rep. Al Pscholka (R-Stevensville) that would protect individuals under 21 years of age from facing certain prescription drug-related legal charges when reporting a medical emergency.

HB 4843 saw unanimous approval from the Senate.

"Our laws exist to protect and preserve the public well-being," Mr. Pscholka said in a statement. "That translates, ultimately, to providing safety, health, and a bright future for all. If this bill saves even one young life, it's a success."

MOVEABLE BRIDGE FUND: Legislation that would assist communities in the cost of operating and maintaining movable bridges by creating a Moveable Bridge Fund (SB 105) cleared the Senate on a 33-5 vote on Wednesday. Sen. Patrick Colbeck (R-Canton Township), Sen. Mike Shirkey (R-Clarklake), Sen. Rebekah Warren (D-Ann Arbor), Sen. Coleman Young II (D-Detroit) and Senate Minority Floor Leader Morris Hood III (D-Detroit) voted in opposition.

"Taxpayers and local communities around the state are being shortchanged because of the presence of these bridges," Sen. Mike Green (R-Mayville), sponsor of the bill, said in a statement. "By assisting local governments with operating costs, we will actually save tax dollars, allowing dollars to be directed toward local roads."

MILLIONAIRE PARTIES: The Senate also passed SB 187 providing general amendments to bingo and charitable gaming millionaire parties. Sen. Jim Stamas (R-Midland) won an amendment to the bill that would add the spouse of a "bona fide member" of a qualified organization and require a millionaire party licensee to file a financial statement containing a list of the qualified members of the licensee who were present for each event and all related receipts and expenses.

The bill passed 34-4. Senate Minority Floor Leader Morris Hood III (D-Detroit), Sen. Virgil Smith (D-Detroit), Sen. Coleman Young II (D-Detroit) and Sen. Bert Johnson (D-Highland Park) voted in opposition.

Commerce Begins Conversation On 'Alternative Project Delivery Act'

The Senate Commerce Committee on Wednesday began taking testimony on a pair of bills that would authorize a public authority to enter into a public-private agreement to develop certain projects, especially those related to infrastructure.

The primary bill, SB 627, creates the Michigan Alternative Project Delivery Act to make such an authorization and require a public authority consider and compare various methods for developing a project, as well as identify the proposed delivery method. Any lawful source of public and private funding could be used for such projects, and the public authority would have to submit a proposed project summary to the Senate and House Appropriations committees for review if the state or an agency of it intended to be a party to such an agreement.

Officials with the governor's office were early supporters of the legislation, saying an alternative project delivery proposal is important to the continued reinvention of the state. The package as drafted would provide a permissive and flexible avenue for an alternative project delivery project, as well as ensure the state has a wider array of tools available to it that also ensures projects are cost-effective, said Joe Pavona, director of Michigan's Office for Public-Private Partnerships.

Mr. Pavona pointed to legislation in Governor Rick Snyder's first term that essentially approved a public-private partnership to help the city of Detroit fund the repair of many of its highway lights that prior to such help were often not working.

"The state has received positive feedback from the private sector and other states keen on advancing similar projects," Mr. Pavona said. "Investors at project companies are now closely following Michigan's project pipeline looking to invest in long-term projects."

The Detroit lighting project is just one example the state can point to when investors, who seek risk-adverse ventures, inquire about the state's commitment to its infrastructure and "alternative project delivery projects," he said.

More than 30 other states have similar legislation on alternative project delivery, Senate Majority Floor Leader Mike Kowall (R-White Lake Township), sponsor of the package, told the committee.

The other bill in the package, SB 628, requires the secretary of state to suspend a person's license upon receiving evidence the person was subject to a final decision or order for the nonpayment of a user fee and associated costs. It also provides that failure to pay such fees would be a civil violation punishable by a fine of three times the amount of the user fee in addition to the fee itself.

The National Motorists Association took issue with this portion of the package, saying it would create a third category of traffic ticket whose purpose was to "do an end-run around existing Michigan law that requires traffic tickets to be delivered in person by a police officer witness the violation," said James Walker, speaking for the organization.

"Michigan is free of automated traffic enforcement except at railroad crossings, and it must stay that way," he said.

The group also took issue with the authorization of toll roads that could result from the legislation, specifically SB 627.

"The bill allows state or local authorities to create (public-private partnerships) to do almost anything including exercising eminent domain with no legislative oversight, control, or right of veto," Mr. Walker said. "Michigan is blessedly free of toll roads and most other tolled facilities, and it must stay that way unless each individual project is approved by the Legislature after open public hearings."

Sen. Curtis Hertel Jr. (D-East Lansing) raised a similar concern with a project in Colorado where the agreement included a provision that the roads around the particular zoned property could not be improved, forcing more people to use the toll road or else drive on unsafe roads. He asked if there was any way to protect from something like that, to which Mr. Kowall said he "whole-heartedly" agreed with Mr. Hertel's concern and would continue to work on the legislation to prevent such a thing from happening if possible.

The bills were not reported from committee.

Poll: Majority Backs Presumptive Parole

A majority of Michigan voters supports the concept of paroling inmates found to be low-risk once they serve their minimum sentence, according to a poll released Wednesday.

The survey, conducted by Denno Research for Public Sector Consultants and Michigan Radio, showed 53 percent were somewhat or very supportive of presumptive parole. Thirty-eight percent said they were somewhat or very opposed to the idea.

The poll comes as the Senate has all but quashed the presumptive parole bill, HB 4138, sitting in the Senate Government Operations Committee. Opposition among Senate Republicans appears strong.

Voters were divided on the question of whether juveniles serving life sentences should be eligible for parole. The U.S. Supreme Court has ruled automatic sentences to life without parole are unconstitutional, but that a judge should still have the discretion to issue such a sentence. Forty-one percent said juveniles convicted of a life sentence should be eligible for parole while 39 percent said they should not.

And voters had an extremely negative view of how the Legislature handled road funding. Some 78.5 percent of those surveyed rated its performance as bad or terrible with 16.3 percent rating it good. Just 0.3 percent said excellent.

The survey of 600 likely November 2016 general election voters was conducted November 3-5 with an error margin of plus or minus 4 percentage points.

Oakland Executive Election Change Clears House Committee

Legislation that would likely lead to Oakland County voters electing the county executive in midterm election years, no longer presidential ones, won approval from the House Elections Committee on Wednesday.

The party-line vote to report SB 110 comes amid speculation about when longtime County Executive L. Brooks Patterson, a Republican, will eventually decide not to seek re-election. Mr. Patterson has said he intends to run, and he has proven invincible on the ballot, winning election six times even as Democratic presidential candidates carried his county in all six of those elections.

But with Oakland County's changing demographics and tendency to go for Democrats in the presidential cycle (Democrats now control the clerk, prosecutor, treasurer and water resources commissioner posts), Republican concern about a Democrat succeeding Mr. Patterson is real. And Oakland County still tends a bit Republican in midterm cycles.

So if Mr. Patterson did win a final term in 2016, the bill, if it becomes law, would make it a two-year term with the next election taking place in 2018.

The one potential benefit to the Democrats of the bill is that it would allow their current countywide officers, who would be their strongest candidates for executive, to run for the post without having to give up their current office.

Officially, supporters of the bill have said it makes sense because Macomb and Wayne counties also elect their executives in the midterm election year and other countywide offices in the presidential year.

The bill would not automatically change the timing of the election, instead giving the Oakland County Board of Commissioners the power to switch if it wishes. With the board's Republican majority, there is little doubt it would do so.

Discussion of the bill in the committee was brief. All five Republicans voted yes and all three Democrats voted no. The committee made no changes to the bill.

PAC DONATIONS: The committee unanimously reported SB 571, which would make clear that organizations can include a request for a donation to their political action committee on the same form they request dues payments from members.

The Department of State had signaled a combined form could violate the Michigan Campaign Finance Act if the member submitted one check and the funds first went to the organization's general treasury before the portion for the PAC was then paid.

The bill would allow the organization to receive the funds and then pay out the funds to the group's PAC.

The bill also would end the existing requirement that employees participating in an organization's automatic payment or payroll deduction plan to the organization's PAC affirmatively assent annually to participate. Individuals would still have to provide their permission, but the annual requirement would cease.

House OKs Credit Union Act Revisions

Legislation that makes a variety of changes to credit union regulations passed the House overwhelmingly on Wednesday.

HB 5017 passed 104-2, HB 5018, HB 5020 and HB 5021 passed 105-1, HB 5022 passed 104-1 and HB 5019 passed 89-17.

The bills would establish the Credit Union Regulatory Fund and make numerous changes to the regulation of credit unions, as well as modernizing definitions of terms; address the supervision of domestic credit unions and bylaws and the authority to organize or invest in service organizations that provide trust and other services; revise the examination process by the Department of Insurance and Financial Services; deal with credit union mergers; and allow loan and savings promotional raffles.

Court Rules 'Knock/Talk' Not Illegal Search

A divided Court of Appeals on Wednesday ruled that the police technique of "knock and talk" to a suspect, particularly when they ask to speak to a suspect inside the person's residence, does not amount to an illegal search.

The court ruled in People v. Frederick and People v. Van Doorne (COA docket No. 323642) on remand from the Supreme Court, which had the court consider whether the "knock and talk" technique was an illegal search in light of a U.S. Supreme Court decision in a case, Florida v. Jardines.

In the Florida case, police had been tipped off that the suspect had been growing marijuana in his house. They approached the house with a drug-sniffing dog, which reacted to the scent of marijuana as they approached the front entrance. The police then obtained a search warrant for the house.

The U.S. Supreme Court ruled use of drug sniffing dog amounted to an illegal search. But the court also held that a police officer could "knock and talk" at the door because that is what people do at a house.

In the two cases, Michael Frederick and Todd Van Doorne were Kent County corrections officers who also were medical marijuana patients. The police were told each had quantities of marijuana butter. The police came to each man's house in the pre-dawn hours, knocked, conversed briefly with each man, were invited into their house, then asked if he had marijuana butter. The individuals said they did and showed the police the butter. They also signed forms waiving their rights under the Miranda rule.

Judge Michael Talbot, joined by Judge Kristin Frank Kelly, rejected the defendants' arguments that the searches violated the scope of what was allowable in the Jardines case. But Mr. Talbot said the Jardines case did not turn a "knock and talk" situation into an unlawful search.

Before the Jardines case, the court had held "knock and talk" situations were constitutional.

But the Jardines case makes it plain, the court said, that approaching a residence, knocking at the door, talking to a suspect, even for the purpose of gleaning information that could lead to the person's arrest, does not violate the constitutional line. Just showing up at the house to conduct a search without a warrant would do so, the court said.

Judge Deborah Servitto said the totality of the situation - the early morning hours, no one being awake in the houses, the police officers having higher rank than the corrections officers, the suggestion they may have committed a crime - put the instance into a framework where the defendants were unlikely to deny the officers access or accede to their requests. When balanced in totality, she said, the "knock and talk" searches did violate the two defendants' Fourth Amendment rights.

Cyber Squadron Assigned To Battle Creek

The Battle Creek Air National Guard base will see 70 new jobs with the assignment of a cyber operations squadron to the base.

Battle Creek will house one of the four new squadrons intended to defend the nation against computer-based attacks.

The base has housed a cyber range hub, part of the state's system to experiment with defenses against various types of online attacks, since 2014.

"Cyber-attacks are an unfortunate reality of a world that is becoming increasingly more dependent on technology," Governor Rick Snyder said in a statement announcing the squadron assignment. "I'm proud of the work we've done to establish Michigan as a national leader in this field. The new cyber unit will help ensure we remain on the forefront of this mission and provide new and future opportunities for growth."

Canvassers To Consider Snyder, Schmidt Recall Petitions

The Board of State Canvassers will meet next week to consider yet another attempt to recall Governor Rick Snyder as well as a recall petition against Sen. Wayne Schmidt.

The board will also review its procedure for determining whether a signature is still valid where a petition drive goes past 180 days.

Detroit pastor Angelo Scott Brown has filed a fourth recall petition against Ms. Snyder for his handling of the Flint drinking water crisis.

"The people of Flint City did not have the basic service of clean water for nine months," Mr. Brown said as part of his argument for recalling the governor.

Two of his prior petitions have been rejected by the board and he withdrew a third.

William Bailey is seeking to launch a recall effort against Mr. Schmidt (R-Traverse City) for his November 3 votes on the transportation package.

And in the final matter, Jeffrey Hank, a proponent of one of the marijuana legalization measures, had asked the board at its last meeting to change how it determines whether signers of a petition that goes past 180 days were properly registered at the time they signed to checking them against the qualified voter file from the current method of obtaining affidavits from the signer and the local clerk.

Legislative Black Caucus Invites Knollenberg To Meeting

In a letter to Sen. Marty Knollenberg, the Legislative Black Caucus invited him to attend a special meeting of the lawmakers on Thursday "to have to have a more open dialogue" following comments Mr. Knollenberg made last week at a Senate committee meeting.

Mr. Knollenberg (R-Troy), responding to a presentation that said many of the failing schools are in economically struggling communities and held mostly minority students, said: "We can't make an African American white. We can't fix that."

He later apologized and said it was a poor choice of words.

In the letter, the caucus wrote Mr. Knollenberg's comments were concerning and his "misinformed perspective" receives a great deal of legislative backing.

"Your views of a nonwhite deficit are deeply problematic, and speak to the Republican perception of blackness as a dysfunction or deformity, something that you 'cannot fix,' the implication being that issues in nonwhite urban communities are inherently unsolvable, thereby absolving our government of its responsibility to take care of its people," the letter said. "The perpetuation of this stigma by a democratically elected official is disheartening, particularly when many of your constituents commute to work and are deeply invested in the growth and vibrancy of urban areas."

The caucus wrote, if Mr. Knollenberg attends their meeting, they hope "to have a more open dialogue on what is necessary to move both your opinion, and urban education in Michigan, toward positive progress in this next year."

Capital Notebook

SURPLUS SALE: The state surplus store has announced special Saturday hours for December 12. The store, at 3111 West St. Joseph Street, Lansing, will be open 8 a.m. to noon.

The store traditionally is only open during weekday business hours, and many of its items are available on the MiBid website.

CASINO REVENUE: All three of the Detroit casinos saw revenue decline in November from October, and two of the three saw it fall from November 2014, the Gaming Control Board reported Wednesday.

MGM Grand Detroit saw a substantial jump in revenue from November 2014, up 7.3 percent to $46.71 million. But that was down 1.6 percent from October. MotorCity Casino, at $36.24 million in November, was down 1.6 percent from November 2014 and down 4 percent from October. Greektown Casino, with $25.73 million, was down 2.5 percent and 6.8 percent over the respective periods.

RECYCLING COUNCIL: The Governor's Recycling Council is taking public testimony at a meeting January 12 at Lansing Community College's West Campus, 5708 Cornerstone Drive, Lansing. The council meets from noon until 2 p.m. and is taking comment from 2 p.m. to 3 p.m.

Those wanting to participate in the meeting, either in person or via the webcast, have to fill out the request form on the council's website.

STATE OF THE STATE: Governor Rick Snyder will deliver his sixth State of the State speech to a joint session of the Legislature at 7 p.m. on January 19.

CONSENT AGREEMENT ENDS IN RIVER ROUGE: The Department of Treasury has released the city of River Rouge from the consent agreement under which it has operated since 2009 because of financial problems. Treasury officials will continue to meet with city officials quarterly.

"The city has made significant progress over the last few years to address the financial emergency in River Rouge," Treasurer Nick Khouri said in a statement. "Local officials have made numerous critical decisions and taken important steps forward to ensure continued fiscal stability. As a result, the city has complied with terms of the consent agreement, therefore a release from the agreement is justified."

FENTON BUSINESS EXPANSION: The Michigan Strategic Fund has approved a $150,000 grant to Performance Fabricating, LLC, headquartered in Fenton, for the company to construct a new corporate headquarters and manufacturing facility in the township, investing more than $9 million and creating 52 jobs.

SETTLEMENT REACHED IN FLAT ROCK OVERFLOWS: Attorney General Bill Schuette and the Department of Environmental Quality have reached a settlement with the Flat Rock owners of Arbor Americana Manufactured Housing Community. The residents of the community had been subjected to repeated exposure of untreated raw sewage, as well as partly treated sewage, because the owners would not repair or replace a dilapidated wastewater treatment system.

As part of the settlement, the owners are to replace the system and certify it meets state law by April 15, 2016, and pay a civil fine of $300,000 as well as $15,000 to the state's General Fund.

Volume #54, Report #243 -- Friday, December 11, 2015

Newsmaker Friday: Maturen Works 'Dark Stores' Issue

Rep. David Maturen is bringing his 40 years of work in real estate appraisal and assessing to bear in heading up a workgroup examining what, if anything, to do about how the assessment of large commercial real estate properties works, and Mr. Maturen said Friday in an interview there is clearly a problem.

The workgroup has held two meetings with a third planned for next week. It is the last one scheduled at this point. Mr. Maturen (R-Vicksburg) said he expects to submit legislation for introduction in early 2016.

Even as the issue of energy continues to consume considerable oxygen in the Capitol, the topic of "dark stores," the phenomenon in which large big box stores see lower than expected property valuations because the property is valued based on comparable sales of other properties instead of true cash value, looms as perhaps the biggest issue in 2016.

Cities, counties, villages and townships have mounted a campaign to change state law on how local assessors value those properties following Michigan Tax Tribunal decisions requiring the comparable sale method to be used. Local governments say the reduced valuations are spreading to the point where revenues are falling everywhere.

But business groups are mounting a furious defense of existing law and policy.

The workgroup includes all the major players - local assessors and equalization officers, the Department of Treasury, the State Tax Commission, legislators with heavy interest in the issue as well as some expert background, retailers, manufacturers, business organizations and realtors.

"I'm trying to see what kind of consensus we can get, if possible. I think everybody will probably not be on board," Mr. Maturen said. "I'd rather address the arguments up front than put something out there and have it shot full of holes."

Mr. Maturen owns his own real estate appraisal firm. In the 1970s and 1980s, he was a level three assessor in the Property Tax Division of the Department of Treasury.

It was this background that prompted both Mr. Maturen and Rep. Jeff Farrington (R-Utica), the chair of the House Tax Policy Committee, which has held two hearings on the issue so far, to agree Mr. Maturen should helm the workgroup.

"I almost felt an obligation when I heard about this to get involved," he said.

The workgroup has gone into greater nuance than the committee, Mr. Maturen said, delving deeper into the arcana of the General Property Tax Act and the Tax Tribunal rules.

"I think the way the Tribunal has approached valuation of these big box retail stores, in my opinion, doesn't represent sound appraisal principles," he said. "They're down a pathway that I would like to change. I think lots of folks recognize that."

Mr. Maturen said a new Costco in Kalamazoo County is a case in point. It is on a prime piece of real estate and is a primary entryway into the Kalamazoo area. Between what Costco paid for the land and listed on its building permit, it spent $17.5 million to build the store. Assessors, using the true cash value standard valued it at $8.5 million, and Costco immediately countered by claiming it was worth $4 million under the comparable value standard.

"I tell people this and they scratch their head and say 'you're kidding me,'" Mr. Maturen said. "That's the extension of the theory that the Tax Tribunal has accepted for the valuing of these large retail facilities. Most people would think that's not the type of property tax system we would want in this state."

Mr. Maturen said his goal is equal treatment among properties.

There is a bill now in the Senate requiring the use of true cash value as the assessing model, but Mr. Maturen said he had some concerns about it specifying when property could be used for comparable purposes. He said that is an inappropriate role for the Legislature.

Mr. Maturen also mostly dismissed questions that business groups have raised about the constitutionality of the Legislature changing the standard. He said there is sufficient permission in the law for the Legislature to change the definition of true cash value.

Bills Ending DHHS Vaccination Rule Will See Hearing

Rep. Thomas Hooker introduced legislation this week that would end the Department of Health and Human Service's new rule requiring parents planning to enroll their children in public schools to meet with local health department staff before acquiring a nonmedical waiver not to vaccinate their children, and Rep. Mike Callton, chair of the House Health Policy Committee, plans to give the bills a hearing.

The bills, HB 5126 and HB 5127, would prohibit DHHS from promulgating rules more stringent than state law and would bar local health departments from stopping unimmunized students from attending school as a disease control measure unless there is an epidemic.

The new rule, promulgated this year, requires those wanting nonmedical vaccination waivers for children entering a licensed child care facility, kindergarten, or the 7th grade, or moving into a new school district, to first receive education on the benefits of vaccination and the risks of disease from their local health department.

On the second part of the bill, Mr. Hooker (R-Byron Center) said health departments would be able to prevent students who were not vaccinated from going to school if even just one student had measles or a similar disease.

Mr. Hooker said the department wanted to make it harder for parents to receive a nonmedical waiver. He said those parents have a right to the waiver, and in some cases, like in Kent County, parents had difficulty making an appointment, were harassed and were asked to bring their children with them so they could hear from a nurse their parents were putting them at risk.

Mr. Hooker said those instances have since stopped.

"Some statistics indicated more children had died from immunization than died from measles," Mr. Hooker said. "There are health reasons why people don't do it."

Jennifer Eisner, spokesperson for DHHS, said the department is responsible for promoting the health of residents, and it takes that very seriously, especially when it comes to children and vulnerable populations.

"High immunization rates help protect individuals in the community who cannot be vaccinated because they are too young or have complicating health factors. While parents maintain the ability to opt out of vaccinations with a waiver from their local health department, we stand behind the importance of immunizations and know that they work best when everyone who can be vaccinated is vaccinated," she said. "The current rules are based on sound public health practice and we believe they are in the best interest of schools and communities in Michigan. We look forward to discussing the outcomes of the new waiver rule with our legislative partners as that data and information becomes available."

Mr. Hooker said he had not yet talked to any families with medical waivers, but said his colleague Rep. Joseph Graves (R-Linden) cannot receive vaccinations because of medical conditions, and he supports the bill.

Amy Zaagman, executive director of the Michigan Council for Maternal and Child Health, said those who choose not to vaccinate their children for philosophical reasons are a small, but vocal, minority. Ms. Zaagman said early data she has seen shows the DHHS rule is working.

"What the lower waiver rate says to us is parents were not fully educated or were exercising waivers out of convenience," she said.

But Mr. Callton (R-Nashville) said parents choosing philosophical waivers are educated.

He said it is a parent's right to decide what to put in their child's body. He said parents are being "talked down to" at local health departments.

"Is that insulting or what? That a parent can't exercise their right to their child's education or health," he said. "And they have to talk to a counselor before they can have a waiver. Most of these parents are not ignorant. A lot of these parents are very well educated."

Ms. Zaagman said the officials with whom she has spoken said they were trying to give balanced information.

Mr. Hooker said he met with local health officials in Kent County who told him they were seeing more cases of preventable diseases than they had seen in a long time. He said he asked the nurse if undocumented immigrants in the state could have been "a little bit of the problem."

"She said she didn't think so," he said, noting others in the room indicated they could look at that as a potential cause.

Mr. Hooker said he was vaccinated and he knows others on either side of the vaccination debate. He said he's not introducing legislation to take a side, but rather because he thinks parents should have a right to choose.

Mr. Callton said there could possibly be a compromise with the department to have parents read the information online rather than having to go to a health department.

"Why can't you make it so they can read the information online easily at their home. ... some of these people it is really difficult to get an appointment, go down to the health department, get talked down to by a health department worker, and then go all the way back home," he said. "To exercise your right and make your own decision about what goes into your child's body. So I am open to the idea."

Ms. Zaagman said if the information was being read online, a parent would not be able to ask questions of a professional if they had any.

On how concerned she was about the bills potentially moving through the Legislature, Ms. Zaagman said those with medical waivers, children who cannot receive vaccinations because of medical conditions, were not being heard from enough. She also said parents not seeking waivers are not being considered.

"I think we are very concerned that legislators haven't really heard from the 'pro-vaccine' parents," she said. "Ninety percent of parents choose to vaccinate. ... We are reasonably concerned that legislators only hear from the small minority."

New Federal Education Law Sees Praise, Questions

There was general support among Michigan education groups the day after the federal Elementary and Secondary Education Act was reauthorized, but most were also still trying to pick out the details of what will now be known as the Every Student Succeeds Act.

The new act, which replaces the oft-maligned No Child Left Behind Act, still requires states to focus on the bottom 5 percent of schools and on the poorest-performing groups within each school, but otherwise gives more flexibility to states to set standards and measurement systems. States also would have more authority over the sanctions schools and districts might face for not reaching the standards.

"The Michigan Department of Education is excited about the passage of the Every Student Succeeds Act and the opportunity to craft a meaningful assessment, accountability and support system that we can align with our goals to make Michigan a Top 10 education state in 10 years," Superintendent of Public Instruction Brian Whiston said in a statement. "This new law is very complex and we will need time to unfold its layers and see what this will look like for our state, our schools, our educators and our children. This will be a process involving multiple stakeholders, and require more than MDE's input. We look forward to developing and implementing a high quality system over the coming months and years."

"For the first time in many years, states will have significantly more ability to set their own policies, without constant fear of federal intrusion and repercussions," Sen. Phil Pavlov (R-St. Clair), chair of the Senate Education Committee, said in a statement. "It will be important to remain vigilant about the state agencies that will now hold much more power."

And Brad Biladeau with the Michigan Association of School Administrators said, "The bill wasn't necessarily perfect, but it got more right than it did wrong."

Mr. Biladeau said he did not expect much change, at least in standards.

"Our standards still remain high," he said. "The reality is our standards are firmly in place and we don't expect those to change."

There have been some concerns raised as the bill made its way through Congress that the move back to state-led standards would also mean a move back to differential standards where some states lower the bar to improve proficiency numbers.

The new law could, though, mean more teaching time during the school year, David Crim with the Michigan Education Association said.

"The reduction in the amount of standardized testing is huge," Mr. Crim said. "They recognized that there's been far too much emphasis and proliferation of standardized testing."

The teacher union is also praising the inclusion of teachers in decision making at all levels.

A key win for schools appears to be the move away from the waiver system that had dominated NCLB compliance in recent years.

"We're happy we finally have a reauthorization," Jennifer Smith with the Michigan Association of School Boards said. "I think it's going to stop some of these piecemeal waivers."

"School districts needed to be free from the conditional limits of the current waiver process," Mr. Biladeau said.

He said districts will continue under the current waiver process for the next year (the law calls for the waivers to expire in August 2016), then begin "trial" implementation of the new state and district improvement plans for the 2016-17 school year.

The new law officially takes effect for the 2017-18 school year.

A win for conservatives was prohibition against the U.S. Department of Education requiring or even promoting any particular standards. The measure was a swipe against the Common Core State Standards that many conservatives have argued were developed and then imposed by federal officials.

Michigan is among the states that have adopted the standards developed by a consortium of states but then promoted through the federal Race to the Top grant programs.

Sandra Kahn, president of the Republican Women's Federation of Michigan, said in an open letter that the law did not go far enough to eliminate Common Core or federal control over education.

"The mechanism for government control of education was not removed from this bill," Ms. Kahn said. "In fact, it has expanded its tentacles into pre-school. Race to the Top has been replaced by Race for the Tots. Government, it seems, cannot get its hands on our children early enough."

While the law does prohibit the federal department from imposing standards, she said there is no enforcement mechanism for that prohibition.

Mr. Biladeau also noted in an analysis for his organization that there is an early education component in the law that would create a program in addition to Head Start.

It was unclear Friday what, if any, effect the new law might have on funding for schools.

Mr. Biladeau said he is still reviewing that, but in his analysis said school improvement grants had been melded into Title I for at-risk youth, with the added requirement that schools cut no more than 10 percent of their prior year spending to continue to receive the federal funds.

Education Week, in an analysis before the bill was enacted, said it combines most of the federal education programs into a block grant but puts some strings on those grants for districts that receive more than $30,000 in a school year.

But too much of the funding will go to support charter schools, Mr. Crim said.

"We're a little concerned," he said. "The ESSA includes authorization of hundreds of millions of federal tax dollars to support the increased growth of charter schools."

Attorney For Allard, Graham Plans To Call Cotter To Stand In Case

Sarah Riley Howard, the attorney for fired former House staffers Keith Allard and Ben Graham, said she will call House Speaker Kevin Cotter to testify in their whistleblower lawsuit against the House.

The two former staffers lost their jobs after their former bosses, ex-Reps. Todd Courser and Cindy Gamrat, initiated their firing, which was signed off on by Mr. Cotter (R-Mount Pleasant) and his top staff. They claim Mr. Courser and Ms. Gamrat fired them for reporting their misconduct to Mr. Cotter and his staff, and that Mr. Cotter and his staff allowed the firing to take place.

Ms. Howard, appearing on Michigan Public Television's "Off the Record," said she is not sure whether Mr. Cotter actually will testify. During settlement negotiations, attorneys representing the House raised the issue of legislators having immunity from testifying. Ms. Howard said there is some case law giving precedent for a legislator having immunity from being deposed. She said that topic has been significantly litigated and she suspected it would be litigated more in this case.

"Our position is this is a sort of we win either way," she said. "We either get him on the stand, we get him deposed, or he takes legislative immunity and says I'm not talking about it. That kind of says what we need to know, I think, at that point."

Ms. Howard said there is no question that if Mr. Cotter refuses to testify it will help Mr. Allard's and Mr. Graham's case.

Cotter spokesperson Gideon D'Assandro said there have been no discussions about whether Mr. Cotter or any other legislator might invoke immunity from testifying in the case.

Settlement discussions took place prior to Mr. Allard and Mr. Graham filing their lawsuit in the U.S. District Court in Grand Rapids on Monday, Ms. Howard said. She said court rules bar her from disclosing details of those talks.

As to how close the two sides were to a settlement, however, she said, "I wouldn't classify it as being all that close." Mr. D'Assandro said the House could not comment on the subject.

Mr. Allard and Mr. Graham "wanted nothing more than to settle and resolve this and put it behind them," Ms. Howard said. "We tried hard to settle this case, and in the end we couldn't get fairness for our clients."

The next step in this case will be for the House to file a formal response to the lawsuit. Then the House surely will make a motion to dismiss the case, and Judge Gordon Quist will have to decide whether to grant the motion or let it proceed to trial. Ms. Howard said she was confident the case would easily survive a motion to dismiss. She would not disclose how much Mr. Allard and Mr. Graham are seeking in damages, but said what they unearth in discovery would affect the that amount.

Ms. Howard was the Democratic candidate in the 30th Senate District in 2014 against Sen. Arlan Meekhof (R-West Olive), and she is an active Democrat.

Monday, news of the lawsuit's filing was broken by Democratic groups. On the program, Ms. Howard was asked if she tipped off Democratic groups that the lawsuit would be filed to give them the chance to jump on it. Democratic groups spent much of Monday teeing off on Mr. Cotter and the House Republicans.

Ms. Howard said she made no calls to Democratic groups, but she did meet with media strategists to prepare her and her clients for how to handle the ensuing media storm after the lawsuit was filed.

How the information about the pending lawsuit traveled from that point on, Ms. Howard said she did not know.

"I know a lot of people have talked to a variety of people who know about it, so I don't know exactly," she said.

But Ms. Howard said no one should think the case is about anything other than obtaining compensation for her clients.

"It is absolutely not about inflicting political damage. I did not want to file this suit because it's not in my clients' best interest," she said. "It's outrageous to me what's been done to these two."

And as to Mr. Allard and Mr. Graham, both deeply conservative Republicans, hiring an active Democrat to lead their case, Ms. Howard retorted, "There isn't really such a thing as a Republican who's a plaintiffs' lawyer doing plaintiffs' employment and civil rights, so if they wanted to go to someone in their own party, I don't think would have been able to."

Presuming the case survives the motion to dismiss, Ms. Howard said it could take one to two years before it gets resolved.

UAW Local 6000 Ratifies New State Contract

The last of the five unions representing state employees has approved a proposed new contract with the state.

With the overwhelming 91 percent yes vote from United Auto Workers Local 6000, the largest state employee union, the final step is approval from the Civil Service Commission, which meets Wednesday.

Under the tentative agreement the state reached with unions in October, there would be a one-year contract for wages and health care starting October 1, 2016, providing a 1 percent base wage increase and 1.5 percent lump sum payment for employees in October 2016.

Other portions of the contracts would last the traditional three years. However, the Office of State Employer pushed for a one-year deal on the wages and health care components out of concern about what will happen with the federal excise tax on premium health care plans, one union said in an October bulletin to its members.

Feds: 24 Michigan Hospitals Have Too High Rates Of Hospital-Acquired Infections

As part of an ongoing program by the federal Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services to improve performance in controlling infections and other illnesses patients can get in hospitals, 24 Michigan hospitals will see their Medicare payments cut by 1 percent in 2016.

A spokesperson for the Michigan Health and Hospital Association said the program is unfairly designed because it is required to find 25 percent of a state's hospitals out of compliance, and it targets larger, teaching hospitals which generally treat the sickest patients.

But the president of the Economic Alliance of Michigan said the study shows that hospitals have to do more to control for these conditions. Bret Jackson also said patients should look at data to determine which hospitals are the safest for them to seek treatment at.

The findings were the second annual set of findings released by the federal CMS on the issue. Under the federal Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act, beginning in 2014 the CMS had to issue the findings nationwide in an effort to push hospitals to improve their efforts to lower the incidence of patients acquiring infections and other conditions in the hospital.

Nationwide, the CMS said this week that 750 hospitals would see their Medicare payments reduced because of scores showing they had too high incidents of hospital acquired conditions.

In 2014, Michigan had 21 hospitals on the list. This year eight hospitals that were listed in 2014 made it off the list, but 11 hospitals not listed in 2014 were added.

Many of the hospitals were smaller and in more rural areas. But the list included such well-known names as Oakwood Hospital in Dearborn, Sinai Grace in Detroit, Spectrum Health Butterworth in Grand Rapids, and both McLaren and Hurley hospitals in Flint.

Laura Wotruba, spokesperson for the MHA, said the act requires the CMS to find 25 percent of hospitals in the lowest percentage and subject to the fine, no matter how much the hospital may have improved its incidences of hospital acquired conditions.

And Michigan hospitals are engaged in a series of efforts, including partnering with Illinois hospitals, to reduce hospital-acquired conditions, she said.

But Mr. Jackson said every time a patient on Medicare or Medicaid gets a hospital-acquired condition, that ends up costing the taxpayers more money for additional treatments and therapy.

DTE Electric Rates To Increase

The Public Service Commission and DTE Electric Company reached an agreement to allow the utility to hike its electric rates by $238.2 million annually.

That will result in an increase of $8.22 monthly for residential customers using 500 kilowatt-hours of electricity a month. The last rate case for DTE was in October 2011.

The increase is 36 percent below what the utility had initially requested (case U-17767), the commission was quick to point out in a statement about the rate hike (the company originally sought a rate increase of $370 million).

"Customers will benefit from improvements in the reliability and safety of DTE Electric Company's electric distribution system and the acquisition of two natural gas-fired plants to generate electricity," PSC Chair John Quackenbush said in a statement. "The rates approved today are 36 percent below what the utility requested and will result in a more reliable system, a cleaner environment and rates that reflect the ongoing effort toward affordability."

Commercial customers will also see a rate increase of 3.4 percent as a result of the agreement, and industrial customers will see a rate decrease of 2.4 percent.

The new rates are effective December 17, and the total amount approved on Friday represents an increase of 5.3 percent over the rates set in its previous electric rate case (case U-16472).

INDIANA MICHIGAN POWER COMPANY: The PSC also approved a settlement agreement authorizing Indiana Michigan Power Company to implement its 2016-17 energy optimization plan that will result in an increase of 5 cents on the monthly bills of residential customers using 500 kilowatt-hours of electricity a month beginning with the January 2016 billing month (case U-17773).

The PSC and the utility also approved a settlement reconciling the company's 2014 renewable energy plan surcharge revenues, as well as to amend its plan and revise the charges. That will add another 43 cents on the monthly bills of residential customers effective with the January 2016 billing cycle (case U-17794 and U-17805).

SEMCO ENERGY COMPANY: SEMCO Energy Gas Company will implement its 2016-17 energy optimization plan effective January 1, 2016, which will result in residential customers using 100 ccf of natural gas a month seeing an increase of 16 cents on their monthly bills (case U-17790).

MICHIGAN GAS UTILITIES CORPORATION: The utility has been authorized to increase its base rates by $3.4 million annually resulting in an increase of $1.72 on the monthly bills of residential customers using 100 ccf of natural gas, effective January 1, 2016 (case U-17880).

PRESQUE ISLE ELECTRIC & GAS CO-OP: The company and the PSC approved an agreement to revise its monthly regulatory cost charge resulting in a decrease of 80 cents on the monthly bills of residential customers in the Hillman Village and Allis Township effective with the January billing month (case U-17848).

Chronic Wasting Disease Found Spreading

Chronic wasting disease has now been found in wild deer in two counties, the Department of Natural Resources announced Friday.

Officials confirmed a deer taken by a hunter in DeWitt Township in Clinton County had the fatal prion-based disease.

The prior three confirmed positives for the disease had been found in Ingham County, but officials said DeWitt Township was still within the core monitoring area for the infection. They have, though, asked hunters in Eaton County to also bring all deer to DNR check stations for testing.

Officials were not planning any regulatory changes before the end of the current deer season but said they would be reviewing regulations for 2016.

Supreme Court Rejects Arguments In Wrongful Entry Case

The Supreme Court rejected a call on Friday for full arguments on whether a police officer wrongly entered a house to arrest a suspect, but Justice Bridget McCormack said attorneys and the trial court were wrong in their beliefs that a police officer had an automatic right to enter a house if a suspect's name is listed on the Law Enforcement Information Network.

The court unanimously decided not to hear full arguments in the case, People v. White (SC docket No. 150661), after hearing arguments in October on whether to take the case. In its order rejecting the case, the court said it was unpersuaded the questions raised should be reviewed.

But Ms. McCormack, joined by Justice Richard Bernstein, said while she agreed with the court's decision on hearing the arguments, Stephanie White's lawyer did not fully understand the legal concept that permitted a police officer entry into a home without a warrant.

In the case, Ms. White's son, Stephen, was wanted. A police officer came to her house. Mr. White initially came to the back door when the officer knocked, but then moved to the front of the house when he saw it was a police officer. The back door was not completely shut and the officer entered the house. Ms. White then confronted the officer, saying her son did not live there and that the officer needed a warrant to search her house.

The officer said he did not need a warrant because he had just seen Mr. White. When she attempted to stop him from searching the house, he handcuffed her and put her in his patrol car.

Courts have held that an officer has the right to enter a house that a suspect lives in if the officer has reasonable belief the suspect is there. But Ms. McCormack said in this case the trial judge, prosecutor and defense lawyer mistakenly said the officer had the authority to enter the house based on information from the LEIN system.

Ms. McCormack said that was not correct. Determining whether a police officer has the authority to enter a house is a question for a jury, and in this case, she said, the issue to be resolved is whether the officer had a reasonable belief that Ms. White's residence was also her son's residence.

The Supreme Court refusing to hear full arguments in the case still permits Ms. White to seek further proceedings on that question, Ms. McCormack said.

Kivela Attorneys Working With Prosecutor

A pretrial hearing scheduled for Rep. John Kivela was waived on Friday as his attorneys continue to work with the Clinton County prosecutor.

Mr. Kivela (D-Marquette) is facing charges for operating while intoxicated with high blood alcohol content and for having an open intoxicant in the vehicle. Josh Pugh, a spokesperson for Mr. Kivela, said his attorneys have been working "productively" with the prosecutor's office.

"John had a great week of session and is grateful to all of his colleagues, constituents and friends who have offered support and encouragement," Mr. Pugh said.

After being pulled over while driving drunk last month, Mr. Kivela said he has been struggling with alcoholism for most of his adult life. He has since received treatment.

Mr. Kivela is scheduled for a plea hearing at the 65A District Court at 8:30 a.m. December 18.

Audit: School Retirement Plan Needs Better Controls To Monitor Some Assets

Michigan's Public School Employees Retirement System needs to improve its oversight of the allocations of net pension liabilities between universities and non-universities, an audit report from Auditor General Doug Ringler said.

Because the system had not adequately controlled for transfers, the university allocation was overstated by $21 million, and the non-university section was understated by the same amount.

Since 1996, new university employees have not been permitted to join MPSERS, and the seven universities that were part of the system had to take care of any unfunded actuarial accrued liabilities.

But the audit said the system did not have sufficient controls in place to ensure allocations of those assets were performed correctly.

That failure did not materially affect the actual allocations of pension benefits, the audit said, but improved system would make following the asset allocations better overall.

The system concurred with the findings and said it has made the changes needed.

FLINT LEAD REPORT: The latest report on lead testing in Flint, released Friday by the Department of Health and Human Services, showed that 39 adults and children out of 1,836 tested had elevated blood lead levels since October 1.

The first report, issued earlier this month, showed 30 adults and children out of slightly fewer than 1,400 people tested had elevated blood lead levels.

The tests and reports are part of the effort of the state to monitor and reduce blood lead levels that were discovered after Flint had its city water system use Flint River water. The system has since been reconnected to the Detroit water and sewer system until a new Flint system drawing water from Lake Huron is completed.

MAPPER: The Department of Environmental Quality announced Friday it had released the latest version of its Michigan Environmental Mapper.

In addition to updating locations of contaminated properties and well heads, the program also now includes a layer to show property where brownfield funds have been used to incent redevelopment.

MASON RETIRING: Marylou Mason, executive director of the Michigan Hispanic/Latino Commission, is retiring at the end of the month, the Department of Civil Right announced Friday.

Ms. Mason has been with the commission, and its predecessors, since March 1986 when she became assistant director of the Commission on Spanish Speaking Affairs. She became director of that commission in August 1986.

Among the highlights of her time in office was initiating the Michigan Hispanic Heritage Month celebration.

"Marylou Mason has spent her career working with Michigan's Hispanic-Latino community," Civil Rights Director Agustin Arbulu said in a statement. "We are grateful for her many years of service to the state, and congratulate her on a well-deserved retirement."

Banks Pushing Auto Insurance Reform Bills

The Coalition Protecting Auto No Fault and the Insurance Institute of Michigan are at odds in regards to Rep. Brian Banks' new legislation reforming the state's auto insurance laws to provide rate rollbacks and tax credits for insurance companies, among other changes.

The bills (HB 5134 and HB 5135) were introduced last week and sit in the House Insurance Committee.

The bills, modeled after a Texas program, propose a 12 percent rate reduction of the average annual premium for consumers, those who are eligible would:

- Reside in an area with a population of 500,000 or more;
- Live in rural or urban municipalities bordering the areas that meet the population criteria;
- Live in an city, township or village where 35 percent of drivers are uninsured; or
- Live in a designated zip code or a community bordering a designated ZIP code.

Insurance companies that participate in the reduced rate auto insurance plans would receive a $500 tax credit for every previously uninsured household that signs up under the program, though Mr. Banks said this might have to decrease to $300.

The legislation also would allow Michigan auto insurers to require a co-pay for Personal Injury Protection benefits.

While CPAN said the bills are worth a discussion, Pete Kuhnmuench, with the Insurance Institute of Michigan, said the group opposes the bills, as they are anti-insurance industry.

But CPAN said it will urge lawmakers to view the legislation as a potential compromise.

"Michigan has been in need of comprehensive no-fault reform that reduces medical costs to insurers, addresses fraud in a balanced way and offers real savings to drivers," CPAN President John Cornack said in a statement. "CPAN has not had the opportunity to review Rep. Banks' proposals in full detail, but his legislation hits on all of those notes - and it maintains quality injury protection for catastrophic accident victims."

The bills would also create a fraud authority to investigate both consumer fraud and the accusations of unfair claims practices by auto insurers, and limit hospital reimbursement rates by auto insurers to no more than 80 percent of their standard charges. This limitation would apply only to licensed hospital facilities and not to independent medical practitioners or post-acute rehabilitation facilities.

Mr. Banks said currently the votes are not there for SB 248 and SB 249, which passed the Senate in April and have sat on the House floor since then.

"We are trying to work with all stakeholders to get to a place where we can get something comprehensive done," he said.

Mr. Banks said he will continue to meet with stakeholders, including insurance companies, to try to come to an agreement.

Rep. Tom Leonard III (R-DeWitt Township) chair the House Insurance Committee, did not return a call for comment on if the bills would see a hearing.

Mr. Banks said he believes the bills can be the solution stakeholders are seeking.

"Michigan citizens are required to buy auto insurance, and yet we all know that there are thousands of uninsured drivers on the road because, based on where they live and not on their driving record, their policy is simply unaffordable," he said in a statement. "My bill would encourage insurance companies to participate in this plan and lower rates by also giving the company a tax credit for each household that signs up.

""This is the best kind of tax credit because it actually puts money back into the hands of consumers, in the form of lower rates, so that they have more to spend in their local shops and stores. This is a win for everyone," he said.

Washington: Presumptive Parole Bill A Narrow Change

For all the intense debate surrounding legislation that would enhance the ability of prisoners deemed likely to succeed to be released at their earliest release date, the Department of Corrections already releases most such inmates at that point and the Parole Board would retain some discretion not to release them under the bill, Corrections Director Heidi Washington said Monday.

In an interview with Gongwer News Service, Ms. Washington said already the Parole Board grants parole to 75 percent of those prisoners at their earliest release date judged to have a high probability of success outside of prison. Inmates are judged as having a high, average or low probability of success.

"There's a lot of emotion inserted into the discussion which tends to take away from how really narrow this piece of legislation is," she said.

HB 4138 passed the House, but has stalled in the Senate, where the bulk of the Republican majority is fiercely resisting the change. Attorney General Bill Schuette and a bipartisan group of local law enforcement leaders also have sharply attacked the legislation.

Mr. Schuette and the bill's critics have called the proposal "autopilot parole," removing any discretion the Parole Board now has to stop the parole of a prisoner.

Ms. Washington said, however, the bill specifically lists exceptions - there are six - that would allow the Parole Board to prevent the parole of an inmate judged as having a high probability of success outside of prison.

"What this legislation does is simply says for the 25 percent of cases that fall in the high (probability) range that aren't getting paroled now, that the board will articulate one of the stated reasons as the reason for the parole denial," she said. "That's all it says. So I think the important point is those decisions are already being made."

Since Governor Rick Snyder promoted her to director in July, Ms. Washington has had several major issues to address in addition to the presumptive parole question.

Trinity Services Group is now fully in control of prison food services after the state and Aramark parted ways.

Overall, Ms. Washington said she is pleased with how Trinity is handling the contract.

"I think there's always room for improvement. We're at the beginning of this relationship. We are making progress with Trinity," she said. "They are making progress, and we will continue to move in the right direction with them. They've been very accommodating, very responsive, very willing to move with us, to find ways of doing things, correcting problems. Things are going well so far. It's something that we will work on every day to strengthen our position."

One of Ms. Washington's early priorities was to set up a new contract monitoring unit for the department and that is now in place. Three staffers each oversee specific contracts with analysts working underneath them on the day-to-day monitoring duties.

"It's an important step to making sure that we are consistently monitoring all of our contracts, that we are using the same tools within a contract among our different monitors and that we are doing it in an efficient manner and bringing timely information and communication to the vendor and to the administration, our administration, to make sure we all stay on the same page and address issues as they arise."

Another key item is the rebidding of the contract for health, mental health and pharmacy services for the department. Outside vendors already handle those services, but the department is looking for one vendor to handle them all.

Bids had been due last Friday, but that deadline has been extended to December 21.

The 2015-16 fiscal year budget assumed $15 million in savings as a result of the new contract. Already the department has said that is unlikely given that a new contract would not be in place until near the end of the fiscal year.

Ms. Washington said she did not know how short of the $15 million the new contract would fall until the bids are in and a vendor chosen. And she said she could not say as of yet whether the department could find savings internally or would need a supplemental appropriation.

"We will do our best, as I think we do in all areas of this department, to be very wise stewards of the taxpayers' money, and if there are savings to be realized, we will do that," she said. "That's our job."

Ms. Washington was a top aide to several previous Corrections directors and was later a warden, so she said there have been no surprises in the job now that she is director.

"I sort of came at this position with a lot of history and knowledge, that when I finally got here as director, a lot of things that might have surprised other people didn't surprise me because I had spent so many years working side by side, hand in hand with all the previous directors," she said.

House Dems Fundraise On 'Ejecting' Speaker Cotter

House Democrats on Monday sent a fundraising email to supporters calling for House Speaker Kevin Cotter to resign.

The email says it is time to turn the "heat" on Mr. Cotter (R-Mount Pleasant).

The call cites the lawsuit from former staffers to ex-Reps. Todd Courser and Cindy Gamrat against the House, charging it violated their First Amendment rights and the Michigan Whistleblower Protection Act as well as invading their privacy.

"Speaker Cotter failed to protect House employees who exposed the abuse of power among members of his own party. His actions have tarnished the House, and the Office of the Speaker," the email said. "That's why we're launching the Eject Cotter Project to expose Speaker Cotter's cover-up and tell him it's time to resign. And we need you to help get this project off the ground."

Katie Carey, spokesperson for House Minority Leader Tim Greimel (D-Auburn Hills), when asked if Mr. Greimel was calling for Mr. Cotter to resign, said: "Speaker Cotter has been clear on behavior of House members. We should hold all members accountable to that level of behavior and it should be applied to everyone."

Keith Allard and Ben Graham, the staffers, released audio of Mr. Courser and Ms. Gamrat in August, which began the investigation that eventually led to Ms. Gamrat being expelled and Mr. Courser resigning.

At the time, Mr. Cotter had called for the two lawmakers to resign in the wake of their extramarital affair and asking Mr. Graham to send a bizarre cover up email.

The Democrats are charging Mr. Cotter should also resign using that logic.

"Throughout this entire investigation, Speaker Cotter has said that if any reports of misused tax dollars and other ethical or legal violations were true, then those representatives should resign," the email said. "Speaker Cotter should make good on his own words and resign."

Gideon D'Assandro, spokesperson for Mr. Cotter, said the Democrats are supporting Mr. Courser and Ms. Gamrat.

"So it isn't that surprising that they would support these two as well," Mr. D'Assandro said of Mr. Allard and Mr. Graham.

Board Planning For Alternatives, Risk Analysis For Straits Pipeline

The Pipeline Safety Advisory Board put most of the final touches Monday on its plan to hire contractors for risk and alternatives analyses on the Line 5 pipeline under the Straits of Mackinac.

The board is hoping to issue requests for a proposal in February, said Environmental Quality Director Dan Wyant, who co-chairs the board. The board's next meeting is in March.

Based on discussions from the board, the alternatives that contract would explore would range from leaving the pipeline as it is, to further limiting what it could carry, to shuttering it and moving the oil and gas it currently carries to other pipelines, trucks or barges.

But board members also urged language in the contract that would limit the exploration of some options.

The risk assessment contractor would have to look at a worst-case spill from the line, determining how long it would take and what it would cost to clean up the spill and what short- and long-term economic and environmental damage it might cause.

There was some discussion among board members what might constitute a worst case.

Chris Kelenske with the Department of State Police emergency management services said a worst case had to look at both full ice cover and open water.

Jeff Pillon with the National Association of State Energy Officials said the risk analysis should also look at some possibilities that, while less than worst case, might be more likely and so more hazardous. "In risk analysis, that's always part of the equation," he said of those lesser events.

Jennifer McKay with the Tip of the Mitt Watershed Council urged for pushing the contractor beyond events for which Enbridge Energy, the owner of the pipeline, might have planned. "Typically what we see is not foreseeable," she said of major spills.

Michael Shriberg with the National Wildlife Federation noted, for instance, that some recent training scenarios have looked at containing a spill where the line breaks and the automatic shutoffs engage. He said the worst case should look at situations where those fail-safes fail.

On the alternatives assessment, Mr. Pillon urged the board to limit exploration of some of the options. "Do we really want to go from a pipeline to barges on the Great Lakes?" he said, adding replacing the pipeline with trucks would be economically unviable.

But Mr. Shriberg said the board should look at some additional alternatives. "One of the options we have to look at is decommissioning without making it up through alternative methods," he said, noting a proposal to that effect submitted to the board (see below).

He said it might also be reasonable to limit the pipeline to natural gas, which he said would cause less environmental damage if the line leaked.

Guy Meadows with Michigan Technological University questioned the role for public universities in the process.

"It would be hard to imagine a contractor being able to do the kind of modeling the federal government or the universities would be able to do," he said.

Mr. Wyant said the process would be open for universities either to bid on the project or to act as subcontractors to the bidder.

There was also some interest among board members to conduct a pre-bid conference and for board members to be involved in that to allow them to interact with potential bidders and clarify some of the questions raised Monday.

Some board members also appeared interested in increasing the meeting schedule from the current quarterly dates rather than developing subcommittees and potentially losing some member's expertise on an issue.

Carol Isaacs, chief deputy attorney general, urged the board members to submit any studies or reports on the issues they felt might contribute to the discussions.

"We are going to need a body of credible evidence," Ms. Isaacs said.

ALTERNATIVE PLAN: The environmental group For the Love of Water released its own report Monday arguing that the best alternative was to close the pipeline under the Straits. The oil that flowed through Line 5 could be shunted to Line 6B, which runs through Wisconsin to Chicago and then east to Detroit, the group said.

The western line was rebuilt since it burst and spilled oil into the Kalamazoo River and can carry substantially more product, the group said.

"Decommissioning Line 5 in the Great Lakes would not disrupt Michigan's oil and propane supply," Liz Kirkwood, executive director of FLOW, said at a media roundtable before the board meeting. "Enbridge effectively built its own version of the now-rejected Keystone Pipeline."

The group's report said Enbridge could still use the portion of Line 5 remaining in the Upper Peninsula to deliver the natural gas to the propane refinery in Rapid River.

The group urged the board to recommend that the line be closed under the Straits until the board makes its final recommendations, likely sometime next year.

Enbridge spokesperson Jason Manshum said he had not seen the FLOW report, but said it was, at this point, just that group's opinion.

Mr. Manshum said the company's focus is on helping the board find the right contractors to assess potential options and risks.

"We wouldn't operate Line 5 if we didn't think it was safe and reliable," he said.

Supreme Court Refuses To Hear Grand Rapids Marijuana Case

A divided Supreme Court ruled against hearing an appeal that challenged a Grand Rapids voter-approved city charter amendment decriminalizing possession and use of marijuana.

The decision on a 5-2 vote lets stand a decision by the Court of Appeals that held the charter amendment did not violate either the Michigan Constitution or law.

The order was issued on Friday, released to the public on Saturday and has not yet generated much response. However, the court's action could help spur more cities to adopt charter amendments decriminalizing marijuana.

So far 20 cities, including Grand Rapids, have decriminalized marijuana - subjecting its use and possession to civil fines, with no incarceration - and the decision comes as organizations are trying to raise signatures to put an initiative on the ballot legalizing or decriminalizing marijuana statewide.

In its order, the Supreme Court said it was not persuaded the questions raised needed to be reviewed.

Justice Stephen Markman and Justice David Viviano dissented, and each wrote separately they believed the case should have been heard.

Grand Rapids voters approved the charter amendment in 2012, making a first offense of possession and use of marijuana a $25 fine. Subsequent offenses can lead to fines as high as $100, but nothing higher, with no incarceration. The amendment also prohibits Grand Rapids police officers and the city attorney from referring any offense under the charter to another law enforcement agency.

The amendment does not restrict county sheriff's deputies, State Police or federal authorities in the city.

Michigan's statewide statute says possession and use of marijuana - unless under the medical marijuana statute it is possessed and used by a registered patient or caregiver - can lead to imprisonment for up to one year and $2,000 in fines.

The Kent County prosecutor filed suit against the city, charging the decriminalization amendment was at variance with state law that prohibits a city provision from conflicting or contravening a general state law.

The Court of Appeals, in a non-published decision issued this past January, said the charter amendment in fact does not contravene the state law, it creates separate provisions.

If the city had passed an ordinance decriminalizing marijuana, that would have violated the law, but a charter amendment falls outside the state law's enforcement, it said.

Mr. Viviano, in his dissent, said the case presented, "an important constitutional question concerning whether a home rule city may, through its charter, encroach upon a county prosecutor's broad power to enforce state law."

The prosecutor is the proper person to decide whether to charge a person with violating state laws, not local police or city officials, Mr. Viviano said.

And since the court was not hearing the case, Mr. Viviano called on the Legislature to clarify the rights of police officers and prosecutor should they make an arrest under the state marijuana statute. Or, he called for the Legislature to amend the state's Home Rule City Act to include a charter action along with an ordinance as a provision that cannot contravene state law.

Mr. Markman wrote separately to say the case should be looked at to see if the charter amendment in fact both contravenes and conflict's with the state law.

Along with Grand Rapids, other cities that have decriminalized marijuana include Detroit, Flint, Saginaw, Lansing, Ann Arbor, East Lansing and most recently Portage and Keego Harbor.

House Retains Dickinson Wright For Whistleblower Lawsuit

The House is retaining Dickinson Wright to handle the whistleblower lawsuit filed by the former staffers of Todd Courser and Cindy Gamrat.

Since the Department of the Attorney General is still investigating the matter criminally, the House retained outside counsel, said Gideon D'Assandro, spokesperson for House Republicans.

The cost of hiring the firm is unknown at this point, with the length of the proceedings being the main factor, Mr. D'Assandro said.

Ben Graham and Keith Allard, who worked for former Reps. Todd Courser and Cindy Gamrat and provided the evidence that led to Mr. Courser's resignation and Ms. Gamrat's expulsion, are suing the House for violating their First Amendment rights and the Michigan Whistleblower Protection Act, and for invading their privacy.

Canvassers Continue Consideration Of Rebutting Signature Petitions

The Board of State Canvassers on Monday rejected two recall petitions and continued discussion on a request that the board revise its policy on how to rebut the presumption that a signature on a petition proposing a constitutional amendment or initiative legislation is stale and void if made more than 180 days after the petition was filed.

At the request of Elections Director Christopher Thomas, the board took no action on the request submitted by Jeffrey Hank in verifying signatures on petitions where signatures begin expiring. Mr.

Hank is an attorney representing one of the marijuana legalization efforts who is urging the board to instead use the Qualified Voter File as a check on registrations.

Discussion on the request began earlier this month, and Mr. Thomas said Monday his staff has begun work on a draft policy. Among its provisions are to separate and identify all of the sheets that include signatures gathered earlier than 180 days prior to the date of filing from the remainder of the filing, and to attach a copy of each signer's QVF record to those sheets.

He also suggested submitting an affidavit by the individual who reviewed the signers' voter file records to assert review and that evidence had or had not been submitted to rebut the statutory presumption of expiration.

"What we're bringing forward essentially tracks what was attempted to be done in 1986," he said, referencing the year in which the policy in question was adopted.

Signatures in question would be able to be released to the board but not to the general public, Mr. Thomas noted.

Mr. Hank urged the board to consider tweaking the policy that currently prohibits address history from being available to the general public. And he said it might be difficult to attach a QVF to every petition sheet.

But he said the suggestions were still "a good step forward."

"I think this would go a long way to the purity of elections," Mr. Hank said.

But any changes would likely have to be made statutorily through the Legislature, to which attorney John Pirich say he was unsure "what the haste is" to resolve the issue.

"The Legislature has a lot of authority, and what I'm hearing is a system that's going to be a hybrid of a system," Mr. Pirich said. "I think we have to be careful when we come up with issues of this nature that we don't react to a single issue or a single component and have a clear understanding of the impact a proposal like this could have."

Mr. Pirich said he also had faith that this issue would be something the Legislature would be looking at very closely next year.

Board member Julie Matuzak said she would be interested in a way to solicit comments for the next meeting from those who work in the field or are involved with petition gathering, and Mr. Thomas said he had planned to already.

RECALLS DENIED: A petition to recall Sen. Wayne Schmidt (R-Traverse City) for "his votes on November 3, 2015 increasing fuel taxes and licensing fees," according to the petition, was rejected after its language was determined to insufficiently state factually and clearly - as is required by law - the reason for the petition.

William Bailey, the man who filed the petition, included Senate roll call votes on the road funding package that was passed that day in the Senate, but because Mr. Schmidt's specific votes on specific legislation was not included in the petition language, it was rejected.

Yet another recall petition by Detroit Pastor Angelo Brown against Governor Rick Snyder was rejected for the same reason. Mr. Brown was not at the meeting on Monday.

The petition, citing Mr. Snyder's failure to provide the city of Flint with safe drinking water in 2015, was Mr. Brown's second of three attempts to recall the governor (another attempt by Mr. Brown failed earlier this month, and yet another attempt will likely be heard at the board's next meeting).

CALIFORNIAN FILES TO RUN FOR PRESIDENT: San Diego businessman Roque "Rocky" De La Fuente has filed to run as a Democratic presidential nominee in Michigan by way of submitting nominating or qualifying petitions. Mr. De La Fuente submitted 20,166 signatures at the end of last week, according to his affidavit.

Mr. Thomas said his office is in the process of canvassing those petitions.

Campaign Notes: Trump Returning To Michigan

Republican presidential candidate Donald Trump will make his second appearance in Michigan as a presidential candidate next week, visiting Grand Rapids.

Mr. Trump will speak at the Deltaplex Arena and Conference Center at 7:30 p.m., December 21.

CLEMENTS VIDEO: Paul Clements, the Democrat challenging U.S. Rep. Fred Upton (R-St. Joseph) in the 6th U.S. House District, released a new video Monday discussing his positions on the economy.

"Here in Southwest Michigan, we've been seeing declining wages," Mr. Clements said in the video. "It's because the deck is stacked in favor of the big corporations and against the small and medium sized businesses because it's the big corporations that are buying the politicians."

He called for a tax structure that would favor small business.

He also urged more participation in the Peace Corps. "The Peace Corps is a way for Americans to go and provide service in developing countries and work together to figure out what the challenge is and how we overcome that and how we work together," he said. "And that's the same spirit of cooperation and working together that we need for our broader economy."

MICHIGAN NOW ENDORSES ANTI-DISCRIMINATION BALLOT PROPOSAL: The Michigan National Organization for Women said Monday it is backing the proposal from Fair Michigan expanding the state's anti-discrimination protections by extending the existing constitutional prohibition on the denial of civil or political rights based on race, religion, color or national origin to sexual orientation, gender and gender identity.

"People just assume that women's rights are guaranteed and that discrimination is illegal," said Michigan NOW President Danielle Troia. "Unfortunately, that's not the case. I firmly believe that the people of Michigan want women to be treated fairly and that they will vote for the Fair Michigan ballot initiative."

While most of the focus on the proposal has centered on its expansion of protections for lesbians, gays, bisexuals and transgender persons, it also would extend to gender.

HOUSE MEETING EARLIER WEDNESDAY, THURSDAY: The House has changed its schedule this week and will meet at 10 a.m. on Wednesday and Thursday.

LIBRARY HOURS: The Library of Michigan is expanding its hours effective January 9, the Department of Education announced Monday.

The main library will be open Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Currently, the library is open only the second Saturday of the month.

ROADS PLAN: The Department of Transportation is seeking public comment on its 2016-20 transportation plan.

The updates to the plan are posted at www.michigan.gov/mdot5yearplan.

Comments are being accepted through January 9 to Geralyn Ayers, Department of Transportation, Environmental Services Section, P.O. Box 30050, Lansing, MI 48909, ayersg@michigan.gov, (517) 373-2227 or (517) 335- 5696 (FAX).

ROAD WATCHERS: The department is also looking for people to tell it how the roads look in the northern Lower Peninsula this winter.

Essentially, the volunteers would call in between 6 a.m. and 9 a.m. to report on road conditions of major thoroughfares in the regions north of M-55. Department officials said the information would help them more effectively deploy resources.

Those interested can get more information at www.michigan.gov/roadwatchers.

GOP Muscles Through End To Straight Ticket Option

The Republican legislative majorities, in one of the more relentless legislative steamrollers seen in some time, powered to passage Wednesday a bill that would end the ability of voters to choose a party's entire slate of candidates with a single selection.

With final passage in the House about 10:30 p.m., SB 13 will soon land on Governor Rick Snyder's desk, and while the governor has insisted he has made no decision on whether to sign the bill, it would be an enormous shock if he did not.

It marked the last voting session of 2015 for the House and Senate, which called for the sine die adjournment to occur swiftly, at 11:45 a.m. Friday in both houses. Formal sessions will recommence starting January 13.

Two significant issues saw no action this week and will wait until 2016. In the House, there had been some talk of work on major energy legislation, but that petered out, and in the Senate, a bill to extend the sunset on the Health Insurance Claims Assessment remains pending on the floor.

Presuming Mr. Snyder signs the elimination of the straight-ticket option, it will end a mechanism that on the whole has helped Democrats more than Republicans, especially on the races for the statewide education boards.

And a Republican source said in addition to ending a key Democratic tool, it also would provide some defense to House Republicans, seeking to defend their majority this year, in the event Donald Trump or U.S. Sen. Ted Cruz of Texas wins the Republican Party presidential nomination. This source said voter recoil at the Republican candidate could prompt heavier than usual straight Democratic voting and cost the GOP its House majority.

Sen. Steve Bieda (D-Warren) labeled the legislation "the Donald Trump is going to be your nominee and you're terrified bill."

Senate Majority Leader Arlan Meekhof (R-West Olive) said, no, Mr. Trump's potential nomination was not behind the legislation.

"That was a pretty funny line, but I don't think it had anything to do with it," he said. "In fact, I'm going to call him and tell him that was pretty funny."

Mr. Meekhof said the bill is "a very progressive idea" that puts Michigan in sync with 40 other states that do not offer a straight-ticket option.

"We did a fair amount of checking on (the effect on voting lines)," he said of other states. "There was minimal to no effect on voting lines and things like that, so we thought it was the right thing to do. More and more people don't identify by party, so not having a party label on it was probably a good idea as well."

Left in the dust was a separate bill, HB 4724, which would have allowed voters to vote via absentee ballot for any reason, provided they picked up the ballot in-person at a clerk's office and with photo identification, and its champion, Rep. Lisa Posthumus Lyons (R-Alto). Ms. Lyons, the House Elections Committee chair, had insisted on the bill to alleviate longer lines and convinced her House Republican colleagues to tie-bar it to the elimination of straight-ticket voting.

That upset the chair of the Senate Elections and Government Reform Committee, Sen. Dave Robertson (R-Grand Blanc), a staunch opponent of no-reason absentee voting. The question going into this week was who would prevail, and there was no doubt Wednesday night that Mr. Robertson was the victor.

House Republicans cast aside Ms. Lyons' insistence on tying the two bills together and concurred in the version of the bill without the tie-bar on a 54-52 vote, the minimum needed for passage. But that was merely the capper on about five hours of wild action.

For much of the day, it appeared an effort by local clerks, who fear longer lines with voters having to pick candidates individually in each race, had succeeded in bottling up the bill in the Senate unless it contained the tie-bar to no-reason absentee voting.

Just before 5:30 p.m., Mr. Meekhof's spokesperson sent word to reporters on the Senate floor that the Senate would adjourn for the year in a matter of moments. The Senate moved on to Statements, usually a precursor to adjournment. Cheery Merry Christmas and Happy New Year speeches took place. Senate Majority Floor Leader Mike Kowall (R-White Lake Township) took to the microphone, with all expectations he would move to adjourn.

But then he moved for a "very brief recess." The recess was not brief. Sources said House Speaker Kevin Cotter (R-Mount Pleasant) decided he did not want the issue lingering into 2016, and decided to round up the votes for the bill without the tie-bar despite Ms. Lyons' position. On the House floor, as the inevitable vote neared, she looked displeased.

Senate Republicans, with their enormous 27-11 majority - which is functionally 28-10 given that Sen. Virgil Smith (D-Detroit) is so estranged from his caucus that he routinely votes with the GOP on key tactical matters - were at no risk of not passing the bill once they got rolling.

But they unleashed a fury of parliamentary tactics to minimize the Democrats' ability to attack the legislation. The biggest surprise, and one not seen in some time, was the move to clear the Senate floor of all staff, except Mr. Meekhof's. That left Democrats with no staff on the floor, and the Senate Democratic Caucus was furious (see separate story).

Democrats said the bill would lengthen voting lines.

"Straight-ticket voting has its place in our state," Mr. Bieda said. "We have a long ballot. People have the convenience of voting the way they'd like to vote. You shouldn't be going in there micro-managing how they're going to vote."

No Republican spoke to the bill in either chamber.

"Reforms have done away with political machines and party bosses. Likewise, we should open up the voting process and do away with their broken, archaic method of rubber stamping candidate slates with a single vote," said Sen. Marty Knollenberg (R-Troy), the bill sponsor, in a statement.

Two top Republican strategists, Greg McNeilly and Stu Sandler, congratulated Republicans on passing the bills and said Democrats had overblown the issue and been hypocritical. Overblown because 40 other states have no straight-ticket option and hypocritical because House Democrats criticized the GOP for breaking the tie-bar to no-reason absentee voting, which they voted against earlier this month.

In the House, all Democrats also voted no and were joined by Ms. Lyons as well as five other Republicans - Rep. John Bizon of Battle Creek, Rep. Ben Glardon of Owosso, Rep. Dave Maturen of Vicksburg, Rep. Martin Howrylak of Troy and Rep. Philip Potvin of Cadillac.

Mr. Maturen originally voted yes on the bill when it passed last week. Rep. Dave Pagel (R-Berrien Springs) voted yes on Wednesday but voted no last week.

Ms. Lyons said in a statement she has supported eliminating straight-ticket voting because she thinks voters should choose candidates based on who they are, not parties.

"I have consistently cautioned that we need to be mindful of the impact this will have on Election Day, and that we need to provide tools - like offering Michigan voters secure no-reason absentee voting- to mitigate longer lines at the polls," she said in a statement. "Because this bill falls short of addressing very legitimate concerns, in the end I could not support it. I do not believe this policy alone is in the best interest of Michigan's voters, and it is unfortunate that the Legislature squandered the opportunity to enact good election reform that is not pro-Republican or pro-Democrat, but pro-voter."

Mr. Cotter did not speak to reporters following Wednesday's lengthy session. But his spokesperson said Ms. Lyons did not get "rolled" in the process of passing SB 13.

"When we put bills up, we ask if the House supports them or not, the House supported a tie-barred version and the House supported a version of SB 13 that stood on its own so we went ahead and supported the bill," Gideon D'Assandro said.

Rep. Pam Faris (D-Clio) said the bill was a bad bill when it cleared the House last week, and its only saving grave was its link to HB 4724, "secure" no-reason absentee voting.

"If we want to be responsible legislators the answer is clear, we have to vote against Senate changes to SB 13," she said.

House Minority Floor Leader Sam Singh (D-East Lansing) said many Republicans told him when the bill originally passed last week, linked to no-reason absentee, that at least they tie-barred it.

"Where is that conviction my friends? I don't see that here today," he said. "I ask you and my colleagues from across the aisle to stand with your original conviction and vote this down."

Snyder: Inaction Could Leave DPS In Judge's Hands

If the state is unable to restructure the Detroit Public Schools in the early part of 2016, the possibility exists that one or more school district creditors could take DPS to court over unpaid bills, Governor Rick Snyder said Wednesday.

Mr. Snyder has announced two plans for the district this year, one in April and one in the fall, both containing the same core principles - breaking the district into two, with an old district carrying the debt and a new one to run educational operations. The 18-mill property tax applied to non-principal residences in the city would, instead of going to the School Aid Fund for all school districts, become dedicated to paying down DPS's $715 million debt.

But both landed with a thud in the Legislature. Republicans recoiled at the use of $715 million over 10 years from the School Aid Fund, and Democrats said the plan needs to return power to an elected school board sooner. Despite several projections the bills would be introduced "soon," that has yet to happen.

"This is a case where, with a school district if you have major creditors, creditors could take them to court and you can end up in a situation where then a judge could potentially even appoint a receiver or do other solutions that would move from a proactive solution to a reactive solution that could have negative financial consequences beyond the school district," Mr. Snyder said in an interview with Gongwer News Service.

Exactly when the district could face such a scenario is unclear, Mr. Snyder said, because there is no telling when a creditor might decide to go to court. Mr. Snyder said he believes several legislators understand the risks of inaction. But "it would be really helpful" to complete legislation by March, he said.

Asked if he was confident the Legislature would act, Mr. Snyder said, "The goal is clearly to take legislative action, and I think there's a reasonable opportunity to see that get done."

GOVERNOR NONCOMMITTAL ON DATA CENTERS: Mr. Snyder said he has not decided whether to sign legislation (SB 616 and SB 617) soon to land on his desk that would exempt collocated data centers from the sales and use taxes.

Lt. Governor Brian Calley, sources have said, was heavily involved in the negotiations on the bill, but Mr. Snyder said until he gets a chance to see what the final bill looks like, he cannot commit to a decision on legislation.

Mr. Snyder did say of the legislation that "a lot of discussion and progress (was) made." But he also pushed back for the first time against criticism that signing the bills would be hypocritical because he has strongly opposed targeted tax breaks.

"I do emphasize to people this is not a tax credit because I've had people say, 'Well governor we know you don't like tax credits,'" he said. "Well this is not a tax credit situation. This is an exemption for a category just like there are a number of exemptions for sales and use tax."

Mr. Snyder said he is researching whether data centers are a cyber equivalent of the industrial processing exemption when customers pay sales tax on the finished good.

"Is this an expansion of something that already exists reflecting the new world versus saying this is fundamentally like an outlier?" he said.

SNYDER URGES DISTRICTS TO PLAN LONG-TERM ON ENROLLMENT: The slow boil continues among K-12 public school leaders for a serious effort to overhaul school finance given that enrollment is declining statewide and, with funding following students under Proposal A of 1994, less money will flow into the School Aid Fund as a result.

Even as the state has put more money into K-12 schools overall in recent years, many districts with relatively flat or declining enrollments are hurting financially. Mr. Snyder said it is indeed challenging.

But he put the issue back on the school districts to an extent and said they should plan years in advance on enrollment.

"I don't want to oversimplify, but assuming you get (the students) when they're 5 years old or so, you had potentially four or five years to help figure out what's going on in your community to help you plan," he said. "And so that's one of the questions, how many school districts actually have an effective planning model to look out that many years because if you have a longer time horizon you can more effectively manage?"

Mr. Snyder said much the same as he always has on the topic of school finance: "At some point we could get into the broader questions of school finance, but I'm not teeing that up at this time."

FAIR MICHIGAN PROPOSAL: Mr. Snyder offered no opinion on the ballot proposal to expand the state's anti-discrimination protections by extending the existing constitutional prohibition on the denial of civil or political rights based on race, religion, color or national origin to sexual orientation, gender and gender identity.

Mr. Snyder said he would reiterate his call to the Legislature "to do Elliott-Larsen," referring to the Elliott-Larsen Civil Rights Act, the statute that prohibits discrimination based on race, sex, religion, age and other classes in housing, employment and public accommodations. Efforts to broaden that law to sexual orientation and gender identity have gone nowhere in the conservative Legislature.

"I've got enough issues and priorities I'm going to stay focused in on and people are free to do what they deem best in terms of their own efforts to do ballot initiatives," he said.

As to how he might vote on the proposal from Fair Michigan if it makes the November 2016 ballot, the governor said, "That's the beauty about going into a ballot box where you can just sort of make your decisions about how you're going to vote as an individual."

UNIVERSITY FUNDING: In less than two months, Mr. Snyder will deliver his budget recommendation for the 2016-17 fiscal year to the Legislature. The governor said it is "too soon to say" whether he will propose bringing all public universities back to the funding level they had before a 15 percent cut in the 2011-12 fiscal year, Mr. Snyder's first budget.

"I'm quite clear that, relative priorities, I would like to see it brought back up at least to what it was," he said.

MEDICAID EXPANSION/HEALTHY MICHIGAN: Mr. Snyder said he sees "reasonable progress" in the state's efforts to win a waiver from the Center for Medicare and Medicaid Services enabling the state's Medicaid expansion program to proceed. A decision is due by the end of the year.

As to what the state might have to consider regarding concerns that it will bump up against the trigger ending the program if it costs the state more money than it saves, Mr. Snyder said only that the concern would be it would create more pressure on the General Fund.

Of his original proposal to set aside savings from the expansion to pay for the state's share of the program, which will start in the coming years, Mr. Snyder said it was a "good idea," but "didn't work." Those savings were instead directed to other spending priorities.

FLINT WATER: Mr. Snyder would not say whether there was anything he has learned from the Flint water crisis, saying he does not want to prejudge the report being assembled by a group of environmental experts about what went wrong that resulted in levels of lead in the city's water requiring remediation and elevating blood lead levels in the city's children.

While the crisis "clearly is one of the biggest problems" his administration has faced, Mr. Snyder said his administration was proactive, providing free water tests, filters, blood testing and follow up care; returning the city to the Detroit water system; and encouraging overall lead awareness.

Meekhof, Jones At Odds On Medical Marijuana

Senate Majority Leader Arlan Meekhof is not at a point where he is willing to discharge legislation from the Senate Judiciary Committee that would create a tiered system of regulation for medical marijuana because "then it becomes my problem to fix whatever people want to do or not to do," he told Gongwer News Service in a recent interview.

"I'd prefer that agreement be made before it comes to the floor. I wouldn't be their greatest champion," Mr. Meekhof (R-West Olive) said.

And he said he "may or may not" vote on the bills even if they are reported from committee.

"It's a really difficult issue for me personally," he said. "Not discounting the fact that medical marijuana has some medical properties and does do some things for people, but if it's medicine, how do we regulate and control it like medicine so it doesn't become recreational and other things that aren't beneficial to our communities?"

The revelation comes on the heels of a statement by Sen. Rick Jones (R-Grand Ledge) just one day before that he was hoping the majority leader would discharge the bills (HB 4209 and HB 4210) before the calendar year, but given the limited number of session days remaining, was hoping to see movement on the bills after the first of the year.

Mr. Jones on Wednesday said he was surprised by the majority leader's position.

"I can only repeat what he said, that there were too many issues this year, that he would look at discharging them next year and he's not necessarily supportive of the marijuana bills, but he would consider letting the Senate decide," Mr. Jones said.

The bills have not been able to come out of his committee because the votes are not there on all bills relating to medical marijuana regulation, but he believes he can get the votes on the floor, he said.

"There's no bills that I have the votes for at this time," he said. "I do think I have the votes on the Senate floor."

Mr. Meekhof said in his interview with Gongwer that legislation permitting the use of marijuana-infused products - the other medical marijuana regulation legislation Mr. Jones was perhaps referencing - may have even more of an uphill battle. Legislation to that effect in the Senate, SB 140, has been sitting in the Senate Judiciary Committee, and House legislation, HB 4210, passed the House in October and is also in the Judiciary Committee.

"Once it's baked into something, how do you measure the potency of it? If it's sitting around in somebody's house, how does a kid know that's a brownie he can't have?" he said. "Again, not saying it isn't effective, but when you put it in that form, is it really medicine? Could it be construed as something else?"

Mr. Meekhof said there hasn't really been a "wide caucus discussion" on the tiered regulation bills. Mr. Jones has talked a little bit about them to leadership to give the basics and allow people to start forming opinions and questions, but that's it, he said.

Senate Erupts In Straight-Ticket Voting Fury

Senate Democrats accused majority Republicans on Wednesday of trampling over Senate protocols in an effort to limit debate on controversial legislation to end the straight ticket voting option.

Sen. Steve Bieda and several other Senate Democrats were especially heated with their colleagues across the aisle on when, after hours of recessing and no voting, Republicans decided to vote on a bill eliminating straight-ticket voting at the eleventh hour.

The day in the Senate began as running through, rather quickly, its tentative agenda that had been sent out on Tuesday night after another 12-hour-plus session. By noon on Wednesday, the chamber had whizzed through that agenda and recessed until 2 p.m.

Senate Majority Leader Arlan Meekhof (R-West Olive) after session on Tuesday had already indicated his caucus would follow the lead of Senate Elections and Government Reform Committee Chair Sen. Dave Robertson (R-Grand Blanc), who was adamantly opposed to the tie bar included by the House of the elimination bill, SB 13, with HB 4724, providing for "secure" no-reason absentee voting, as bill sponsor Rep. Lisa Posthumus Lyons (R-Alto) has referred to it. The tie-bar was allegedly critical for the House GOP - it eventually reversed course and assented to dropping it - but never settled well in the Senate.

Several hours passed when the Senate returned from recess in mid-afternoon, and by roughly 5:30 p.m., Mr. Meekhof's spokesperson, Amber McCann, indicated to the press that the caucus would be waiting on another bill, SB 571, to come from the House, but would not do straight-ticket voting elimination that day. She also said the Senate would adjourn for the year, meaning the issue would not be taken up again for about a month while the Legislature was on break for the holiday.

And all seemed to continue heading in that direction too, as Senate Majority Floor Leader Mike Kowall (R-White Lake Township) made a motion for statements shortly thereafter. The statements from both sides of the aisle were generally jolly in nature, wishing best wishes to colleagues and complimenting one another on the professional tone of the Senate for its first year of most of the senators' second terms.

Mr. Meekhof, in his speech, even noted how the Senate had passed more than 400 bills together in 2015, many in a bipartisan fashion. Then just as it seemed the Senate would adjourn, Mr. Kowall asked for a "very brief recess."

The tone changed dramatically over the next three hours, and with it came creeping insecurities from straight-ticket voting elimination opponents that the bill would still come up.

First, Mr. Robertson called for a Senate Republican caucus. Upon emerging from it, Mr. Kowall then made a motion to concur in the House substitute on SB 13, and proposed amendments lit up the list of actions that would need to be fulfilled before taking a concurrence vote. Among those amendments was one by Mr. Robertson that, as Mr. Meekhof suggested the night before, broke the tie-bar with HB 4724.

But first came an amendment by Sen. Curtis Hertel Jr. (D-East Lansing) to remove the $5 million appropriation contained within the bill (an increase the House included from the Senate first including $1 million), as well as an amendment by Sen. David Knezek (D-Dearborn Heights) to tie-bar the bill to HB 5114 making Election Day a state holiday. In the five minutes Mr. Knezek had to speak about his amendment, he spoke very, very slowly so as to ensure he would use up all of his permitted time (and delay further action on the bill).

PROCEDURALLY SPEAKING: Both amendments were defeated, and for at least an hour after that, Senate Republicans and Democrats dusted off their procedural rules books. Mr. Kowall had earlier excused Sen. Mike Green (R-Mayville) from the balance of session, which opened a can of worms when he then decided after Mr. Knezek's amendment to make a motion for a call of the Senate - which locks the doors of the chamber and forbids senators from leaving the chamber - and ordered that all Senate staff "except for the Senate majority" be removed from the floor.

That was a rarely, if ever, seen move that deprived minority Democrats of any staff on the floor. And that, as much as anything, triggered the furious Democratic response that ensued.

Under that call of the Senate, the sergeants "may arrest any or all of the senators absent without leave," which would seem to have included Mr. Green, and Senate Minority Floor Leader Morris Hood III (D-Detroit) fought for his inclusion in the call of the Senate and to be present on the Senate floor. But the rule does note that those senators allowed leave do not have to attend, and ultimately, Mr. Green was granted an excuse despite Mr. Hood's objections.

But Mr. Hood continued objections and "point of order" calls for removing staff from the floor and the eventual decision by Lt. Governor Brian Calley, presiding as the president of the Senate, to cease all further debate on SB 13. Democrats had about seven more amendments after the chamber adopted Mr. Robertson's amendment breaking the tie-bar that Mr. Kowall moved to be considered en bloc, forcing one single vote to wipe out all the amendments and prevent further debate on them, for or against.

And Democrats, especially Mr. Bieda (D-Warren), were fired up, especially when they requested to give a no-vote explanation prior to voting on concurrence and Mr. Calley told them they could "provide it to the secretary at any time." Mr. Calley would later explain that once the question on concurrence has been called, the no vote explanation has to be offered after the vote.

"This episode today is so embarrassing on how the Senate is handling itself and how the majority party is handling itself that you really truly should be ashamed," the normally mild-mannered Mr. Bieda said in his no vote explanation. "This is really disgusting. You restrict the ability of people to speak on amendment - it wouldn't have cost you much to stay another half hour or so to at least listen to some debate!

"But no, you decided to cut it off. You decided to cut it off, and it's a big disregard to each of the voters that sent each one of us up here. And they'd be ashamed to see this tonight. I'm sure they would be, because you have to be honest when you're dealing in this Legislature. You have to be transparent. We're fighting that. You're doing all the worst that you see in these banana republic(s). You're seeing fascist dictatorship. This is not something you do in a constitutional, representative democracy," he continued.

Mr. Bieda said he had never seen such an infringement on the right of elected officials to speak to an issue.

Mr. Hertel also spoke in ardent opposition to the vote and how it was handled.

"Well, I guess my colleagues on the other side of the aisle really enjoy irony, because the reason we were told this bill was important was so people wouldn't make strong, partisan decisions, and that's what everybody in this room just did," Mr. Hertel said. "We were told people should take the time to go line by line and consider each vote. And then you, in the idea of expediency, threw all of our amendments to one vote for yourselves. So I guess you guys get a straight ticket. So that's fun. Merry Christmas to the rest of us in this state."

Mr. Hertel ripped Republicans for talking just hours before about bipartisanship, the Christmas spirit, "and the strong work we've done together" that was "ripped apart in one night."

"I hope the people are listening. I hope the people get to see how you guys did this tonight. I hope they see that you forced us, all these amendments into one vote, and you won't give them that same opportunity," he said. "Everyone in this room should be embarrassed. You should be ashamed. I thought a lot of us had better relationships than this, but I guess I was wrong."

Senate Minority Leader Jim Ananich (D-Flint) spoke to reporters after session about the ordeal, saying "it's extremely egregious when they rig the rules in order to rig the system," and that "that's really telling and unfortunate," he said.

MEEKHOF RESPONSE: Speaking with reporters after session, Mr. Meekhof defended the tactics his caucus took in discussion of SB 13.

"That was to focus everybody down on the task at hand, because people were tired and getting a little sloppy, so we just put people in their desk, make them focus on the task at hand, bring the noise down a little bit and get the work done," he said.

As to putting all the Democratic amendments together, he said, "Procedurally, we just thought that was the best thing to do, to move things on."

Campaign Finance Bill Clears Legislature Amid Confusion

Legislation establishing various campaign finance changes and codifying Department of State practices heads to Governor Rick Snyder Wednesday after both chambers approved the bill that quickly became 41 pages longer through a floor substitute, causing Democrats to mostly oppose the issue.

The House adopted a floor substitute to a campaign finance bill that took the legislation from 12 pages long to 53 pages at the end of a nearly 12-hour session on Wednesday, causing Democrats to challenge the changes as not germane to the original bill.

SB 571 eventually passed the House 58-48 and then the Senate 25-12, sending the bill to Governor Rick Snyder.

According to House and Senate Republicans, the bill would prohibit public bodies from using public resources for communications referencing local ballot questions by radio, television, mass mailing or prerecorded telephone message 60 days prior to an election. That could have a major impact on the ability of local governments and school districts to say anything about local millage and bond questions.

It would also codify existing Department of State interpretations that identification and disclaimer are two separate requirements. The bill says the identification requirement includes the words "paid for by" and a disclaimer is in the same form but contains "not authorized by" or "authorized by."

The bill would also allow a candidate committee to use a contribution that is not designated for a particular election cycle to pay outstanding debts and obligations from a previous election cycle; eliminate February filing deadlines for independent committees or political committees; clarify campaign statement filing deadlines in the bill apply to candidate committees; and require a committee's statement of organization include an email address.

The bill would also require the Department of State to post on its website all "dispositive" materials regarding a complaint for violations and alleged violations within 45 days instead of 60 days.

And amendments from Rep. Lisa Posthumus Lyons (R-Alto) that were adopted to the bill outline that the treasurer of an incumbent judge or justice following their election or appointment is not required to file a written statement indicating the committee does not expect to receive or expend an amount more than $1,000.

The bill also clarifies an organization can include a request for a donation to their political action committee on the same form they request dues payments from members. And ends the existing requirement that employees participating in an organization's automatic payment or payroll deduction plan to the organization's PAC affirmatively assent annually to participate. Individuals would still have to provide their permission but the annual report would end

Those last components were the original content of the bill.

House Minority Floor Leader Sam Singh (D-East Lansing) had originally challenged the floor substitute as not germane. The Democrats scored a win in a roll call vote on the ruling of the chair that it was indeed germane, which passed on a party-line vote.

Mr. Singh said the Democrats were not able to offer amendments because the substitute was not made available to them, rendering their original amendments useless.

"You are making changes. You are making changes to the way disclaimers are done. You are making changes to in-kind dollars and resources. These are important issues to the public," he said. "This could have been a bipartisan bill. As it was started in the process."

Geiss, Love 'Disappointed' In Caucus Punishment

Rep. Erika Geiss and Rep. Leslie Love are disappointed they were stripped of Democratic Caucus leadership positions in retaliation for voting on a bill other Democrats had opposed last week, the pair said in a statement issued Wednesday.

The statement came through Rep. Harvey Santana (D-Detroit), himself an estranged House Democrat. Ms. Geiss (D-Taylor) and Ms. Love (D-Detroit) said they were stripped of their caucus titles and caucus staff support after voting yes on HB 4686 - sponsored by Mr. Santana. The bill, which would make it harder for individuals to sue municipalities over defective sidewalks, would have been a vote short of passage had the two lawmakers voted no.

"I am extremely disappointed with how this situation has played out," Ms. Love, who was caucus vice chair, said in a statement. "The caucus put me in the position of having to choose between the interests of my colleagues or the needs of my district. With this bill Detroit could save $6 million a year. That is money that could be returned to the taxpayers or used to put a few more police officers on the streets."

Ms. Geiss, who was the assistant caucus whip, said she never imagined she would be punished for voting her district instead of a caucus position.

"The Democratic Party is often compared to a big tent, where everyone is welcomed, but apparently the tent is shrinking," she said. "I find it distressing that the Democratic Caucus, led by Leader Greimel, would insist I choose following a caucus position over the needs of my constituency. I was elected to office by the people of the 12th District - (and) will vote in accordance with their needs. "

The bill would allow municipalities to use the "open and obvious" defense when being sued over defective sidewalks, likely making it more difficult for individuals to sue.

Large Democratic cities - Detroit, Dearborn, Lansing and Taylor - voiced support. However, a major Democratic player - the Michigan Association for Justice, the association of trial lawyers - opposes the bill.

Mr. Santana questioned if the motivation to oppose the bill came from his sponsoring the legislation. Mr. Santana was kicked out of caucus earlier this year and was appointed the minority vice chair of the House Appropriations Committee by House Speaker Kevin Cotter (R-Mount Pleasant). He accepted the position with House Minority Leader Tim Greimel (D-Auburn Hills) hoping another Democrat would get the position.

"I think the overwhelming problem in my opinion is this: this is the fourth person of color who has been kicked out of the Democratic Caucus either in the Senate or over here," he said, citing himself, Ms. Geiss, Ms. Love and Sen. Virgil Smith (D-Detroit).

"And (these are) two African-American women, one of them is of Hispanic descent, who are being punished for doing (their) job," he said.

Mr. Santana also criticized the caucus for not taking any punitive action against Rep. John Kivela (D-Marquette), who is being charged under the state's "super-drunk" law after driving while intoxicated. He also said caucus members looked for reasons not to vote to expel former Reps. Todd Courser and Cindy Gamrat.

"If it was so difficult to do that to these two people who openly admitted to breaking all of these rules, then why was it so easy for you to remove (Ms. Geiss and Ms. Love) because they voted for a bill that directly benefits their districts," he said. "It's bizarre."

A spokesperson for Mr. Greimel has not officially commented on the incident other than to say the caucus does not comment on what happens within the caucus.

Gongwer News Service has attempted to interview several House Democratic members about the incident. All have refused to comment.

Sen. Bert Johnson (D-Highland Park) was seen discussing the situation with Mr. Greimel late Tuesday night at the Capitol.

Wednesday, Mr. Johnson said he did not think punishment was warranted. That Mr. Santana sponsored the bill probably made it a "touchy subject" for the House Democrats otherwise the bill is innocuous, Mr. Johnson said. And Ms. Geiss and Ms. Love were voting for a bill with direct benefit to their districts, he said.

"But I think there's a bigger lesson here - they're freshmen lawmakers and if there is a protocol that they failed to adopt or abide by, I think it's a teachable moment for the Democratic leader, and I told him that, so I'm not talking behind his back," he said. "I think it's probably one of those moments he should probably take the opportunity to have an honest discourse with those members, but I don't think punishments are in order. Around here, you got to do something pretty egregious to be punished, per se, so I think you have to be careful with that, probably as much as you're careful with caucus positions because they can be prohibitive in some ways."

Mr. Johnson said he stands with the two lawmakers.

"I am supportive of both women and I think it's an issue that should be put to bed," he said. "The city of Detroit is asking for it and I think it would probably save us a lot of money in lawsuits and whatnot. And I want to be there for freshman members who are looking to earn their keep but to find their way in a Legislature that sometimes doesn't have enough mentors in it, and that's what I expressed to the minority leader."

Republicans are teeing off on Democrats on the controversy.

The Michigan Republican Party said in a statement representatives are elected to serve their constituents, "not trial lawyers."

"This kind of punitive action by House Democratic leadership against lawmakers who voted in the best interests of their districts is preposterous," said Sarah Anderson, communications director for MRP. "They are representing their districts and penalizing them for not voting in lock-step with their caucus demonstrates the House Democratic Leadership's willingness to put politics before people. This is another example of the lack of leadership from House Democrats."

And the conservative Michigan Freedom Fund said in a statement that Mr. Greimel has not taken seriously bribery allegations against Rep. Alberta Tinsley-Talabi (D-Detroit) and sexual harassment complaints from a former staffer of Rep. Brian Banks (D-Detroit). A lawsuit was filed against Mr. Banks. No charges have been issued against Ms. Tinsley-Talabi though the U.S. attorney in Detroit has filed paperwork involving others in the case implicating her with accepting a bribe.

"Michigan would be a lot better off if Tim Greimel took sexual harassment and bribery as seriously as he takes his own ego," said Terri Reid, president of the group. "While we may not often agree with Representatives Love and Geiss, we respect their willingness to put their constituents above the feelings of political party bosses. Voters can only wish Greimel took his responsibility to the state half as seriously."

Civil Service Commission Approves New State Contracts

State employees will see a 1 percent pay increase and a 1.5 percent lump sum payment with little changes in their health care coverage for the 2016-17 fiscal year under the contract that received final approval this morning from the Civil Service Commission.

The commission made no changes to the contract that had been approved earlier in the month by the five state employee unions.

The overall contract lasts the traditional three years, with non-economic provisions effective January 1, but the parties will be back at the bargaining table next fall on wages and health care once the implications of the so-called "Cadillac tax" under the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act are determined.

The commission approved essentially the same pay package for non-union employees and allowed unclassified employees up to a 1 percent increase and 1.5 percent lump sum.

Commissioner Robert Swanson (D-Lansing) praised the two sides for reaching agreements. The prior contract cycle saw a number of items sent to the impasse panel that issued recommendations shifting health care costs to state employees. The unions had vowed this year to block such changes.

NURSES: The commission rejected a request from nurses at state psychiatric hospitals for a larger raise, but urged them to come back in 2016 with more proof for the need for higher pay.

The nurses had asked for a 4 percent raise as part of an effort to recruit and retain staff at the hospitals.

"You can't really pay enough to deal with some of the things we see," Cassandra Craig, registered nurse manager at the Kalamazoo Psychiatric Hospital said.

But she said the difference in pay between the state facilities and private hospitals, combined with the work, makes it difficult to keep sufficient staff.

Carol Madding, director of nursing at the Hawthorn Center, said she needs 24 people each day to properly staff the facility. She said she currently has 20 actually on staff, which means 18 available to work on a given day.

Commission Chair Thomas Wardrop (I-Grand Rapids) questioned why the nurses, members of the Michigan Association of Governmental Employees and not represented by a union, are seeing shortages but the department is not.

He asked MAGE to work with its members to collect data to prove the shortage. "It would help me to have that data in front of me," he said.

Board member Janet McClelland (I-Lansing) urged the group to also conduct a wage survey of the area around the hospitals to show the nursing shortage is limited to the state facilities and that wages are contributing.

Al Quatrin, president of MAGE, said he would work to gather the requested information, but said much of it should be provided by the Department of Health and Human Services, which he said has not been tracking the issue.

"They don't want to know about this problem," he said. "They know it's going to take money to solve this problem."

Mr. Swanson urged both sides to provide the data the commission requested, but also noted that, should the board approve the raises, the state has to include those funds in its budget.

CLASS DUTIES: The commission unanimously approved rules changes designed to reduce the number of prohibited subject of bargaining complaints, but that union officials said would undermine some provisions of their contracts.

The changes to Rule 6-3.2 now include, "A collective bargaining agreement cannot confer exclusive authority to perform specific duties to a classification or bargaining unit."

The most recent dispute related to the change had been over positions in the Department of Transportation, where department officials had added a provision that some members of a unit covered by Service Employees International Union obtain commercial driver's licenses and potentially be trained to drive snow plows, a task assigned exclusively to a Michigan State Employees Association unit.

The move led to a complaint that included arguments by the department that assigning the task was a prohibited subject of bargaining.

Union officials said the rule change would leave it to the department management, and the commission, to decide what work fell to a classification.

"It might seem like an inconsequential rule, but to us in the bargaining unit, it's very significant," George Heath with SEIU said. "It appears that we are creating a patchwork, and it's not by the arbitrators, it's by the management of MDOT."

"We are not trying to undermine the authority of this commission," Peter Clark with MSEA said. "Our contract is meant to uphold those classifications."

Mr. Wardrop said in any case, it ultimately falls to the commission to decide who does what. "If it's in your classification to do a job or duty, shouldn't that be for us to decide?" he said.

GRANDCHILDREN: As part of the coordinated contribution plan adopted for non-union employees, family leave time is expanded to include caring for grandchildren. The commission Wednesday also released proposed rules that would expand that definition of family leave time for all state employees. The change is proposed to be effective January 3.

Franchise Bills Clear House

The House on Wednesday passed Legislation specifying that in franchise operations in the state employer responsibilities belong to the franchisees rather than the franchisors.

The bills (HB 5070, HB 5071, HB 5072, HB 5073, SB 492 and SB 493) would distinguish Michigan from a ruling made last summer by the National Labor Relations Board that franchisees and the franchising companies are joint employers of a franchisee's workers.

The first two bills passed 59-47, the second two passed 6046 and the final two Passed 59-46 and 60-45, respectively.

The ruling is one of the controversial business related issues nationally, and business lobbyists have been working on members of Congress to get them to include language in a required national spending bill that would block or at least delay the effectiveness of the ruling.

The ruling was issued in August, and under it a parent company could be responsible for ensuring the franchisee meets pay and safety requirements. It could also make a franchisor responsible for negotiating with any unions that might organize with the franchisees.

Court Rules For State In Issue Of Test Vehicles

Ford Motor Company could not claim test vehicles used in the 1990s were not subject to the state's sales and use taxes, the Court of Appeals ruled Wednesday, reversing a finding the Court of Claims made against the state.

The court held that, under the law in existence at the time, test vehicles were considered licensed for use on public highways and were therefore taxable.

The state changed the sales and use tax laws in 1999 to make test vehicles exempt from the tax, but Judge Michael Gadola, joined by Judge Kristen Frank Kelly and Judge Karen Fort Hood, ruling in Ford v. Treasury (COA docket No. 322673), rejected Ford's argument that the 1999 act should be applied retroactively.

The case stems from an audit the state conducted of Ford that covered 1993 to 2001.

Ford filed its action against the state in 2009. In 2010, the Court of Claims found for Ford and ordered the state to refund more than $1.6 million when interest was added.

The two entities argued then over attorney fees, with the Court of Claims holding that the state had to pay Ford more than $112,000 in attorney fees.

But the appeals panel held the Court of Claims was wrong to agree with Ford that the test vehicles were not to be taxed.

While property used for industrial processing was not subject to the tax, before 1999 that exemption did not include test vehicles, the court said. Ford also argued the manufacturer plates only permitted the company to test the vehicles, but the court said the law did permit a vehicle with manufacturer's plates to drive on public roads.

Ford then argued it could not sell the vehicles to the public, therefore they should not be taxed. But the court held the tax law applied to any power or right the manufacturer had over the property, so using the test vehicles still subjected them to the tax.

In terms of the attorneys' fees, the court rejected many of the state's arguments against paying the fees and remanded the case for proceedings in line with its findings.

Michigan's November Unemployment Rate Ticks Up To 5.1%

With more people entering Michigan's workforce during November, the state's seasonally adjusted unemployment rate increased slightly to 5.1 percent.

The October rate was 5 percent, and the national November unemployment rate remained at 5 percent.

Despite the uptick, November's jobless rate was still below the 2015 average jobless rate of 5.4 percent. The 2015 jobless average rate is nearly 2 full percentage points lower than the 2014 rate of 7.3 percent.

And the November 2015 unemployment rate at 5.1 percent is significantly lower than the 6.5 percent November 2014 rate.

During the month, 21,000 more people joined the state's workforce. The total number of 4.764 million people is the highest number recorded in 2015 and marks the fourth consecutive month the state's total labor force has grown.

The number of people working also increased by 15,000 in November, according to the Department of Technology, Management and Budget. That brings the total number of people working during the month to 4.520 million, which is 81,000 more people than were working in November 2014.

However, the number of unemployed people increased by 6,000 to 119,000. That is still 38,000 fewer people than were unemployed in November 2014.

The unemployment rate also increased in the Detroit-Warren-Dearborn labor market to 5.9 percent, compared to 5.7 percent in October. However, the November 2014 rate stood at 7.8 percent.

Plus, 6,000 more people joined the Detroit area workforce, putting the total to just over 2 million, with 1.884 million people working. The workforce was still 17,000 people fewer than in November 2014, but the number of people working was 22,000 more.

The state said job gains were fairly well spread out across industry sectors during the month. Construction saw gains of 3,000, and manufacturing, education and health services along with leisure and hospitality services all saw gains of 2,000. Professional and business services did see declines of 5,000 people and government jobs were cut by 2,000 people.

Snyder Signs Bill Allowing Retired Teachers To Substitute

A bill that again allows retired teachers with a background in subject areas seeing a critical shortage of teachers to serve as substitutes was signed into law Wednesday by Governor Rick Snyder.

Years ago, the state enacted a law prohibiting retired school employees from returning to work on a contract or part-time basis. Some superintendents had come under suspicion of double-dipping by retiring, receiving their pension and then being hired back for essentially the same job on a contract basis.

But the law swept up teachers and that limited the pool of substitute teachers.

"Retired educators are a valuable resource," Mr. Snyder said in a statement. "Having them back in the classroom will assist schools in filling critical shortage areas where their knowledge will greatly benefit today's students."

HB 4059 (PA 219) was filed with immediate effect.

Mr. Snyder also signed HB 4843 (PA 220) to protect individuals under 21 years of age from facing certain prescription drug-related legal charges when reporting a medical emergency. That law mirrors a similar existing statute regarding minors suffering from alcohol intoxication and takes effect March 15.

Capital Notebook: Colleen Pero Appointed Civil Rights Deputy

Colleen Pero has been named deputy director for the Department of Civil Rights.

Ms. Pero, of Laingsburg, has been a long-time top Republican voice in the state. In addition to currently serving on the Board of State Canvassers, she spent several years on the Michigan State Housing Development Authority Board and has worked several Republican campaigns, including her own run for the Michigan State University Board of Trustees. She also served under Attorney General Bill Schuette.

Ms. Pero officially took the post November 2, but it was not publicized until this week.

RECREATION GRANTS: The Department of Natural Resources announced Wednesday it had awarded $1.3 million in grants to local recreation programs from recreation passport revenue.

The department issued 33 grants for a variety of projects around the state. Twenty-five of the grants were for the $45,000 maximum the department awarded.

Among the projects was replacement of the glass and boards at the Calumet Colosseum, the oldest hockey rink in the nation; updating a mini-golf course in Ludington; improvements to the Equestrian Center at the Upper Peninsula State Fairgrounds, including addition of an information center for the trail starting at the building; and completion of segments of the Iron Belle/North Country Trail in Luce, Marquette and Ontonagon counties.

A story in the Monday Michigan Report should have said the Department of Transportation, in its road watchers program, would be emailing participants a survey on their experience commuting along the designated routes during the morning hours. Changes to snow clearing and other winter maintenance would be based on the results of the surveys.

Feds OK Healthy Michigan Waiver

Michigan government got a Christmas present from the federal Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services on Thursday when the agency approved a waiver that will allow the Healthy Michigan Medicaid expansion program to continue to operate for years to come.

Had the state not gotten the waiver from CMS by December 31, the program that provides health insurance for some 600,000 people in Michigan with incomes between 100 to 133 percent of the federal poverty level would have ended on April 1.

The waiver permits the state on April 1, 2018, to require Healthy Michigan recipients who have been in the program for four years to elect to either get coverage through the federal health care exchange or remain with Healthy Michigan and by following healthy behavior requirements have lower cost sharing. The cost sharing on Healthy Michigan for recipients could be as much as 7 percent of their income, but state officials said Thursday it is unlikely most people would pay more than 5 percent of their income.

Earlier this week officials, including Governor Rick Snyder and Health and Human Services Director Nick Lyon, said they were confident the state would get the waiver, though as the days wore on state officials were clearly getting a bit antsy for the federal government to issue a statement.

The state received a letter Thursday notifying it that CMS had approved the waiver.

A spokesperson for the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services said the federal agency was pleased "we have an agreement with Michigan that will allow nearly 600,000 low-income citizens to continue to have access to quality health services. This agreement is consistent with Michigan's proposal and ensures important beneficiary protections guaranteed" under the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act.

In a statement, Mr. Snyder said Healthy Michigan - which was approved by the Legislature after an extensive political battle in 2013 and which then took effect on April 1, 2014 - had given Michiganders "the opportunity to improve their health and wellness by enrolling in health care coverage."

In passing the legislation in 2013, the Legislature required the state to get two waivers from the federal government, with the second waiver setting up the cost-sharing system in Healthy Michigan.

The 7 percent figure caused some concerns with the federal government and was subject to a number of discussions.

Mr. Lyon, in talking with reporters, said the second option will allow the state to focus more on encouraging healthy behaviors of recipients and following those behaviors will help ensure those recipients pay lower cost sharing rates.

Participating in the healthy behaviors means the cost sharing a client will face will not exceed 5 percent, he said.

And, under the waiver, if a person - unless one is considered medically frail - chose not to participate in the healthy behaviors, they will take part in the health care exchange where their total cost sharing is also to be 5 percent.

It would be very rare, Mr. Lyon said, that a person would pay more than 5 percent.

This will only affect recipients on April 1, 2018, who have been participating in Healthy Michigan for four years.

The news of the waiver resulted in enthusiastic responses from a variety of groups.

Rick Murdock with the Michigan Association of Health Plans called the announcement, "good news" for the state and said it brings the state closer to his group's goal of ensuring all persons have health care coverage.

Brian Peters, CEO of the Michigan Health and Hospital Association, said the Healthy Michigan plan has helped residents who were previously uninsured "to access the care they need in the right place, at the right time and at an affordable price."

And Gilda Jacobs, president of the Michigan League for Public Policy said the group was "thrilled" at the news of the waiver. "This is tremendous news for our entire state," she said.

Snyder Appoints Hollins To Oversee Flint Water Efforts

Governor Rick Snyder, in response to preliminary recommendations from the Flint Water Advisory Task Force, appointed Harvey Hollins, the director of his Office of Urban Initiatives, to oversee efforts to resolve the water issues in the city.

But Senate Minority Leader Jim Ananich (D-Flint) said the issue needed stronger oversight than Mr. Hollins could provide.

"Harvey is well-versed in the issues and the challenges faced by our cities and will be effective in this role," Mr. Snyder said.

He said his administration would also work on an Internet dashboard to display progress made on the water issue.

The task force is still working on its final recommendations, but members said they issued the preliminary recommendations - in a letter dated December 7 but released Thursday - to get some of the changes in place more quickly.

"We felt it was imperative to make these initial recommendations to help address the water crisis in Flint instead of waiting until our final report is submitted," Task Force Co-Chair Chris Kolb said. "We appreciate the prompt acceptance of our request for action by the governor and see it as a step forward."

Co-Chair Ken Sikkema also said the initial review presented "a distributing situation."

"While the Task Force is far from done with our work, the initial review has presented a very disturbing situation that will require many actions to help those that have suffered," Mr. Sikkema said. "We saw no reason to wait until the final report to make these initial recommendations. We also anticipate that we will made additional recommendations prior to the final report."

Mr. Ananich urged the Department of State Police, the Federal Emergency Management Agency, or the U.S. Department of Homeland Security to take charge of water testing, distribution of water filters and other efforts to control lead exposure in the city.

"Political appointees and public relations people are what got us into this mess, and they aren't who we need leading us out of it," Mr. Ananich said. "Anything less than a professional trained in emergency management or public health will not suffice."

In the letter, the task force said the governor's 10-point action plan was being implemented, but without measures to determine success.

"One primary concern we have at this point is that the current efforts appear to be taking place in the absence of a larger project coordination framework that measures results and clearly delineates responsibilities for continuing actions to protect public health," the task force said in the letter.

Task force members said the departments of Environmental Quality and Health and Human Services needed to set goals for the various efforts underway in the city as well as contingency plans if those goals are not being met.

The task force called for a single person or entity to coordinate the efforts.

Mr. Snyder acceded to that request for a coordinator in a letter back to the task force dated December 12. That also was released Thursday.

HICA, DPS, Energy Remain In Senate For '16

Senate Majority Leader Arlan Meekhof said late Wednesday he expects to take up an extension on the Health Insurance Claims Assessment as soon as his caucus comes back in January, but two other huge policy goals will be competing for legislators' time before they dive head-first into the next budget cycle.

The House extended HICA into 2025 via HB 5105, but some senators have "some other ideas" on the tax that helps the state receive federal Medicaid matching funds, "so we weren't in a place where we could vote for it yet," Mr. Meekhof (R-West Olive) told reporters.

Asked about the urgency given the current HICA tax does not expire until 2017, Mr. Meekhof said, "That's when we have the time. If we can pick those things up now, before DPS and energy debates start, I think that's wise."

But those last two items cannot be left on an island either. House members will be running for re-election next year, so as the year goes on, it will get increasingly harder to pass such major legislation in the Senate and expect to see the same in the House. And Mr. Meekhof conceded as much.

"It being an election year next year, it's probably less than half of the year that we have for things to work on," he said, acknowledging also that the process becomes further complicated by budget discussions beginning around February. "But we do have time in January that we generally don't have a lot on our plate and ... let's try to get the understanding of everybody what the policy issue is and what we could be doing, because most of it has still been in committee up until this point."

DPS: The struggle in providing funding for Detroit Public Schools to the tune of $715 million over 10 years was expected to see some more clarity with bills introduced before the Legislature left for the year, but that too saw too many hiccups to be made possible. Sen. Goeff Hansen (R-Hart), who is leading that discussion in the Senate (and in the Legislature generally), has been tight-lipped about any kind of details on the policy in an effort to prevent it from falling apart before it starts, and that hasn't seemed to bother most people.

But Sen. Bert Johnson (D-Highland Park) said that legislation can't fall by the wayside either.

"They're not ready because there's an issue with discerning where you're going to get the money from to pay this $715 million and a new situation called new public schools Detroit, or whatever it's going to be called," Mr. Johnson told Gongwer News Service in an interview. "That's the big issue.

"What cannot happen is we allow the clock to run out, and people, because of political aspirations in the next year, or just sheer reticence to support Detroit issues say 'well, we're just not going to do anything.' Then it gets to be blamed on Detroit, which is not going to happen, not on my watch," he said.

He said there is not just one version of the bills at this point either.

"We've had a lot of compromise discussions between ourselves and Senator Hansen, the governor's office. Everybody has been committed to trying to drive the same message, but then there's been some hiccups where we've seen some things maybe being done behind the scenes with EAA and DPS perhaps looking to charter a number of schools without us understanding that, and that created a problem for us as well," Mr. Johnson said.

"It's a fluid process, and this is sausage-making, and it's ugly, and it's going to take us some more time," he said. "We'll have some conversations during the break and see if we can come back with a package people can get behind."

ENERGY: One area where the House is seemingly slightly ahead of the Senate is in the area of energy policy. As the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency collects plan-of-action reports from the state on its federal Clean Power Plan to reduce emissions, the question is how Michigan will respond.

The House Energy Policy Committee reported its version of how that future will look in November, but was unable to move those bills off the floor this week.

The Senate has been a bit slower to move. Despite advertising boasting a "Nofs-Nesbitt energy plan," Sen. Mike Nofs (R-Battle Creek) has been adamant about proposing his own plan separate of what House Majority Floor Leader Aric Nesbitt (R-Lawton) is pushing in his chamber, and despite the two do have some similarities in certain sectors of the debate.

Some utilities like Consumers Energy will be shutting down numerous plants in 2016, but even so, the Midcontinent Independent Systems Operator - which oversees the energy market for certain states, including Michigan - insists Michigan should not have to worry about a shortage of energy in 2016 (though there is some question as to how much sooner Michigan should worry after that). And Attorney General Bill Schuette is litigating the pressure from the EPA to conform to its Clean Power Plan.

Even so, both sides of the energy debate say Michigan needs to act sooner rather than later.

And while just about every member of legislative leadership will mark energy as a priority for next year, the question still remains where this major policy initiative will be able to fit legislation, debate and voting on that legislation into the big picture of 2016.

Schuette Bets On Bush; Talks Parole Changes, Statewide School Gun Option

In a wide-ranging discussion, Attorney General Bill Schuette on Thursday expressed confidence former Florida Governor Jeb Bush would win the 2016 Republican nomination and said he would be willing to look at a system that allows for easier parole so long as persons convicted of major felonies were not included and would back a consistent statewide approach letting people with concealed weapons permits carry in so-called "gun-free zones."

Mr. Schuette also said that he would think it reasonable for legislators to insist Detroit schools show academic progress if the state agreed to help fix its debt.

And when asked about what he had learned about the same-sex marriage court fight that led the U.S. Supreme Court to uphold that same-sex marriage is constitutional, Mr. Schuette said he was right to fight to protect Michigan's Constitution.

He also was coy when asked about fundraising activities.

Mr. Schuette met with reporters on Thursday to review the year and said besides the thousands of cases his office works on, he had been especially touched by an individual effort to help a woman who was victimized by sex trafficking. Mr. Schuette has played an active role with the state in changing its human trafficking laws.

He also said his office had helped collect more than $22 million in unpaid child support payments, bringing the total to more than $120 million since taking office.

And he and officials from his office also held 1,000 meetings at schools to talk about bullying and threats posed by students against others in the "Okay2Say" program, he said.

Mr. Schuette is one of the most prominent supporters of Mr. Bush for the 2016 GOP nomination for president, and despite Mr. Bush polling well below Donald Trump, Texas U.S. Sen. Ted Cruz and Florida U.S. Sen. Marco Rubio, Mr. Schuette expressed total confidence that Mr. Bush would hang on to win the nomination.

"For Jeb there is only one way, and that is up," he said. "There is no quit" in the Bush family in a campaign.

There is no one more skilled or qualified to be president, Mr. Schuette said of Mr. Bush. Mr. Trump is now riding a wave of support because there is genuine fear and worry in the U.S. because of the foreign and economic policies of President Barack Obama, he said.

But Mr. Schuette said he is anxious for the presidential primaries to begin to allow for the winnowing out process of Republican candidates. "They can't come soon enough," he said.

PRESUMPTIVE PAROLE: Mr. Schuette has also led opposition to proposals in the Legislature to allow for a system that would give many prisoners a better opportunity for parole upon reaching their earliest release date. The proposals are backed by a number of people seeking both to reduce the cost of corrections and help individuals get back into normal life.

Joined by numerous county prosecutors and sheriffs, Mr. Schuette has attacked what he calls "auto-pilot parole" as a threat to public safety.

However, in the round table, Mr. Schuette said he and his allies "would be open to a discussion about excluding violent crimes" from the types of offenses that could be considered for automatic parole. Mr. Schuette did not commit to supporting the proposal, but said he could be open to discussing changes.

CONCEALED CARRY: In terms of changing the state's gun laws to allow individuals with concealed weapons permits to go into schools and other areas now off limits, Mr. Schuette said he is an "NRA attorney general. I make no bones about it."

The proposal made by Sen. Mike Green (R-Mayville) in SB 442 would work best, Mr. Schuette said, because it would provide "a consistent approach across the state" as well as back up the Second Amendment.

Governor Rick Snyder has said he is opposed to the bill, a position he repeated to Gongwer News Service during an interview on Wednesday. Mr. Snyder said there has to be room for each district to make up its own mind on whether to allow for individuals with concealed weapons access to schools.

Mr. Schuette said that sometimes he and the governor have differences, but he still believes a consistent, statewide approach is best on the issue.

DPS: With Mr. Snyder hoping the Legislature will act on a proposal to help Detroit schools deal with its debt and restructure itself, Mr. Schuette said the focus should be on a school system that has continually failed its students.

If the Legislature votes to have the state help pay off the Detroit Public Schools debt, then there has to be assurance on what new outcomes will be had for the district, Mr. Schuette said.

SAME-SEX MARRIAGE: During 2015, the U.S. Supreme Court, in a 5-4 decision, ruled against arguments Mr. Schuette brought defending the Michigan Constitution's provision banning same-sex marriage and any of its equivalent. The nation's highest court held that same-sex couples had a constitutional right to marry.

Mr. Schuette repeated, as he had throughout the years the issue was litigated, that his duty was to defend the Constitution, all sections of it. Asked if he had learned anything from the decision, Mr. Schuette said what he learned was, "I did the right thing" in fighting for the Michigan ban.

FURTHER CAMPAIGNS: Mr. Schuette also was asked about fundraising he had done in Washington D.C. Some of that, he said, was for the Republican Attorney Generals Association, and some was for him.

Mr. Schuette cannot run for re-election but he is seen as a sure candidate to run for governor in 2018. Asked why he would raise money for himself, he said only that "I still got the itch." What he was itching to do politically, he would not say.

In other topics:

- Mr. Schuette said the investigation into former Reps. Todd Courser and Cindy Gamrat is ongoing, but that it should be completed relatively soon;

- He stuck to his prediction that the "days are numbered" for Enbridge line 5 under the Mackinac Straits, but he could not say when the pipeline would be closed or what would be a safer option to move oil and natural gas products. He did say there are ongoing discussions on matters such as increasing the insurance on the pipeline; and

- He did not indicate there would be any charges brought against anyone in regards to the Flint water situation, but his office would defend the state against any suits brought against it.

Snyder Says He Will Not Take Cabinet Job Just To Set Up Calley For Governor

If a Republican wins the White House in 2016, Governor Rick Snyder said in an interview this week he would not accept a job in the Cabinet to enhance Lt. Governor Brian Calley's chances of winning the governorship in 2018.

Speaking to Michigan Public Television for its annual "Evening with the Governor" program, Mr. Snyder showed little to no interest in joining the Cabinet of a Republican administration, but also made it clear he would never leave as part of a strategic move to let Mr. Calley ascend to the governorship to raise his chances of winning in 2018.

Mr. Calley has not said he is running, but expectations are high that he will.

"I'm not going to simply leave office to help with that issue because it's too important being governor," Mr. Snyder said.

And Mr. Snyder signaled a Cabinet post is not of much interest to him personally, saying he is aware every day that he has one less day in office.

"I have a responsibility to the citizens of Michigan," he said.

First Lady Sue Snyder also shed some light on the circumstances under which Mr. Snyder ruptured his Achilles' tendon in early January and how frightening the ensuing blood clot, which led to the governor spending several days in the hospital, was.

"It was a very scary time for all of us," she said, even saying at one point the possibility of Mr. Snyder dying crossed her mind.

The actual injury occurred after Mr. Snyder had concluded a jog on the beach and was walking. Mr. Snyder said he took too long a stride and heard a pop. Ms. Snyder, who had earlier advised him to ease back on his jogging, which he had just taken up, had been by a pool.

"All of a sudden I see him hobbling back. I said, 'What is going on?'" she said.

Mr. Snyder told her, "'I don't know, I think I ripped something.'" Ms. Snyder said she retorted, "I told you."

In the aftermath of the injury, Mr. Snyder, while at work, told Ms. Snyder his leg was swelling. Ms. Snyder said it became so swollen that his pant leg was taut around his leg.

"He says, 'I think I better go to the hospital, to the emergency room,'" she said.

Mr. Snyder during the interview said, when asked whether term limits should change, that the topic is "fair question." He said term limits could be made more flexible instead of limiting members to six years in the House and eight years in the Senate. For years, there has been discussion about a 14-year limit on total legislative service, but it has gone nowhere.

The governor, however, said the eight year limit on constitutional officers is appropriate.

Audit Cites DTMB For Lax Server Security

Auditors have found that most of the state's UNIX servers had not been properly secured, an audit released Thursday said.

The performance audit of statewide UNIX security controls, for the period October 1, 2012, through August 31, 2015, found that of 63 servers tested, 59 had vulnerable security configurations. And 47 of the servers had not had a vulnerability scan conducted in more than a month.

But auditors found the department was moderately effective at both implementing security and access controls on the servers and establishing governance structures over the servers.

The state operates about 950 UNIX servers, the report said.

The department agreed with the findings and said it had purchased software to automate security settings and regular security scans on the servers. It said it is also developing a process to ensure vulnerability remediation is assigned to the correct division.

Auditors also cited the state for not consistently using supported versions of the operating system and not timely applying patches. The department also gave too much control over the servers to the Agency Services Division, allowing the possibility that security measures could be circumvented, the report said.

On the operating systems, the department said it is implementing policies to require all agencies to upgrade to supported versions as well as automated patch management.

It also said it is working to better segregate duties among the various groups overseeing the servers.

Snyder Signs Epi-Pen Bills

Anyone operating an activity where anaphylaxis-causing allergens may be present has the ability under a bill signed into law Thursday by Governor Rick Snyder to make available auto-injectable epinephrine devices, commonly known as Epi-Pens.

The bill, HB 4438 (PA 221), specifically mentions recreation camps, youth sports leagues, amusement parks, nonpublic schools, religious institutions or sports arenas, but does not limit the law's applicability just to them. The law, which takes effect March 16, broadens previous law that limited access to school districts.

The bill enables those entities that stock Epi-Pens to have their employees administer the injections, provided they have undergone training, without risk of liability.

"Making Epi-Pens more readily available is a common sense way to protect those who have severe allergies," Mr. Snyder said in a statement. "With this new law, parents can be more confident sending their kids to camp or on field trips without constant worry of a severe allergic reaction that could threaten their health."

Activists working to protect children with food allergies praised Mr. Snyder's signature of the bill.

"Kids and adults with life threatening food allergies will soon be a lot safer thanks to Governor Snyder and the state legislature," Lisa Rutter, the mother of a child with food allergies and founder of the Michigan-based No Nuts Moms Group, said in a statement. "Many parents know that their children suffer from food allergies, but for the thousands of parents in Michigan who have no idea their children are at risk, this new law could make all the difference in the world."

Garcia Bills Aim To Give Schools Autonomy In Calendar Setting

Rep. Daniela Garcia on Thursday introduced two bills that would establish criteria for school calendar waivers to be automatically granted and prohibiting calendar items as subjects of collective bargaining.

The bills, HB 5193 and HB 5194, were sent to the House Education Committee.

"I've had the opportunity to speak with school superintendents and administrators throughout Michigan who have asked for increased flexibility at the local level," Ms. Garcia (R-Holland) said in a statement. "As the number of days of pupil instruction increases to 180 in the 2016-2017 school year, we must remove barriers for our schools to meet this new threshold."

The first bill would establish criteria for school calendar waivers to be automatically granted and require school districts to hold a public hearing prior to applying for a start date waiver.

"Parents, families and the entire community should be engaged in this conversation," Ms. Garcia said. "The ultimate goal is to ensure that our students are getting a quality education so that they are prepared to be successful and productive members of society."

The second bill includes calendar and scheduling items as prohibited subjects of bargaining and would provide local school districts autonomy in determining the calendar and schedule.

"I have faith in school boards and their superintendents to adopt a calendar and schedule that is in the best interests of students and parents, respects the time and talents of staff and adheres to state law," she said. "This discussion should be centered around our children's education and not be used as a bargaining chip by adults."

Runestad Wants President To Treat ISIS Attacks As Genocide

State Rep. Jim Runestad is asking President Barack Obama to declare ISIS terrorism as an act of genocide against Christians and other religious minorities in the Middle East.

Mr. Runestad (R-White Lake) said Thursday the Islamic State of Iraq and al-Sham's violent terrorist attacks against religious minorities must be considered genocide, which would enable governments and the United Nations to intervene more directly with more resources.

"A resolution was introduced in Congress urging the president to declare the atrocities to be a genocide," he said in a statement. "Southfield resident Bishop Francis Kalabat, head of the Chaldean Catholic Diocese of the United States, testified before a U.S. House Subcommittee on Human Rights, and is working to encourage states to introduce their own resolutions calling for a genocide to be declared. He fully supports my legislative resolution."

Mr. Runestad introduced a similar resolution in the House on Thursday.

"Christians have existed as a cultural group in the Middle East and have lived in peace with their neighbors for 2,000 years until now," he said. "Christians and other religions are being targeted and slaughtered as a cultural minority and we must declare this to be a genocide for the crisis to be stopped."

Capital Notebook: Smith May Not Go To Trial

Embattled Sen. Virgil Smith (D-Detroit) was in court Thursday for a pre-trial hearing on his case involving his alleged assault of his ex-wife and shooting at her Mercedes-Benz in May, and while there was no plea agreement announced, Mr. Smith's attorney told Wayne County Circuit Judge Lawrence Talon it seemed both sides could "work something out."

The Detroit Free Press reported that Mr. Dillard plans to present a proposal to prosecutors before Christmas Day to see if a resolution can be reached before Mr. Smith's trial begins on March 7, 2016 (it was originally scheduled for December 7).

Mr. Talon, the Free Press said, ordered the parties to return to his courtroom on January 15 at 8:30 a.m. so he can be told if an offer to resolve the case had been made and whether Mr. Smith would accept or reject it.

Mr. Smith faces charges of felonious assault, malicious destruction of personal property of $20,000 or more, possessing a firearm during the commission of a felony and a misdemeanor for domestic violence.

RECYCLING CARTS: The Department of Environmental Quality announced Thursday it is accepting applications for grants for local communities to purchase recycling carts.

Department officials said the carts, as opposed to the bins many communities use, increase recycling rates and so would contribute to Governor Rick Snyder's goal of doubling recycling rates.

The DEQ is offering up to $450,000 toward cart purchases. Applications for the grants are posted on the DEQ website and are due March 31.

LATE ELK SEASON: Despite conditions, the late elk season was successful for the vast majority of hunters, the Department of Natural Resources announced Thursday.

The season, which ended Sunday, did not have the usual snow that allows hunters to track and see the elk, but still 46 of the 50 hunters were successful, the department said.

Appointments By The Governor

ADVISORY COMMITTEE ON PAIN AND SYMPTOM MANAGEMENT: John Mulder of Spring Lake succeeds Steven Roskos, who resigned, to represent the Michigan State University College of Human Medicine. The appointment is for the remainder of a term expiring July 1, 2017, and is not subject to the advice and consent of the Senate.

ASPARAGUS MARKETING ADVISORY BOARD: Dwight Fuehring of Mears and Kyle Weber of Watervliet are reappointed for terms expiring November 13, 2018. The appointments are subject to the advice and consent of the Senate.

BOARD OF BARBER EXAMINERS: Kelly Mitchell of Grand Rapids is reappointed for a term expiring September 30, 2019. The appointment is subject to the advice and consent of the Senate.

CITY OF PONTIAC RECEIVERSHIP TRANSITION ADVISORY BOARD: Doug Bernstein of Royal Oak succeeds Lou Schimmel, who resigned, to represent members with relevant professional experience for a term expiring at the pleasure of the governor.

MICHIGAN BOARD OF OPTOMETRY: Sarah Kile of Gladwin succeeds Robert Perino to represent the general public for a term expiring June 30, 2019. The appointment is subject to the advice and consent of the Senate.

MICHIGAN CARROT COMMISSION: Nathan Karnemaat of Fremont is reappointed for a term expiring October 31, 2018. The appointment is subject to the advice and consent of the Senate.

MICHIGAN STATE CAPITOL COMMISSION: Travis Weber of Grand Rapids succeeds Sally Durfee to represent the governor. The appointment is for a term expiring at the pleasure of the governor and is not subject to the advice and consent of the Senate.

Wyant Resigns In Wake Of Flint Water Crisis

Department of Environmental Quality Director Dan Wyant has resigned in response to the water crisis that erupted three months ago in Flint.

"MDEQ Director Dan Wyant has offered his resignation, and I've determined that it's appropriate to accept it. I'm also making other personnel changes at MDEQ to address problems cited by the task force," Governor Rick Snyder said in a statement.

"But changes in leadership and staff are not enough. I understand there can be disagreements within the scientific community. That is why I have directed both the departments of Environmental Quality and Health and Human Services to invite every external scientist who has worked on this issue to be our partners in helping us improve Flint water," Mr. Snyder said. "Let's share research on water and blood lead level testing so we can arrive at accurate and mutually supported conclusions. Together, we should work to affirm that we're using the very best testing protocols to ensure Flint residents have safe drinking water and that we're taking steps to protect their health over the short and long term."

The DEQ has come under major criticism for how it handled testing for lead in Flint drinking water after the city switched to the Flint River as its water source. The water was not properly treated for corrosion, causing lead to leach from service lines into the drinking water.

"I want the Flint community to know how very sorry I am that this has happened. And I want all Michigan citizens to know that we will learn from this experience, because Flint is not the only city that has an aging infrastructure," Mr. Snyder said. "I know many Flint citizens are angry and want more than an apology. That's why I'm taking the actions today to ensure a culture of openness and trust. We've already allocated $10 million to test the water, distribute water filters, and help in other ways.

Last week, I called Flint Mayor Karen Weaver, and we're going to meet soon to discuss other ways the state can offer assistance."

Volume #54, Report #254 -- Wednesday, December 30, 2015

Newsmaker 2015: DeBoer, Rowse, Nessel Topple Marriage Limitation

April DeBoer and Jayne Rowse harbored some hesitation prior to deciding in 2012 to broaden their mostly unknown federal lawsuit against Michigan's prohibition on joint adoption by same-sex couples to challenge the state's prohibition on same-sex marriage.

U.S. District Judge Bernard Friedman had essentially forced their hand, suggesting they amend their lawsuit to get to the crux of the issue in their bid to jointly adopt their five children. They had 10 days to decide and seriously discussed whether to do it.

"It was a little scary," Ms. DeBoer said in an interview. "It was a little intimidating just because we never expected the focus to be on our relationship or on marriage. So we did have some hesitation in the beginning. But in the long run, the risks we take - angry people - the rewards far outweigh the risks, especially when it comes to protecting the kids and the kids having rights and protections if something were to happen to one of us."

Of course, Ms. DeBoer and Ms. Rowse, a lesbian couple from Hazel Park, did decide to amend their lawsuit. Nearly three years later, their battle ended in victory at the U.S. Supreme Court, which, in a historic 5-4 ruling in the DeBoer v. Snyder case, consolidated with others from Ohio, Tennessee and Kentucky, held that the Equal Protection Clause of the U.S. Constitution prohibits states from barring same-sex marriage.

It was this victory, along with the many battles leading up to it, as well as the court case setting up a series of future fights involving the lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender community, that led to Gongwer News Service naming Ms. DeBoer, Ms. Rowse and their main attorney, Dana Nessel, as Newsmaker 2015, the top newsmakers in Michigan government and politics.

Not only did the DeBoer case topple Michigan's voter-approved 2004 limitation on marriage to one man and one woman, its 1996 statutory prohibition on same sex marriage and end the ban on joint same-sex adoption in the Michigan Adoption Code, it also intensified a raging dispute about whether to add sexual orientation and gender identity to the list of protected classes in the Elliott-Larsen Civil Rights Act. And it turned up the intensity on discussions about enacting a Religious Freedom Restoration Act in Michigan that would provide some protection to those accused of discriminating against someone in the LGBT community provided the action stemmed from a sincerely held religious belief.

That two apolitical nurses and an, at the time, solo practitioner attorney, would be the ones to take down the ban on same-sex marriage fits in a year when outsiders shaped most of the significant events involving state government and politics.

Among those incidents: Two fired former House staffers, Keith Allard and Ben Graham, blew the whistle on former Reps. Todd Courser and Cindy Gamrat, leading to expulsion proceedings and just the fourth-ever expulsion of a legislator in Ms. Gamrat, with Mr. Courser resigning just before a vote to expel him. A young Flint physician, Doctor Mona Hanna-Attisha, and a Virginia Tech researcher, Marc Edwards, discovered what state scientists failed to realize, that Flint's drinking water had dangerously escalating levels of lead. And a loosely organized opposition produced the fourth most lopsided defeat in Michigan history of a proposed constitutional amendment, the ill-fated Proposal 15-1 to increase funding for roads, despite almost every major organization supporting it.

A NEAR ACCIDENT STARTS THE CASE: Ms. DeBoer and Ms. Rowse were returning from a vacation at an indoor water park in Ohio with some friends and their three adopted children. While driving on a two-lane road in snowy conditions, they saw a truck barreling toward them in their lane. Just as they had to decide whether to swerve off the road, the truck veered out of the way.

"That near miss is really what started us thinking about what ifs," Ms. Rowse said. "If one of us had been killed, or both of us, what would have happened to the kids? That's when we really started talking about what we could do about this."

Their initial thoughts centered on wills and guardianships. In talking with friends, they received a recommendation to speak with an attorney named Dana Nessel, a former Wayne County assistant prosecuting attorney who had opened a law practice specializing in family law and criminal defense work.

Ms. Nessel told the couple Michigan law meant a judge would not have to abide by their wishes in a will or guardianship agreement.

The timing was uncanny. Ms. Nessel had wanted to challenge the Michigan Adoption Code in federal court. Another case of hers was ending badly in state court for her client, whose same-sex relationship with another woman, the biological mother of the child they were raising, had ended. Michigan courts had held her client had no custodial rights as a non-biological, non-adoptive parent.

She and her law office suitemate, Carole Stanyar, had already been discussing the possibility of a federal court challenge. Then Ms. DeBoer called.

"I think it was just fate," Ms. Nessel recalled.

Ms. Nessel said she immediately told Ms. Stanyar that Ms. DeBoer and Ms. Rowse were the couple.

"What better people could we find to challenge these laws?" she said.

Ms. Nessel said she told Ms. DeBoer and Ms. Rowse a federal court challenge was the only way she could assure them the protections of a parent.

The couple decided to file suit. It was a dramatic step for two people who had steered clear of politics.

In 2004, when Michigan voters approved putting the state's ban on same-sex marriage into the Constitution, and with it a prohibition on health benefits for same-sex partners of government employees, Ms. DeBoer and Ms. Rowse did not pay much mind to it, they said. Other states were enacting similar limitations on marriage.

"We weren't very politically oriented people," Ms. DeBoer said. "We were trying to establish our lives and trying to figure out who we were. We just accepted what came along and what was going to be. There was a little bit of talk about possibly moving out of state at some point in time, but we were establishing ourselves as nurses in Michigan. And pretty much our friends and support group were here in Michigan.

"It was hard to think of leaving, especially for me because I've lived here all my life. It was hard to think about leaving my family," she said.

At the beginning, the couple thought they would quickly win their case. Perhaps the state, which had approved them as foster parents, would even decide not to contest the case, they said they thought.

"We really didn't have any idea what we were getting ourselves into," Ms. DeBoer said. "We thought it was kind of a very simple, cut and dried case."

But the state would not concede and instead vigorously fought the case, which was filed in January 2012.

A DIFFICULT DECISION TO BROADEN THE CASE TO MARRIAGE: In February, the state would file a motion to dismiss the case. Interestingly, a big portion of the state's argument centered on Michigan law making clear that multiple unmarried persons could not adopt, which in hindsight helped push the case toward the broader question of the legality of same-sex marriage.

And the state, in the motion filed by Assistant Attorneys General Joseph Potchen and Tonya Jeter, made clear it saw no validity in the argument the Michigan Adoption Code violated the Fourteenth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, known as the Equal Protection Clause.

"It will not be enough for plaintiffs to complain that the challenged statute discriminates generally," the state said in its motion. "Simply put, all laws classify; all laws discriminate. 'Classifications' and 'discrimination' are essential to and inherent in the law. Moreover, since all laws necessarily discriminate, a court cannot be suspicious of such laws - i.e., all laws - because classification of some sort is normal, inevitable and necessary. The Equal Protection Clause cannot prohibit all discrimination, and a reasonable interpretation of it must focus only on the worst classifying statutory schemes."

But it would be the Equal Protection Clause, in the end, that would lead to the 5-4 ruling legalizing same-sex marriage.

On August 29, 2012, Mr. Friedman suggested Ms. DeBoer and Ms. Rowse amend their lawsuit to include a challenge to the state's Michigan Marriage Amendment limiting marriage to one man and one woman. Mr. Friedman said that was the crux of the issue.

It was a difficult decision, the couple said.

In a case that would see many ups and downs, Ms. Rowse said Mr. Friedman's suggestion was the bottom.

At the beginning of the case, no one mentioned the idea of challenging Michigan's prohibition on same-sex marriage. The general thinking, Ms. DeBoer said, was it would be a difficult case, but they would win adoption rights and move on with their lives.

"Our original lawsuit was about the kids. It wasn't about our relationship with each other," she said. "It was about our children having two legal parents and protecting them, protecting their rights."

They had 10 days to decide and seriously discussed whether to go forward.

"It's a different exposure. It's more personal," Ms. DeBoer said. "People have more personal feelings about marriage than they would about the sympathetic end of these kids that needed to be adopted. It changed the focus to our relationship."

Ms. Nessel said the biggest surprise to her of the entire case was Mr. Friedman inviting the couple to broaden their lawsuit to marriage. She said she never imagined the case would morph into a marriage case.

"In retrospect, I think it was really a brilliant plan or ploy on behalf of Judge Friedman," she said.

The state had argued two people seeking to adopt should be in a legally committed relationship, and so Mr. Friedman seized on that to enable the broadening of the case, Ms. Nessel said.

Ms. DeBoer and Ms. Rowse decided to go for it. It was the best way to protect their children, they concluded.

Ms. Nessel said several groups encouraged her and the couple to drop the case after Mr. Friedman suggested broadening it to marriage. Some activists said there should be no cases in the 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals with its majority of conservative judges.

The problem with that line of thinking, as would become clear nine months later, is that the U.S. Supreme Court declined to hear appeals of pro-gay marriage rulings in other circuits, letting those rulings stand. That is what set the stage for a consolidated group of cases out of the 6th circuit, including DeBoer v. Snyder, to become the decisive moment on the issue.

"I think when these things occur, it's best to fight them and not just hope things will get better," Ms. Nessel said. "I know we're a flyover state, but should we not have the same rights as same-sex couples that reside in New York, California or Massachusetts. Are we lesser people?"

The cases ultimately known as Obergefell v. Hodges, which included the DeBoer case, all were handled by private practice attorneys in the 6th Circuit, Ms. Nessel said.

"Better to fight and lose than never to have fought at all and just concede people's rights and allow terrible things to happen," she said.

A BIG CASE FOR A SMALL PRACTICE: Ms. Nessel knew she would need help for a case of this magnitude. She and Ms. Stanyar had taken the case on a pro-bono basis. Now they knew they would have to commit to the case full-time and not get paid.

Ms. Nessel would hire another attorney to handle the rest of the firm's caseload and ensure it could continue operating. She drew upon her savings. They also would get help from Wayne State University law professor Robert Sedler and attorney Kenneth Mogill.

The case put a tremendous weight on them, but it also presented a huge opportunity, Ms. Nessel said.

"We were just a small handful of lawyers trying to do the right thing," she said. "We weren't some major organization that had a lot of financial backing."

The attorneys would receive some assistance from GLAAD, a national LGBT group, as well as Leslie Cooper from the national American Civil Liberties Union, who conducted a critical cross-examination at trial of Mark Regnerus, one of the state's witnesses who sought to defend Michigan's reliance on heterosexual parenting.

From the time the case became a marriage case through the initial appeals period, Ms. Nessel said the case became an 18 hours a day, seven days a week commitment.

The case was overwhelming at many points, Ms. Nessel said.

She had started out in the law as a Wayne County assistant prosecuting attorney, hands down the most challenging prosecutor's office in the state with the large, complex caseload. That job, Ms. Nessel said, gave her the experience of walking into the office on a given day, having a superior hand her an armed robbery file and ask her to try a case because the assistant prosecuting attorney assigned to handle it had called in sick.

That built up a tolerance to pressure, she said.

But the live-blogging of the DeBoer case brought a new level of intensity, Ms. Nessel said.

"It's literally being sent out all across the nation as you're saying it. That is incredible pressure," she said, recalling getting calls from around the nation about something she said in court that day. "I have a lot more gray hair now."

TWISTS AND TURNS: The case would take a long time to play out. Mr. Friedman heard motion after motion, and the betting money was on the appointee of former President Ronald Reagan, who had issued the decision striking down the University of Michigan Law School's race-conscious admissions policy, ruling for Ms. DeBoer and Ms. Rowse and against the state.

But Mr. Friedman pulled a surprise. Instead of ruling on the case, he ordered a trial.

The move was a letdown, Ms. Rowse said.

Ms. Nessel was livid.

Eventually, they realized the trial worked to their advantage, they said.

"It's funny, as upset as I was with Judge Friedman at the time when we were made to go trial and no other marriage case in the country was there a trial dictated since Prop 8 (in California). At the time, I was like, why? Why us? Why do we have to go to trial? Nobody else has to go to trial," Ms. Nessel said. "But honestly, it was very brilliant on his part. It allowed us to make a record of matters that really needed thorough discussion and thorough cross-examination. What that did is it really laid the foundation for the Supreme Court later to dispose of all bans on same-sex marriage."

The key point of argument at trial was whether the state had a legitimate interest in furthering parents from heterosexual marriages.

Governor Rick Snyder and Attorney General Bill Schuette made the case that, yes, the state did.

The state presented witnesses and studies questioning the viability of same-sex parents. That did not go well. One of the state's witnesses, under cross-examination, said he believed gays were condemned to Hell unless they repented. Mr. Friedman scoffed, in his ruling, at Mr. Regnerus' work as not credible.

The trial forced the state to make its arguments subject to cross-examination, Ms. Nessel said.

"At the end of the day, at the end of the trial, those arguments did not sustain any credibility with the court, and that's really the same thing the United States Supreme Court found," she said.

On March 21, 2014, after 5 p.m. on a Friday, after intense anticipation, Mr. Friedman issued his ruling. The state's ban on same-sex marriage was illegal, he ruled. He did not stay his ruling.

Some 323 same-sex couples married during the next 24 hours in those counties where clerks opened on Saturday to accommodate those wishing to marry immediately.

But then the 6th circuit would stay the decision. And then the 6th circuit would, eight months later, issue a rare decision among the circuits to uphold a state's one man, one woman marriage law. Mr. Snyder and Mr. Schuette had won a victory.

But Ms. DeBoer and Ms. Rowse appealed to the U.S. Supreme Court, and it heard the case in April 2015.

That was frightening, Ms. Rowse said.

"It's going to be the final case and the final answer. And it could go either way," she said.

Ms. Rowse said she and Ms. DeBoer were facing, if the ruling went against them, either living with a negative ruling in Michigan or moving to another state.

"We didn't even want to think about uprooting our whole life," she said.

The waiting for the decision was agonizing, Ms. Rowse said.

"That was probably the worst few months while that was being decided," she said. "It was a lot of up and downs and emotions and not just for us but the attorneys, too, and our supporters."

Ms. Nessel said she never allowed herself to envision the possibility of defeat. Legally, the plaintiffs were not advocating novel concepts, she said. And emotionally, she said she could not keep her inner faith in the case had she considered they might lose.

Finally, on June 26, 2015, came the decision. On a 5-4 ruling, with Justice Anthony Kennedy - as expected - proving the decisive vote, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled for the plaintiffs. Same-sex couples could marry in all 50 states, the court held, citing the Fourteenth Amendment.

DEBOER, ROWSE SAY STATE MISSED OPPORTUNITY: Neither Ms. DeBoer nor Ms. Rowse voiced any ill will toward Mr. Snyder or Mr. Schuette.

"I think Governor Snyder was doing what was expected of him, what his party expected," Ms. DeBoer said. "I think Attorney General Schuette was doing his job. I believe there was maybe some personal feelings behind it, possibly. But they did their jobs. We all have a job to do."

But both saw the case as a waste. The state simply could have conceded second-parent adoption in 2012 and avoided a costly three-year battle that resulted in the state paying $1.9 million in legal cost reimbursements to Ms. Nessel, Ms. Stanyar, Mr. Sedler and Mr. Mogill.

"From purely a taxpayer perspective, I thought, 'Why would you waste money on this?'" Ms. Rowse said. "Why would you spend the money and risk losing?"

Pointing to Mr. Snyder's and Mr. Schuette's conservative supporters, Ms. Rowse said, "I think they probably politically didn't have a choice."

Ms. Nessel said, "I've long wondered if I sat down in a room, just me and Bill Schuette, and asked, 'Well, was it worth it?'"

Mr. Schuette has said there is no price on defending the Constitution.

NESSEL LAUNCHES ANTI-DISCRIMINATION PROPOSAL: There were two major pieces of fallout from a public policy standpoint after the Supreme Court ruled.

First, some conservatives began pushing for a Religious Freedom Restoration Act, which as written in the Senate (SB 4[redacted]) would prohibit governments from passing laws and ordinances requiring residents to act against strongly held religious beliefs unless the government can prove there's a compelling public interest and no less restrictive way to accomplish its objective than imposing that burden.

That swiftly faded under a veto threat from Mr. Snyder.

From the other side of the political spectrum, supporters of expanding the Elliott-Larsen Civil Rights Act - which bars discrimination against various classes in employment, housing and public accommodations - to include sexual orientation and gender identity called again for broadening that law. Republican legislative leaders made clear their caucuses had no interest in such a proposal.

There had always been talk of a ballot proposal, but that had fallen quiet. The groups most involved in fighting for the issue in the Legislature, Equality Michigan and the American Civil Liberties Union of Michigan, had largely ruled it out, preferring to keep battling for a legislative answer rather than risk a voter-led defeat.

Ms. Nessel sprung a big surprise October 30 with the announcement she would co-chair the Fair Michigan proposal to amend Article I, Section 2 of the Constitution - which-prohibits discrimination in the exercise of civil or political rights based on religion, race, color or national origin - to include sexual orientation, gender and gender identity.

Ms. Nessel said the DeBoer case emboldened her in pursuing justice and improving the state, and that is why she feels so strongly about the ballot proposal even as it has met resistance from Equality Michigan and the ACLU.

"When you see injustice, it is a good idea to stand up and be the one to say this is wrong and should not be tolerated any longer," she said. "I feel very strongly about pursuing it because I feel so strongly it's the right thing."

Ms. DeBoer and Ms. Rowse said they support Ms. Nessel, but have no plans to get involved in the campaign.

"We stand behind Dana and what Dana's doing, but again, this one isn't our fight," Ms. DeBoer said. "We have a couple of years to make up to our children. We're just returning to be parents now. When the time is right, and if they need us to step up, we'll definitely step up to the best of our ability. But our fight took a lot out of us and a lot out of our children."

LIFE TODAY: Ms. Nessel is back to her regular caseload at her law practice.

After the Supreme Court ruling, she married her now wife, who was a volunteer on the case and eventually rose to project manager

"Not only are my clients married and their children have two parents, but I'm married and my children have two parents, too," she said. "It's been wonderful. The journey has been difficult but rewarding in so many different ways for me."

Ms. DeBoer and Ms. Rowse officially married in August.

Ms. Rowse said the marriage did not "really change their relationship at all." They had, years earlier, had a commitment ceremony

"We had always felt in our hearts that we were married," she said. "Getting the official piece of paper was the next step in this whole process, but getting the final adoption decrees was the ultimate goal and what we finally achieved in November."

Another change has been getting recognized in public. Most people are friendly, Ms. DeBoer said. Those who disagree seem to leave them alone. Ms. DeBoer said there have been two small incidents, one involving a person who objected to the race of their children, the other objecting to their marrying, the latter foe refusing to leave her alone at a grocery to the point where police were called, she said.

"It's been actually really, really positive," she said. "We've had so many people congratulate us or tell us to keep fighting."

Ms. Rowse said for a while, the public attention came in waves. There were many interview requests, but now life has slowed down.

"Overall, it's really mellowed out, and we're back to PTA and taking the kids to school and things like that and just being an everyday, ordinary family," she said.

Creagh To Be Interim Head At DEQ

Effective Monday, Natural Resources Director Keith Creagh will have led all three of the state's resource-based departments as he takes over as interim director of the Department of Environmental Quality.

Governor Rick Snyder announced Mr. Creagh's appointment, and named DNR Deputy Director Bill Moritz as interim director in that department, on Wednesday as the administration works to fill the gap left by the resignation Tuesday of Environmental Quality Director Dan Wyant.

Snyder spokesperson Dave Murray said it was not yet clear what efforts would be undertaken to name a permanent director for the DEQ.

"This has all happened very quickly," Mr. Murray said, adding of Mr. Creagh's appointment, "That allows time for those decisions to be made."

Mr. Snyder praised Mr. Creagh for his work to date.

"Keith has an unparalleled passion for Michigan's environment, working closely with the DEQ during his years with both the DNR and the Michigan Department of Agriculture and Rural Development," he said in a statement. "I am confident his knowledge and experience will help ensure a seamless transition while we work to identify a long-term director for the DEQ."

Mr. Creagh was one of Mr. Snyder's first appointees when he took over the then-Department of Agriculture in January 2011. The governor pulled Mr. Creagh out of a brief retirement, during which he was director of industry affairs for Lansing-based Neogen Corporation, back to the department where he had been a long-time deputy.

He took the reins of the DNR in July 2012 after then-Director Rodney Stokes was pulled into the Executive Office as an advisor.

Mr. Moritz was named natural resources deputy in the DNR after serving as chief of the Wildlife Division. In addition to his work for the DNR, he has served as executive director for Safari Club international and the Safari Club International Foundation. He holds a doctorate in zoology from Southern Illinois University, a master's degree in fish and wildlife management from Montana State University and a bachelor's degree in fisheries and wildlife biology from Iowa State University.

Arwood: TED Cohesiveness Aiding In Economic Growth

The creation of the Department of Talent and Economic Development in 2015 has proven successful both in communities and for businesses looking to expand or locate in the state, Michigan Economic Development Corporation CEO Steve Arwood said in a recent interview, and he expects an expansion of those already successful initiatives in 2016.

TED, as it has affectionately been called, is a combination of efforts by the MEDC, the newly created Talent Investment Agency and the Michigan State Housing Development Authority.

"We're now kind of on the same harness. So three critical parts of economic development that are needed, no matter how you go about this business, are now sister-brother agencies under one rubric," Mr. Arwood said in an interview with Gongwer News Service. "It really gives us an opportunity to leverage our expertise, leverage our resources."

Among the already successful initiatives is the Rising Tide program, Mr. Arwood said, the fruition of a goal Governor Rick Snyder noted in his last State of the State address. The program was officially named in late September and began with 10 pilot communities.

"Rising Tide is where we ... go in some of these communities that are looking for sustainable economic development plans where they might not have the capacity to really pull that together themselves (and) convene that discussion," Mr. Arwood said. "Not come in and say, 'Hey, we're from the state, here's what you need to do,' but come in and say, 'Hey, we're a collection of folks with some expertise in this area, and how can we help you through that?'"

Mr. Arwood said the program has become "quite popular" and that it will likely expand in 2016.

"There's other communities that have expressed interest to become part of that program, and I think continuing to get us out there in a helping way is really important," he said.

And the program is just one example of what TED has been able to accomplish where the separate entities might be more burdensome previously.

"Part of the importance of TED is now you get TED - it's not three different phone calls or trying to chase down the area," Mr. Arwood said. "If you come in through the economic development portal, the MSHDA portal or the TIA portal, you're coming in to a bigger unit that has more assets to respond with."

Another example of efficiency for both the state and businesses is in the Skilled Trades Training Fund, TIA Director Stephanie Comai said in the same interview.

"Those applications that come to employers that come to the state, they've been vetted both by the MEDC staff as well as the local talent staff at Michigan Works!" she said. "So we're making sure that those businesses have developed a business case for why they need training dollars."

There were about 8,700 residents who received training in fiscal year 2015 through the Skilled Trades Training Fund, Ms. Comai said, and TIA is on track to train about 14,000 people with the appropriated funds for 2016.

"That's a really important tool for employers who are growing their businesses who have a talent gap," she said. "We also really want to make sure people understand what opportunities are available to them in the workforce, and that skilled trades is a great choice for people looking for a career. Selling that story and making sure we get the word out is something we're going to be really pursuing in '16."

The third piece of the TED puzzle, MSHDA, has seen positive progress in 2015 and expects similar results in 2016, Executive Director Kevin Elsenheimer said in the interview.

MSHDA has re-focused its efforts towards things the Legislature has asked it to focus on, Mr. Elsenheimer said, including low-income housing and providing "decent, affordable housing for people in Michigan."

"We're focused on making sure we have great home ownership products available for new home buyers and making sure we've got excellent quality multi-family products available for people all around the state, particularly in places where people actually have jobs," he said. "We have found there's growing demand for low-income properties in some of our larger cities which have seen job growth, and we want to make sure we not only provide some development there but also provide development in some of our rural parts of the state."

He said MSHDA saw a roughly 30 percent increase in the number of mortgages for first-time home buyers in 2015, "and we think we're going to see similar numbers next year, maybe in the 25 percent region is what we're shooting for."

MSHDA is especially pleased with the interest in multi-family developments throughout the state, Mr. Elsenheimer said.

"Those are all homes that in many cases are being constructed, which provides additional job growth all throughout the state and obviously provides a decent home for a family that's going to be in Michigan for a long period of time," he said. "We have a lot of developers interested in playing in our markets, so we expect we're going to see large increases in the amount of development that we actually see around the state next year as well."

WORKING WITH THE LEGISLATURE: One area where Mr. Arwood hopes to continue building relationships is not just with businesses, but the Legislature. In the wake of revelations that the state's financial commitments on the now-defunct Michigan Economic Growth Authority credits could be as much as $9.38 billion, the Legislature came down hard on the MEDC.

Mr. Arwood and his staff have been able to negotiate some certainty into three of those commitments with the Ford Motor Company, General Motors and Fiat Chrysler, but said the rest will be reevaluated in the New Year.

"It's hard to say," he said of renegotiating more credits in 2016. "We'll be looking at that over the course of the next couple weeks into January. We want to have some conversations with the Treasury about that, make sure before we get full into the budget discussion that we know where we're at."

The MEDC also had to make some mid-year cuts to staff after the Legislature completed work on the current fiscal year budget, forcing the MEDC to do more with less.

"The one thing that is unfinished business with me is continuing to translate the importance of a consistent and thoughtful economic development program, including the budgetary support for that. Last year (2015) was an interesting year," Mr. Arwood said.

"I think we made some major strides though in continuing to translate the work we do. I think we had gotten a little aloof on that for a while, but that's something that's top-line for me is to make sure we're able to compete with other states and parts of the globe, and not to get complacent," he said.

Still, Mr. Arwood is optimistic about the future of TED and what it can do for the state.

"I think it's going to really work well on into the future," he said. "We've got it all in place, everything is set to go, and we're looking for a great 2016. I think that's a very significant accomplishment that we've pulled this together; it's not easy creating a new department."

Trails, Invasives See Ongoing Focus For DNR

Expanding and connecting trails has been a hallmark of the natural resources policy under Governor Rick Snyder, but that emphasis is likely to continue under future administrations, Natural Resources Director Keith Creagh said in a recent interview.

Developing and expanding trails is a way to bring natural resources into communities, and vice versa, Mr. Creagh said.

And his assertion that Asian carp making their way into the Great Lakes would come "not on my watch" may come to pass as he transitions, at least temporarily, to head the Department of Environmental Quality (see related story).

Mr. Creagh said the department will continue putting a substantial part of its resources into trail system development.

"We'll continue to pay attention on that through our various funding models and prioritize that, not to the exclusion of other great projects," he said.

And he expected future leaders would continue the effort.

"Whether it's the governor or a local mayor, everyone's talking about trails and connectivity of communities and quality of life," he said. "I think future governors and legislators will support trail systems because it something the citizens of this state will expect."

In addition to expanding the actual trails, particularly to complete development of the Iron Belle Trail that runs across the state, Mr. Creagh said the department is also working to expand the amenities tied to the trails.

A pilot in Marquette is working on the features of "digital trails."

"The next generation wants to be connected," he said.

The project provides, through a mobile site, details about the trail including its route, the difficulty of the path, and features to be found along it.

While the department is working to develop paths for people, it is trying to block paths for invasive species.

The biggest potential invasive continues to be Asian carp, and Mr. Creagh said the giant fish are costing the state even before they potentially arrive on its shores. In addition to collecting and testing environmental DNA samples to determine where the fish might have spread, the DNR has also participated in various exercises to practice findings of a live fish in the lakes or their tributaries.

The focus of the effort has been on the waterways around Chicago that now connect Lake Michigan and the Mississippi River, but he said there are also concerns of grass carp moving into Lake Erie from other nearby basins.

On the Chicago risk, where the connection is man-made, he praised the efforts to speed up federal studies of alternatives for preventing the fish from entering the Great Lakes, but said some interim steps are needed until that study is completed.

The goal overall, though, is to block any invasives.

"What we're attempting to do is not chase the invasive species of the day necessarily, but make sure we have the rigor to look at the pathways and look at the risk analysis along those pathways," he said.

He said Michigan's diverse climate would continue to make it a target for invasive species.

"That whole diversity of agriculture and all the things we get to grow, we get to do that because of microclimates," he said. "Those same things are very welcoming to invasive species."

One new invader that will be around for some time to come is chronic wasting disease.

Mr. Creagh said it would be at least three years before officials knew if the steps the department had taken controlled the neurological disease that affects deer, elk and other cervids.

"It's going to take a few years of this to figure out the data," he said. "And it will take years of reducing deer numbers so we don't transport that disease out of that area."

Mr. Creagh praised both community leaders in Meridian Township and Ingham County as well as hunters in the region for helping with the disease control efforts.

"The hunters actually helped ... by hunting in the area as opposed to avoiding the area, having their deer tested, making sure we have good data," he said. "There's a number of examples across the country where you didn't have that collaboration between the locals, the state and the hunting community."

But keeping hunter numbers up will be a continuing struggle for the department, and the nation, Mr. Creagh said.

Nationally, hunter numbers are dropping about 1 percent annually, which he said is leading some to worry about a substantial loss over time.

But he attributed at least some of Michigan's hunter loss during that time to loss of population overall.

To reverse the loss, the department has been working more in urban areas to expose residents, particularly youth, to outdoors activities.

"We're looking at hunter recruitment and retention and reactivation," he said. "That all has to do with mentoring, getting kids out."

Mr. Creagh said the state has the elements needed to bring hunter numbers back up.

"I will maintain that if we have public access, which we have, and if we have a high quality deer herd, which we have, and if we have the right mentoring and access programs in place, we'll be just fine," he said.

He noted Michigan is third nationally in numbers of hunters.

The recent focus on gun rights and gun control has, to an extent, helped the department, he said. Firearms and ammunition carry a tax that provides Pittman Robertson Act federal grants for wildlife work, and he said those grants have been increasing.

The focus for the department, though, is firearm safety, he said.

"Whether you're for or against, what you should know is gun safety, because there is an opportunity for most individuals in the state to run across a gun at some time in their lives," he said, relaying a message used by a firearm safety instructor. "It's as much about gun safety as ownership."

Assuming Mr. Creagh does not return to his post at the DNR, one thing he will leave for his successor is final approval of a land strategy.

The plan was required in legislation that capped the department's land holdings. While the department completed the plan, the Legislature has yet to approve it, which the law requires for the cap to be removed.

The Legislature has, though, agreed to bring up conservation officer numbers for the state.

Shortly after Mr. Creagh spoke to Gongwer News Service, the department announced another CO training course to begin Sunday.

With the second class graduated earlier in the year, the department has added 60 officers and now has at least one posted in every county.

"Now, with full coverage around the state, we actually have succession planning in place," he said.

Appeals Court Affirms Sexual Abuse Conviction, Remands For Sentencing Changes

The Court of Appeals on Wednesday affirmed multiple convictions involving a father sexually abusing his young daughter but remanded the sentencing back to the circuit court.

In People v. Sardy (COA Docket No. 319227), Judge William Murphy, Judge Michael Gadola and Judge Cynthia Stephens affirmed the defendant's convictions of child sexually abusive activity, using a computer to commit a crime and two counts of second-degree criminal sexual conduct, but remanded the sentencing back to the lower court.

The panel, in one opinion written by Mr. Murphy and in a concurring opinion from Ms. Stephens, ruled against the defendant's arguments that the trial court violated his constitutional right to confront the witnesses against him when it permitted the victim's preliminary examination testimony to be admitted as substantive evidence at trial and that the offense of CSAA is unconstitutionally vague, among other arguments.

However, it did rule the case to be remanded back to the Oakland Circuit Court for sentencing. The panel said the trial court added 20 points to the defendant's offense variable score without proper reasoning.

The victim, Mr. Sardy's daughter, made claims to her mother, who lives in a separate home and was not married to the defendant, about inappropriate sexual behavior. The mother called the police and they searched Mr. Sardy's home where they found videos taken on his iPhone of his daughter "grinding" the couch. They also found nude photographs of the daughter in the bathtub.

At the trial, the girl claimed she did not remember anything when testifying and the court used her preliminary interview as evidence. The court ruled the girl was "unavailable." Mr. Sardy challenged this decision, saying the preliminary interview was unsworn and that the defendant's counsel was unable to cross-examine the witness.

The Court of Appeals ruled the defendant did cross examine the girl thoroughly during the preliminary interview and that the girl was indeed unavailable as she had "a lack of memory of the subject matter of the declarant's statement."

The court ruled that, although the defendant objected at the trial to the victim not being under oath during the preliminary interview, the defendant did not do so during the actual interview.

"Only an objection at the preliminary examination would have been meaningful," Mr. Murphy wrote.

Ms. Stephens said it was forfeiture, but both agreed even if a structural error were found, "a new trial is only warranted if the plain error resulted in the conviction of an actually innocent defendant or seriously affected the fairness, integrity, or public reputation of the proceedings."

The court ruled, given other evidence, the error did not result in an actually innocent person being convicted.

Mr. Sardy also argued the videos of the girl on the couch lacked consistent evidence that she was masturbating. The court denied the argument.

"We conclude that a rational juror could find that the prosecution proved beyond a reasonable doubt that defendant knowingly videotaped the child while she was engaged in a 'listed sexual act,'" the panel said, referring to masturbation.

SUPREME COURT: The Supreme Court on Wednesday denied to hear People of the State of Michigan v. Robertson (SC Docket No. 150132), saying the court is not persuaded the question presented should be reviewed. The court heard oral arguments on whether to hear the full case December 9.

Appeals Court Upholds Denial Of Attorneys' Fees In FOIA Case

Because an attorney filing a Freedom of Information Act request for a client did not list the client's name in the request, he will not be issued attorneys' fees after winning a case against Lake Templene Improvement Board for failing to respond to a FOIA request in a timely manner, the Court of Appeals affirmed this week.

In the unpublished case, Rolfe, PLLC and Miller v. Lake Templene Improvement Board (COA Docket No. 327513), Judge Donald Owens, Judge William Murphy and Judge Joel Hoekstra affirmed the St. Joseph Circuit Court's decision that attorneys' fees not be granted to the plaintiffs after winning their suit against the board.

Glenn Miller retained Craig Rolfe sometime in 2014 to investigate misappropriations by the Improvement Board. Mr. Rolfe sent out various FOIA requests without including Mr. Miller's name.

Eventually, during a pretrial hearing, Mr. Rolfe moved to add Mr. Miller's name to the FOIA requests. The court later found the Improvement Court violated FOIA but found Mr. Rolfe was the prevailing party, not Mr. Miller, and denied granting attorneys' fees.

The court ruled against attorneys' fees because Rolfe was an attorney acting on his own behalf.

Mr. Miller insists he is the prevailing party and Mr. Rolfe was acting on his behalf.

The Court of Appeals panel agreed with the lower court and said Mr. Miller did not make any of the FOIA requests.

"Because Miller failed to assert his right to public information by submitting a FOIA request, he could not file a civil action and he could not have prevailed," the court wrote.

Campaign Notes

JOHNSON ENDORSEMENT: U.S. Sen. Gary Peters (D-Bloomfield Township) is backing former Michigan Democratic Party Chair Lon Johnson in his run for the party's nomination in the 1st U.S. House District.

Mr. Peters sent a fundraising message on Mr. Johnson's behalf this week.

Mr. Johnson is facing former Kalkaska County Sheriff Jerry Cannon for the nomination. The Republican Party field is still in flux in the district.

Capital Notebook

FIREWORKS APPLICATIONS: The Department of Licensing and Regulatory Affairs and the Bureau of Fire Services has opened the 2016 consumer fireworks application period and low impact registration process, it announced Wednesday.

All consumer fireworks applications and required plans must be submitted by midnight, April 1, 2016. Low impact registrations can be submitted at any time but must be completed at least 10 days prior to sales, it said.

Applicants will continue to have the ability to report monthly sales and submit their safety fees online, but applications will be denied for any applicants who have unpaid safety fees or are missing reports (all zero sales must be reported for the 2015 certificate fireworks season).

When submitting documents for 2016 applications, applicants must submit all of the required documents at the time of application or it will be denied, and each document must include the 2016 Certificate number issued during the application process.

LOTTERY PRIZES: The Michigan Lottery issued a record $1.7 billion prizes in 2015, the bureau announced Wednesday.

Among the prizes, 34 were for more than $1 million, the Lottery said. The largest prize, $310.5 million, was for a Powerball drawing and went to Julie Leech of Three Rivers in September.

Appointments By The Governor

ASIAN PACIFIC AMERICAN AFFAIRS COMMISSION: Lisa Gray of Northville succeeds Mamatha Chamarthi, Kaushik Nag of Grand Rapids succeeds Hannah Feikema and Jamie Hsu of Troy and Toshiki Masaki of Canton are reappointed.

The appointments are for terms expiring November 30, 2019, and are not subject to the advice and consent of the Senate.

STATEWIDE INDEPENDENT LIVING COUNCIL: Kelsey Kleimola of Ypsilanti fills a vacancy to represent organizations that provide services for individuals with disabilities and James Whalen of Port Huron fills a vacancy to represent directors of centers for independent living for terms expiring December 31, 2018. The appointments are not subject to the advice and consent of the Senate.

MICHIGAN INDIGENT DEFENSE COMMISSION: Tom McMillin of Rochester Hills succeeds Cletus Smith, who resigned, to represent the speaker of the House for a term expiring April 1, 2016. The appointment is not subject to the advice and consent of the Senate.

MICHIGAN STATE POLICE RETIREMENT BOARD: Bernard Kent of Franklin and Mitchell Stevens of Gaylord have been reappointed for terms expiring December 31, 2018. The appointments are not subject to the advice and consent of the Senate.

BOARD OF PHYSICAL THERAPY: Whitney Terry of Lansing succeeds Mark Epolito to represent the general public and Brian Gilbert of Grand Rapids and Ajay Middha of Midland are reappointed. All are for terms expiring December 31, 2019, and are subject to the advice and consent of the Senate.

BOARD OF CHIROPRACTIC: Robert Huta of Gaylord, Donald Reno of Shelby Township and Ronald Wilcox of Wyoming have been reappointed for terms expiring December 31, 2019. The appointments are subject to the advice and consent of the Senate.

BOARD OF COSMETOLOGY: Sally Pittsenbarger of Ferndale succeeds Helena DeYoung to represent represents cosmetologists and Kathleen Skipper-Stong of Ida has been reappointed. Both are for terms expiring December 31, 2019, and the appointments are subject to the advice and consent of the Senate.

Volume #55, Report #1 -- Monday, January 4, 2016

Talberg Named To Lead PSC

Governor Rick Snyder on Monday appointed Sally Talberg to chair the Public Service Commission as current chair John Quackenbush prepares to head back to the private sector.

Mr. Quackenbush will continue in a commissioner position until March 31, 2016, to help facilitate a smooth transition.

"Sally's experience as an energy consultant will be invaluable as she takes on this new role," Mr. Snyder said in a statement. "John has been an exceptional chair and regulator for the state. We are fortunate to have the notice period he has provided to effect a quality transition. I wish him the best of luck with his future plans."

Prior to joining the PSC in 2013, Ms. Talberg, of Williamston, was a senior consultant at Public Sector Consultants in Lansing, serving as the firm's energy and regulatory expert. While there, she helped establish Michigan Saves, an energy waste reduction financing program.

She was also recently appointed president of the organization of MISO States, a multi-state organization working on electric transmission issues, and a key position as Michigan's Legislature works to develop new energy policy standards and regulations in 2016.

The Federal Communications Commission has also appointed Ms. Talberg to several federal-state boards, a statement from the governor's office indicated.

Mr. Quackenbush worked in management at UBS Global Asset Management and Sprint Corp. prior to being appointed by Mr. Snyder to chair the PSC in September 2011, though it was not immediately clear if he intended to return to either of those companies upon his departure from the PSC.

Ms. Talberg initially replaced Orjiakor Isiogu, who retired after serving as the chair of the commission since September 2007. When she first accepted the position, she told Gongwer News Service her focus would be striking a balance between affordable service and environmental protection (See Gongwer Michigan Report, July 5, 2013).

Norm Saari, former chief of staff to House Speaker Kevin Cotter (R-Mount Pleasant), is the newest member to the three-person commission, having been appointed to the commission in July 2015 to replace Greg White, who retired.

Flint, Genesee County Formally Request Emergency Assistance On Water

Declaring that the water crisis goes beyond the ability of local resources to resolve, the Genesee County Board of Commissioners agreed Monday with the Flint mayor's call to declare a state of emergency in the city.

The Flint Journal reported the request will seek more than $50 million to replace lead service lines and other yet to be determined needs.

Several residences and other facilities in Flint use water service lines made of lead. When the source of the city's water was switched from the Detroit system to the Flint River without corrosion control treatment, lead-based service lines began leaching lead into the water, resulting in lead levels beyond those when the federal government requires remediation. Blood samples showed elevated lead levels in many children.

The request will go through the Department of State Police's Emergency Management and Homeland Security Division, which will meet with the Genesee County emergency management coordinator.

Snyder press secretary Dave Murray said the governor will seriously consider a state declaration of emergency or disaster, but given the time involved following the procedures to make that decision, the state is treating the situation as an emergency.

"Prior to a formal declaration, we are recognizing this as an emergency and are working with city and county leaders to coordinate efforts, streamline communication and tap all available resources at the state's control," he said. "A formal declaration could take a fair amount of time as people assess their needs and the damages."

Mr. Murray said the State Police have been closely engaged since the beginning of the crisis.

"Due to the uniqueness of this situation, we have to look at all possible options to help Flint residents," Mr. Murray said.

Senate Minority Leader Jim Ananich (D-Flint) called for Mr. Snyder to act quickly on the request.

"This is an important step in the process and the governor should make a swift decision," he said in a statement. "I'll continue pushing hard to make sure we receive additional resources that address immediate and long-term needs, and that they are used efficiently and effectively."

Julie Calley Moves Toward House Run

Republican Julie Calley has created a campaign committee to run in the 87th House District after rumors had been swirling around for months that she might seek the seat.

Ms. Calley, chair of the Ionia County Board of Commissioners and wife of Lt. Governor Brian Calley, did not return a request for comment Monday, or multiple requests previously, but several sources have said she will run to replace Rep. Mike Callton (R-Nashville), who is term limited and cannot seek re-election in 2016.

Ms. Calley has not formally filed to run, but setting up her campaign committee will allow her to start raising and spending money.

House Spent $77K On Outside Firm During Courser, Gamrat Scandal

The House Business Office paid $77,192 to the Dickinson Wright law firm during the investigation and expulsion proceedings of former Reps. Cindy Gamrat and Todd Courser, Progress Michigan said Monday after requesting the information.

The group criticized House Republican leadership for spending more than a representative's annual salary on outside counsel rather than using the Department of Attorney General or House counsel.

The current figure disclosed by Progress Michigan does not include any billings for the lawsuit former aides for Mr. Courser and Ms. Gamrat have brought against the House.

"It is troubling and incredibly ironic that two lawmakers were expelled from the House for wasting taxpayer resources, and yet, Speaker Cotter has already spent more than a lawmaker's salary on an outside firm as a result of his bungled investigation," Lonnie Scott, executive director of Progress Michigan, said in a statement. "Speaker Cotter seems to be using taxpayer dollars to cover up his own political missteps. Cotter should use his taxpayer-funded attorney to defend the House and pay for any outside counsel himself."

However, Gideon D'Assandro, spokesperson for House Speaker Kevin Cotter (R-Mount Pleasant), said the House also hired Dickinson Wright for a lawsuit against Rep. Brian Banks (D-Detroit) and paid more than $85,000 when a former employee of Mr. Banks' sued the House.

And Mr. D'Assandro said attorneys at the Department of Attorney General and the House counsel are not "pro-bono" lawyers waiting to be brought in. He said either option would have likely led to higher costs for the department or in hiring additional House counsel.

He said when talking about taxpayers' potential liability, it is better to spend more on the front end to ensure everything is done correctly.

"You want to spend more to make sure you're doing it right on the front-end," Mr. D'Assandro said.

Muchmore To Head Up Government Affairs At Honigman Firm

Dennis Muchmore, Governor Rick Snyder's outgoing chief of staff, will head up the government relations and regulatory practice at the Honigman, Miller, Schwartz and Cohn law firm starting in February.

Mr. Muchmore had said last year he planned to depart the administration in 2016, and months ago Mr. Snyder named Jarrod Agen to become his new chief of staff upon Mr. Muchmore's departure.

"It's been an honor to serve with Governor Snyder as we've worked to make Michigan the Comeback State," Mr. Muchmore said in a statement circulated by the Honigman firm. "I'm just as excited to enter this next phase with Honigman. Just as there were people who guided me along the way in my career, I see this as an opportunity to give back and help others prepare to do great things."

The firm also announced it is creating a faculty of current and previous Honigman attorneys to provide specialized training opportunities for firm attorneys and clients, legislators, legislative staff and leading state department and agency employees.

For Mr. Muchmore, the move will mark a return to the government relations and lobbying world. He helped found what is now the Muchmore, Harrington, Smalley and Associates lobbying firm.

"Dennis has tremendous respect from people on both sides of the aisle. He is known across the state for his superb integrity and for his long, distinguished and successful career," said David Foltyn, Honigman's chair and CEO. "With his guidance, we expect to continue to be an active voice for our clients in the legislative and regulatory process for decades to come."

Supreme Court: Injured Police Officers Cannot Sue For Damages

The prohibition on police officers and fire fighters from suing for damages from injuries sustained on the job is absolute, the Supreme Court unanimously ruled Monday.

In a per curiam decision, the court in Lego v. Liss (SC Docket Nos. 149246 and 149247) held that Michael Lego, a police officer, had no right to sue Jake Liss, a fellow officer who inadvertently shot him as they attempted to arrest a suspected armed robber, for gross negligence.

The decision overturned the Wayne Circuit Court and the Court of Appeals.

The Wayne Circuit Court had refused Mr. Liss' motion to dismiss the case, and the Court of Appeals agreed.

The Court of Appeals had ruled it could not decide as a matter of law the applicability of the statute stating that governments are "immune from tort liability for an injury to a firefighter or police officer that arises from the normal, inherent, and foreseeable risks of the firefighter's or police officer's profession."

But the Supreme Court ruled that, in fact, the issue can be decided as a matter of law.

"The undisputed facts here are that Michael Lego was shot by the defendant as both were attempting to apprehend an armed robbery suspect," the Supreme Court said in its ruling. "As the Court of Appeals partial dissent correctly concluded, 'being shot by a fellow police officer while engaging an active shooter is one of 'the normal, inherent, and foreseeable risks of . . . [a] police officer's profession' within the meaning of MCL 600.2966.'

"This is true irrespective of whether the defendant was acting consistently with his training and departmental safety procedures or whether the defendant was grossly negligent while attempting to apprehend the suspect in this case. Thus, no question of material fact remains unresolved. Accordingly, the defendant is entitled to immunity as a matter of law," the court said.

The case was returned to the Wayne Circuit Court to enter an order granting summary disposition to the defendant.

Indigent Defense Council Submits Standards To Court

The Michigan Indigent Defense Commission has submitted its initial set of standards to the state Supreme Court, it announced Monday, addressing four elements: training and education of counsel, initial client interview, use of investigation and experts and counsel at first appearance.

The standards were originally released in June 2015 and were subject to a public hearing in mid-August. At the December 15, 2015 meeting, the commission voted to submit the final version to the Supreme Court for adoption.

The court now has 180 days to approve the standards, the MIDC said in statement.

"Today marks an important achievement for the MIDC," Executive Director Jonathan Sacks said. "In less than one year since establishing a formal office, the MIDC has developed this set of standards, met with stakeholders, received public comment and held a public hearing. I look forward to the Court's approval of this first set of standards."

Four points are raised on the issue of education and training of defense counsel, the first of which requires counsel to know "substantive Michigan and federal law, constitutional law, criminal law, criminal procedure, rules of evidence, ethical rules and local practices," the draft notes. Counsel is also to know the forensic and scientific issues that can arise in a criminal case and the legal issues concerning defenses to a crime, and be able to effectively litigate those.

Also on education, the commission outlines that counsel shall "annually complete continuing legal education courses relevant to the representation of the criminally accused," the standards indicate. Lawyers can discharge this obligation for annual continuing legal education by attending local trainings or statewide conferences, though. And attorneys with less than two years of experience practicing criminal defense are to participate in one basic skills acquisition class.

All attorneys are to annually complete at least 12 hours of continuing legal education in some form.

The second standard on initial interview outlines regulations on the timing and setting of the interview, as well as the necessary preparation and evaluation of client status (such as whether the client is competent to participate in his or her representation, understands, the charges, and has some basic comprehension of criminal procedure).

Where counsel is unable to communicate with a client because of language or communication differences, it is to take "whatever steps necessary to fully explain the proceedings in a language or form of communication the client can understand."

The MIDC also proposed a minimum standard for investigation and the use of experts in its third proposed standard. An independent investigation of the charges and offense in as prompt time as practical is required, and the "reasonable" request of funds to retain investigators to assist with a client's defense is appropriate in some situations, the MIDC said.

Finally, the commission proposed a minimum standard on counsel at first appearance and other critical stages of the procedure.

Counsel is to be assigned as soon as the defendant is determined to be eligible for indigent criminal defense services, and the indigency determination and appointment of counsel is to be made "as soon as the defendant's liberty is subject to restriction by a magistrate or judge," the draft standards suggest.

"All persons determined to be eligible for indigent criminal defense services shall also have appointed counsel at pre-trial proceedings, during plea negotiations and at other critical stages, whether in court or out of court," the final standard outlines.

The MIDC will also develop standards in the future addressing issues, it said, including the following: delivery of indigent defense independent of the judiciary, caseload levels, the assignment of counsel, qualifications and review of counsel, economic incentives and disincentives for the practice of indigent defense, and representation of clients by the same attorney at every court appearance.

Phelps Bill Would Make Manipulating Data A Felony

State employees who are caught manipulating data could be convicted of a felony under legislation Rep. Phil Phelps plans to introduce, he announced Monday.

Mr. Phelps (D-Flushing) said in a statement the legislation prevents government corruption by making it a felony for any state employee to knowingly manipulate data that would change the outcome of an official report. The felony would be punishable by up to five years in prison.

"As we began to comb through all of the facts surrounding Flint's water crisis it was frightening to learn that there were very few laws on our books that protect the public from potential government abuse such as data manipulation," Mr. Phelps said. "I am not sure if anyone involved in the Flint water crisis deliberately changed or removed critical data in state reports, but I am absolutely certain that it should be a crime if it did happen."

Mr. Phelps said he plans on introducing the legislation when the House resumes session next week.

"Protecting Michigan residents should be our highest priority, yet the Auditor General recently noted that potential bad actors in our government merely stand to lose their jobs, even if they put innocent lives in jeopardy," he said. "As elected leaders we must send out a signal to everyone letting them know that we will not tolerate this form of injustice."

Campaign Notes: Mitchell Slams Fellow Republicans For Road Resolution

Business executive Paul Mitchell, one of several Republicans vying to succeed retiring U.S. Rep. Candice Miller, called out sponsors of a Senate measure that would again increase the sales tax to pay for roads.

The plan, SJR M, would impose a 7 percent sales tax, with the new penny divided between the state and local road agencies. The constitutional amendment would also declare void the fuel tax and registration fee increases recently enacted.

"I simply can't understand what these members of the state Senate are thinking in proposing even higher taxes," Mr. Mitchell said in a statement. "When the Legislature failed to produce a viable solution to fix our roads and punted their responsibility to the voters by proposing the largest tax increase in Michigan in the last 50 years it was rejected by the largest margin in modern Michigan election history. Career politicians, like those backing Senate Joint Resolution M, who continue to propose one bad tax idea after another clearly aren't getting the message that government needs to live within its means."

Sen. Phil Pavlov (R-St. Clair), currently one of Mr. Mitchell's key opponents for the seat, supported the package that created Proposal 2015-1, but is not listed as a sponsor of the new measure, which was introduced December 15. Sen. Ken Horn (R-Frankenmuth) is the primary sponsor on the resolution.

Mr. Mitchell, who headed Say No to Higher Taxes and Special Interest Deals, one of the efforts against Proposal 2015-1 to increase the sales tax as part of a plan to increase road funding, said the failure of that proposal showed voters want roads fixed without a tax increase.

"We elected a Republican supermajority to the Legislature based upon the promise that they would enact conservative solutions to our state's challenges, but what we get is more taxes and more spending. The citizens are demanding and deserve better," he said.

LEGAL MARIJUANA: MILegalize, one of two groups trying to get initiated legislation to legalize marijuana possession (a third is seeking a constitutional amendment), urged supporters in a release Monday to continue submitting signatures, and money.

The committee is expecting to pass 180 days collecting signatures, meaning some of its petitions will become stale, but is also hoping for a rule change from the Board of State Canvassers that would keep more of those signatures alive.

The group announced it was planning fundraisers, and an update on signature collections, later in the month.

LOWER ANNOUNCES IN 70TH HOUSE WITH OUTMAN ENDORSEMENT: Edmore Village Manager Jim Lower, a Republican, announced Monday he is running in the 70th House District seat with the endorsement of Rep. Rick Outman (R-Six Lakes), the current representative who cannot seek re-election due to term limits in 2016.

"I am Pro-Life, Pro-Jobs, Pro-2nd Amendment, Pro-Family Values and I believe that 'We the People' must be in charge of our own government, Mr. Lower said in a statement. "We need a strong conservative voice in the State House of Representatives with the experience to get things done, I will be that voice. My experience, strong work ethic, and relationships with the people of this district will enable me to be effective on day one."

Mr. Lower has also served as a county commissioner, an aide in the Michigan House, and as an aide to Sen. Judy Emmons (R-Sheridan).

MIRS BREAKING NEWS: Gov Declares State Of Emergency In Genesee County -- 4:36 p.m.

http://www.mirsnews.com/alert.php?alert_id=2157

Gov. Rick SNYDER today declared a state of emergency for Genesee County due to the health and safety issues caused by lead in the city of Flint's drinking water.

By declaring a state of emergency, Snyder has made available all state resources in cooperation with local response and recovery operations. The declaration authorizes the Michigan State Police, Emergency Management and Homeland Security Division (MSP/EMHSD) to coordinate state efforts.

"The health and welfare of Flint residents is a top priority and we're committed to a coordinated approach with resources from state agencies to address all aspects of this situation," Snyder said. "Working in full partnership with the Flint Water Advisory Task Force, all levels of government and water quality experts, we will find both short-term and long-term solutions to ensure the health and safety of Flint residents."

Volume #52, Report #178 -- Wednesday, September 11, 2013

Bipartisan Backing Carries 'Main Street Fairness' Bills

Certain online sellers with a presence in the state could be required to begin collecting the 6 percent sales or use tax under legislation the House Tax Policy Committee reported Wednesday, but with some believing the issue needs to be resolved at the federal level, it is unclear how much traction the bills will have in the full House.

The legislation (HB 4202 and HB 4203) cleared the committee on a 9-1 vote with five abstentions. Six Republicans and three Democrats voted yes.

House Speaker Jase Bolger (R-Marshall) said the issue should really be solved on the federal level, and the question now is if the state's legislation is going to accomplish what the federal government isn't doing.

House Speaker Jase Bolger (R-Marshall) and Rep. Vicki Barnett (D-Farmington Hills)

"You're not hearing opposition from me, but you're not hearing we're going to run this tomorrow," Mr. Bolger said to reporters after House session. "You're hearing me wrestle with what the federal government is not doing. You're hearing frustration from me that once again the federal government is not doing its job, so we're left to pick up their slack. You're hearing also concern about what's the best policy."

The "main street fairness" issue - so named because retailers say their businesses face a 6 percent disadvantage to the Amazons of the world who do not collect sales or use tax - is in the House Republicans action plan for the term. That action plan, unveiled earlier this year, declares, "We will remove the 6 percent competitive advantage that out-of-state online retailers enjoy over Michigan companies."

Ari Adler, spokesperson for Mr. Bolger, said the speaker has always thought it was a federal issue, and it is still a part of the action plan. Mr. Adler said it is still unclear if the best course of action would involve state legislation.

Rep. Jeff Farrington (R-Utica), chair of the committee, said he abstained on the bills because he agreed it is a federal issue.

"Tax policy should be fair and across the board, and that can only be done at the federal level," he said.

Asked if he thought the federal government would act on legislation soon (a bill passed through the U.S. Senate in May and is now in the U.S. House) Mr. Farrington said: "I've got no confidence at all."

Rep. Vicki Barnett (D-Farmington Hills), minority vice chair of the committee, also abstained. Ms. Barnett said the Department of Treasury still was not certain if the tax collected on Internet sellers would be sales or use tax. She also said it is a federal issue, and something she supports on the federal level.

Most of the sales tax goes to the School Aid Fund, and most of the use tax goes to the General Fund. The House Fiscal Agency analysis says it appears the majority of revenue generated from the bills would be sales tax, but it depends on how it is remitted.

"It's a tax increase on consumers who are looking for efficiency and convenience when they shop," Ms. Barnett said after committee. "There's no clear rules as to who would actually be forced to pay this tax. Probably, most importantly, the 1996 Telecommunications Act explicitly says that states are preempted from acting in this arena."

According to the Department of Treasury, about $482.4 million in sales and use tax revenue will be uncollected in the 2013-14 fiscal year, and nearly 60 percent of that is due to online sales. Although residents are supposed to remit the taxes in income tax returns, many do not.

The House Fiscal Agency analysis, however, says it is unlikely the bills would generate much revenue because sellers can move affiliated partners and warehouses to other states. To generate more revenue, federal legislation would need to be passed.

Mr. Farrington had the Democrats vote before the Republicans in the committee to make sure they didn't change their votes at the last minute, he said.

Rep. Aric Nesbitt (R-Lawton) was the lone no vote on both bills. Rep. Jon Switalski (D-Warren), Rep. Bob Genetski (R-Saugatuck) and Rep. Pat Somerville (R-New Boston) joined committee leadership in abstaining.

Voting yes were Rep. Harold Haugh (D-Roseville), Rep. Bill LaVoy (D-Monroe), Rep. Jim Townsend (D-Royal Oak), Rep. Margaret O'Brien (R-Portage), Rep. Kevin Cotter (R-Mount Pleasant), Rep. Frank Foster (R-Petoskey), Rep. Lisa Posthumus Lyons (R-Alto), Rep. Tim Kelly (R-Saginaw Township) and Rep. Amanda Price (R-Park Township).

Educator Effectiveness Plan Has Long Road Ahead, Committee Chairs Say

The House and Senate Education committees on Wednesday jointly heard testimony in support of a teacher evaluation system that focuses on both in-class hours as well as individual student growth, but chairs of both the committees say there is still some time to go before any legislative action may come as a result.

"We want to hear from the education community," Sen. Phil Pavlov (R-St. Clair), chair of the Senate Education Committee, said after the meeting, noting the Senate committee will travel to Port Huron on September 26 to hear from teachers there who were part of the pilot program of the evaluation system being proposed by the Council for Educator Effectiveness.

"I think the committee will get great value hearing from teachers that have been evaluated on the pilot program," he said.

Rep. Lisa Posthumus Lyons (R-Alto), chair of the House Education Committee, said she and her members are also looking forward to hearing from educators and administrators before moving forward.

Sen. Phil Pavlov (top) and Rep. Lisa Posthumus Lyons

"It's just a starting point," Ms. Lyons said after the joint meeting. "Our members are going to be talking with the education folks in their districts. It's important that we make sure we do this right and we do this well because it's that critical, not only to the educators and the administrators involved, but to the kids as well."

And because the committee members have to review the report by the council in addition to talking to educators in their district, there is still much work to be done before any legislative action can take place.

"We have a lot of work to do to break the report down," Mr. Pavlov said. "This is a very important step and it's a very significant reform that has to be done properly."

About half of the nearly three-hour committee was spent discussing - and questioning - conclusions reached by the council, chaired by Deborah Loewenberg Ball, dean of the School of Education at the University of Michigan. In addition to explaining the components of the council's recommendations, she said the state must adopt a tool and stick with it whole-heartedly.

"Currently, districts use some of these tools," Ms. Ball said, referencing her presentation to the committees. "Many of them adapt the tools a lot, which is to say they use only some of the things included. Our recommendation is that the tool be used as designed by the designer."

That is to say districts should not deviate, for the most part, from either the philosophy or the implementation of any one plan.

And rather than categorizing teachers in four different categories, the state should consider three: professional, provisional and ineffective.

The idea behind fewer categories is that there is less of a chance of misclassifying a teacher in a profession whose variables are always changing, as well as the philosophy that the evaluation system the council proposes seeks to ensure continued improvement for every grade of teacher, even the best (See Gongwer Michigan Report, July 24, 2013).

Most questions from committee members focused on implementation, a point which Ms. Ball noted would have to take time in order to be done right.

For example, to enter a "testing mania" that seems to be trending nationally, according to Rep. Ellen Cogen Lipton (D-Huntington Woods), is something that the state would have to re-examine annually, Ms. Ball said.

And any proposal that will work will work best if it is not tied to pay, particularly merit pay, Ms. Ball said.

"Our system is entirely oriented out of improvement," Ms. Ball said, responding to a question by Rep. David Knezek (D-Dearborn Heights). "To build a true system of improvement, we recommend this not be tied to pay issues."

Although it may seem counter to conventional wisdom to not pay attention to student and teacher results on a per-school basis, the way the evaluation system is being proposed, "A teacher will not be penalized for having a student below growth if that teacher is producing substantial growth for that student," Ms. Ball explained.

And Sandi Jacobs, with the National Council on Teacher Quality in Washington, D.C., said nationally there are three components to a strong evaluation system: make student learning preponderant criterion, require observations from well-trained observers, and require annual evaluations for all teachers (even the great ones).

"Since 2009, we see states beginning to move forward on these policies," Ms. Jacobs said. "We've seen a great increase in annual evaluations, very big increase in student learning, and more and more using results for tenured learning."

Committee Again Exploring Religious Freedom For Adoption Agencies

Faith-based organizations said the change was needed to ensure they could follow their religious tenets, while civil rights groups said the legislation would open potential adoptive parents to discrimination as the House Families, Children and Seniors Committee opened discussion on legislation that would prohibit the state from requiring faith-based adoption and foster care agencies to violate their religious beliefs.

Rep. Kenneth Kurtz, chair of the committee and lead sponsor of the package (HB 4927 and HB 4928), said his goal was to codify the Department of Human Services' current practice for overseeing the private agencies it licenses.

"This state has never required that these agencies abandon their faith, nor do I think it should," Mr. Kurtz said.

The bills would not, he said, change any current practices. "Anyone who can adopt today will be able to adopt under this bill," he said.

Supporters of the legislation said it would head off problems that have arisen in other states where mandates have required agencies to take actions that violated their tenets. The Michigan Catholic Conference, in a fact sheet on the issue (officials voiced their support but did not speak to the bills) said the church had been forced to close its operations in some other states because of new state mandates brought either through statute or court ruling.

"These bills will ensure the public/private effort to find homes for children exists well into the future," Tom Hickson, vice president for public policy and advocacy for the Catholic Conference, said in a statement. "Faith-based adoption and foster care agencies, Catholic Charities for example, are prevalent in communities throughout the state and offer a multitude of services to destitute and vulnerable persons. It is imperative that the state continues to maintain and strengthen diversity in child placement."

Any future move to require faith-based agencies to violate their faith would mean loss not only of those agencies from the state-supervised system, but also of the families that support them, William Blacquiere, president of Bethany Christian Services, told the committee.

"When faith-based agencies are gone, so are most of the families that will adopt and provide foster care," he said. "We are not denying children a loving home. We are doing the opposite. We are ensuring there will be a loving home."

The bills would, though, allow agencies to turn away potential adoptive parents, opponents said.

"We should not be turning away willing and capable families willing to help a child in need," Emily Dievendorf, managing director of Equality Michigan, told the committee.

"Currently, faith based agencies are denying adoptions for a variety of reasons, including sexual orientation," Jay Kaplan, staff attorney for the American Civil Liberties Union-Michigan LGBT Project, though he could not, when asked by committee members, list any cases where the group had filed complaints based on such discrimination.

The bills, he said, would allow faith-based agencies to be exempt from both state civil rights laws and requirements that they act in the best interests of the child in favor of supporting their religious beliefs.

"No public funds should go to a supposed welfare agency that ignores the best interests of the child," said Nicolette Siragusa, pastor of the First Congregational United Church of Christ in Grand Ledge.

Much of the opposition came from gay rights groups, but some also raised concerns that agencies would turn away couples of other faiths as well.

"I don't believe we should be sending people on a mad search to find an agency that won't discriminate against them," Ms. Dievendorf said.

Mr. Blacquiere acknowledged his agency would not directly serve a Muslim family.

"We would work with the network of agencies we work with," he said, likely finding a Muslim agency to help that family.

Mr. Blacquiere said amendments were being developed to require development of such networks of providers to ensure all potential adoptive families are served.

Mr. Kurtz expected the bills to come up for additional discussion and potential movement in the coming weeks.

Bills Addressing Unemployment Agency Fraud, Compliance In House Commerce

A package of bills designed to bring the Unemployment Insurance Agency into compliance with federal standards and to properly handle fraudulent claims were discussed in the House Commerce Committee on Wednesday.

The bills (HB 4949, HB 4950, HB 4951, HB 4952, HB 4953 and HB 4954) did receive some criticism from members of the committee.

The more controversial piece of the package is Rep. Ken Goike's (R-Ray Township) bill, HB 4952, that would end a person's unemployment benefits if he or she failed a prospective employer's drug test.

Delaney McKinley, director of human resource policy for the Michigan Manufacturers Association, said a condition of receiving unemployment benefits is the person must be looking for suitable work, and cannot refuse that work.

"If there is a drug test required as a condition of that employment, if they refuse to take it or they failed it, they are essentially refusing that job," she said.

Ms. McKinley said the bill does not require a prospective employer to give a drug test, and doesn't require the prospective employer to even report the failure.

Tim Hughes, with the United Auto Workers, said in written testimony that the U.S. Department of Labor has not ruled on state legislation linking pre-employment drug tests to refusal of suitable work, but "it is certainly possible that they could find Michigan out of compliance with federal law under the terms of this legislation."

The first bill (HB 4949) would give the Unemployment Insurance Agency the ability to handle fraud and the improper payment of benefits. The agency would be able to receive payments for improper and fraudulent benefits from the moment a person began receiving the benefit.

Under current law, the agency receives the repayment from the time it was notified.

Some members were concerned the bill would force some unemployment claimants to pay for months of benefits that they cannot afford because of a mistake in the system or an appellate decision.

Rep. Jeff Farrington (R-Utica) said he once had an employee who was forced to pay 9 months of unemployment benefits, that the person could not afford, back to the agency through no fault of his own.

Rep. Vicki Barnett (D-Farmington Hills) and Rep. Jim Townsend (D-Royal Oak) raised the same issue with the bill.

Wendy Block, with the Michigan Chamber of Commerce, said she would be willing to look at other language to better separate a mistake made concerning benefits from actual fraudulent activity. But she said it is fair for the money to go back to the employer either way.

"It's not the claimant's money," she said. "At the end of the day it is employers' tax dollars."

Mr. Townsend also was concerned that the first bill could potentially require unemployed persons to pay back money they could not afford to the agency, but HB 4950 allows employers four chances, or 2 percent of their unemployment requests, to fail to provide information to the agency before the employer is penalized.

The bill specifies when an employer or employer's agent has a pattern of failing to respond with timely or adequate information to the agency, the employer would not be credited the funds it sent out for benefits.

Mr. Hughes said the bill allows employers "free passes" for not providing timely and accurate information, and also provides that unemployed workers have to pay back benefits received because of employers violating the law.

Rep. Frank Foster (R-Petoskey), chair of the committee, said there would be another meeting next week on the issue, and more meetings if needed to allow more testimony. The bills need to be in law by October 21 to conform to the federal government's standards.

The other bills in the package would specify funds recovered by the agency because of fraud on behalf of the employer or employee would be credited no less than 15 percent into the Unemployment Trust Fund, which helps ensure sustainability of the program (HB 4951). This is to comply with federal standards and is accompanied by HB 4954, which amends complementary sections in the law. HB 4953 is a complement to HB 4950.

Bentivolio Leading In Early Poll

If the election was today, U.S. Rep. Kerry Bentivolio would win renomination from Republicans in his 11th U.S. House District, a Murray Communications-Portable Insights-Combat Data poll released Wednesday said.

But money could turn those numbers, pollsters said.

Of 717 likely Republican voters, Mr. Bentivolio (R-Milford) led challenger David Trott 59.55-40.45. That lead was higher (62.47-37.53) among women than among men.

The automated poll had an error margin of 3.66 percentage points.

The key takeaway, though, is the two are close enough for Mr. Trott to make up the gap with enough spending. "Bentivolio can hold this seat. Republican primary voters seem to be willing to give him a chance. But, if he doesn't raise enough money to be competitive with Trott, I suspect this 19% margin will begin to evaporate," Christopher Mark of Portable Insights said in a statement.

Patrick Murray of Murray Communications and Brian Bellgowan of Combat Data aired respective surprise over Mr. Bentivolio's lead, given his recent comments in the media, and Mr. Trott's support given he has not yet begun campaigning.

Mr. Bentivolio got national attention for talking about his desire to impeach President Barack Obama and has gotten some bad publicity for showing interest in holding a hearing on a debunked, much-mocked conspiracy called "Chem Trails" whose believers think the government is putting toxic chemicals into jet contrails to conduct experiments on the public.

Young Couple Charged In Trooper Slaying

19-year-old Eric Knysz shot and killed State Police Trooper Paul Butterfield, and Mr. Knysz's 20-year-old pregnant wife Sarah Knysz aided his getaway afterward, prosecutors charged Wednesday in formally accusing the pair in Mr. Butterfield's death.

The Mason County Prosecutor's Office authorized charges against Mr. Knysz, a Luther resident, of homicide-murder of peace officer, weapons-felony firearm for the possession of a firearm during the commission of a murder of a peace officer, carrying a concealed weapon and unlawful driving away of an automobile.

The murder count is punishable by life in prison without possibility of parole; the weapons charge punishable by two years served consecutively with the life sentence; the CCW charge punishable by up to five years in prison, a $2,500 fine, or both; and the driving away charge punishable by up to five years in prison. Prosecutors also notified Mr. Knysz of his status as a habitual offender/second felony offense that would multiply the maximum penalties by 1.5.

Mr. Knysz was shot by a State Police trooper at a gas station/convenience store, reportedly in the leg with a non-life threatening injury, and will be arraigned once he is discharged from the hospital and returned to Mason County. He allegedly shot Mr. Butterfield during a traffic stop in Sherman Township in Mason County.

Ms. Knysz was arraigned Wednesday at the 79th District Court in Ludington on a charge of accessory after the fact to the murder of Mr. Butterfield, punishable by up to five years in prison, a $10,000 fine, or both; and unlawful driving away of an automobile, a felony punishable by up to five years in prison.

Magistrate Patricia Baker set bond for Ms. Knysz at $250,000 cash or surety. Ms. Knysz was remanded to the Mason County Jail pending the posting of that bond and a September 25 preliminary examination.

Mason County Prosecutor Paul Spaniola said in a statement that Manistee County Prosecutor Ford Stone is reviewing the case for crimes the Knyszs might have committed in Manistee County, where they were caught. Mr. Spaniola said Lake County Prosecutor Craig Cooper also is exploring possible charges in his jurisdiction.

The investigation remains ongoing. State Police spokesperson Shanon Banner said she could not disclose any new information about what led to Mr. Butterfield pulling over the Knyszs, what might have led to Mr. Knysz allegedly shooting Mr. Butterfield and what other criminal activity the Knyszs might have committed besides the shooting.

The Muskegon Chronicle reported that Mr. Knysz had a lengthy criminal record, but no outstanding arrest warrants.

Poll Shows Snyder Improving Against Schauer; Peters, Land Tied

Governor Rick Snyder has moved out to a lead against his likely Democratic opponent, former U.S. Rep. Mark Schauer, in a new poll after previous surveys showed the pair in a statistical tie.

The survey from EPIC/MRA, released to the Detroit Free Press, put Mr. Snyder at 44 percent and Mr. Schauer at 36 percent. That compares to a 39-39 tie from an EPIC/MRA poll in May and an April poll from the same firm that had Mr. Schauer at 39 percent and Mr. Snyder at 38 percent.

The live operator poll of likely voters was conducted Sunday through Tuesday and had an error margin of plus or minus 4 percentage points.

Mr. Schauer still remains unknown to most voters. But notably, Mr. Snyder's favorability and job approval ratings have improved considerably since May, during which time he pushed hard for Medicaid expansion and authorized Detroit to file for bankruptcy.

In May, 45 percent said they had a favorable impression of Mr. Snyder compared to 44 percent unfavorable. Now Mr. Snyder is at 49 percent favorable, 38 percent unfavorable. On job approval, Mr. Snyder was at 44 percent positive, 54 percent negative. That is improved from a 38-58 spread in May.

Meanwhile, EPIC/MRA continues to show the U.S. Senate race close between the presumptive Democratic nominee, U.S. Rep. Gary Peters of Bloomfield Township, and the lone declared Republican candidate, former Secretary of State Terri Land. Mr. Peters had 38 percent to 37 percent for Ms. Land.

Supreme Court Issues Order On Translation Services In Courts

In a move it said will help assure access to justice to Michigan residents who have limited English-speaking skills, the Supreme Court unveiled an order Wednesday requiring all courts in the state to provide interpreters for those individuals.

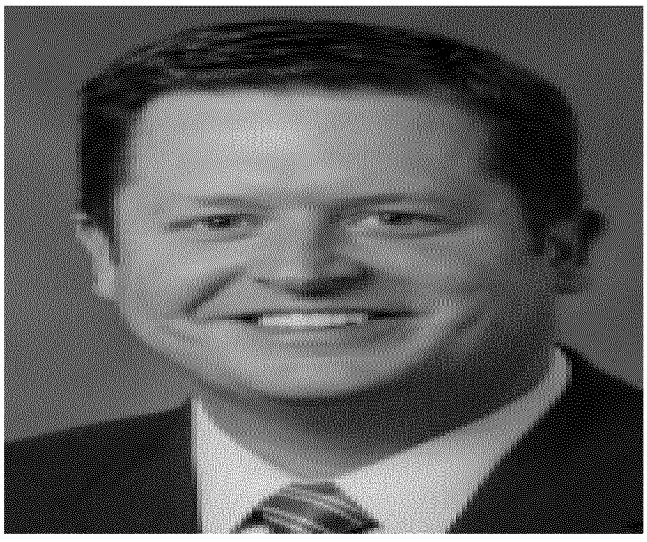
Under the order, persons who can afford translation services will be charged for those services, while lower-income individuals will not.

In a press conference, Chief Justice Robert Young Jr. and Justice Bridget McCormack said the rule would help "every person, every party" have access to the court system. That would include situations such as domestic abuse cases where a spouse needs to request a personal protection order, but has difficulty speaking English.

That would prevent, Mr. Young said, a situation of a judge saying, "Please bring your husband in to translate for you. That would be a problem."

The order was not unanimous. Justice Stephen Markman dissented, arguing the state was effectively being coerced into creating the rule by the U.S. Department of Justice or face the prospect of the state losing federal funds. "The rules being adopted today under the coercive circumstances created by the (Department of Justice) are both unnecessary and ill-advised," Mr. Markman said.

But in the press conference, Mr. Young said former Justice Marilyn Kelly began working on the issue before the federal government sent a letter to all state supreme courts calling on those courts to help assist persons officially designated limited-English-proficient.



Justice Bridget McCormack discusses the order while Chief Justice Robert Young Jr. listens.

Already a number of counties provide translation service and assistance to persons with actions before the courts, the two justices said, and they praised Wayne County particularly.

But not all counties provide such service, they said, and under the rules and order issued, all the courts must prepare a language access plan as a local administrative order by December 11.

Those affected by the order will be anyone with legal decision-making authority, which could include a parent in juvenile matters. The rules and order also deal with any trial, hearing or appearance before any judge, magistrate, referee or other hearing officer.

The rules require the courts to use certified interpreters for limited English participants. If a certified translator is not available, the court will then have to assess whether the proceeding should be delayed or if the court should use a qualified translator.

Mr. Young and Ms. McCormack also said technology could assist a court by accessing a translator online or by telephone.

Mr. Young said he was unaware of any case where lack of access to a translator had been an issue in an appeal. "But that is not a reason not to act," Mr. Young said.

In his dissent, Mr. Markman said the federal "demands" were "staggering," and effectively would allow a "Gulf state emir or a South American multi-millionaire businessman" who may choose to file a lawsuit have access to free translation services.

Theoretically, he argued, the Supreme Court would also have to have translators available for the court's learning center.

And, Mr. Markman said, the federal government fails to show how the current system has failed to ensure persons have access to justice if they have limited English skills.

Young: Working Hard To Put Aside Past
